WOMAN WITNESS KEPT SECRET IN LINDBERGH CASE

Report Is That She Knows What Hauptmann Did With Ransom Money Not Yet Recovered.

BRONX PROSECUTOR HAS QUESTIONED HER

Rungs Like Those in Ladder Used in Kidnaping Said to Have Been Found in Prisoner's Home.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—District Attorney Samuel J. Foley of the Bronx disclosed late today he had been questioning a woman whom he described as a "very important witness" in connection with the indictment of Bruno Richard Hauptmann on a charge of extorting the Lindbergh ransom money.

He would not disclose her name or the time at which he examined her.

"She came and went as quietly as Lindbergh and nobody knew anything about her," he said. Asked why the woman had not been summoned to testify before the grand jury, he replied: "I will not state the reason."

He said he was planning to save her testimony for Hauptmann's trial, "but it is not the principal reason."

"This is one thing that will not leak out," he added.

The Daily News says it has learned the witness is a young woman who has knowledge of Hauptmann's disposition of the ransom money not yet recovered. The paper says a former Bronx policeman, a friend of Hauptmann's, is being sought by police as a result of her disclosures.

Whether the woman is the "mysterious Mary" who is being sought for questioning by Department of Justice agents has not been learned.

The News also said two ladder rungs were discovered Friday night in Hauptmann's basement underneath a pile of debris by a Department of Justice agent and two policemen. The rungs were said to be of the same kind of wood and to resemble otherwise the rungs in the ladder down which the kidnaped Lindbergh baby was carried. They are being analyzed, the News says.

Doctor Examines Prisoner.

Dr. Thurstown H. Dexter, family physician of Hauptmann's attorney, examined the prisoner late in the day. Dr. Dexter had examined Hauptmann last Tuesday. No mental test was involved.

The District Attorney said he had no idea where the unrecovered portion of the ransom money was.

"At present the only man against whom we have sufficient evidence to act in indictments is Hauptmann," he continued. "We have no new leads. We have no information that might tend to identify anyone as an accomplice."

Three alienists will examine Hauptmann next week.

Foley said one physician already had examined the prisoner for the State and he believed another had done so for the defense.

One of the psychiatrists, Foley said, will be chosen by him, a second by New Jersey authorities, and the third by James M. Fawcett, Hauptmann's attorney.

No One Identified by "Jafsie."

Foley said that Dr. John F. Condon has not identified anyone as the "John" to whom he handed the $50,000 ransom in small bills in a Bronx cemetery.

"Are you looking for such a man?" Foley was asked. "No," he replied.

Joseph Bowman, who some officials said resembled "Jafsie's" description of "John" was questioned in Chicago but Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan announced there he could find nothing tangible to connect him with the case.

Bowman was arrested last night with a woman who said she was Goldie Ferris. She said she was Bowman's wife. Although no charges were placed against him, Bowman was held at the Chicago Detective Bureau after the questioning.

"We have nothing to link this man to the Lindbergh kidnaping except the anonymous tip received last night," Sullivan said, "and that might have been intended to embarrass him. It may have been pure spite work."

Arrangements for Trial.

Foley made preliminary arrangements for trying Hauptmann in the Bronx on the extortion charge. Asked if the prisoner would go on trial before any extradition move by New Jersey authorities, Foley re-

Federal Relief College Opens Here Tomorrow

300 Students Will Be Enrolled in Freshman Courses to Be Taught by 13 Instructors.

A junior college, maintained by FERA funds and offering freshman courses for deserving high school graduates unable to attend a regular institution, will begin classes for 300 students tomorrow at the Downtown Y. M. C. A., Fifteenth and Locust streets.

About 150 boys and girls from St. Louis and St. Louis County high schools have enrolled since Friday and an equal number will be enrolled tomorrow and Tuesday. A faculty of 13 instructors, most of whom hold degrees of doctor of philosophy, has been recruited. Washington and St. Louis Universities will be invited each to assign one instructor to serve on the faculty.

The school is under the joint direction of the Board of Education, State Superintendent of Schools, the Missouri Relief and Reconstruction Commission and the local Y. M. C. A. Paul E. Williams, educational director of the latter organization, will have direct administrative charge and Philip J. Hickey of the St. Louis school system will represent the Board of Education in operation of the college.

The Y. M. C. A. is donating classrooms and laboratories, as well as the services of Williams. Books will be provided by the Board of Education from the supply at Harris Teachers' College, which is not now offering freshman courses. Facilities at the Central Library also will be at the disposal of the school.

Selection of students is being made on a basis of scholarship, as shown by their high school records, and need.

Final examinations will be supervised by the extension department of the University of Missouri and credits in the courses will be recorded there, making students who successfully complete their studies eligible for entrance to the sophomore year at any university. Classes are to be held from 9 a. m. to 3:30 p. m., and no part time students will be accepted. About 50 students are to be accepted from county high schools.

Courses to be offered include English, history of civilization, physics, chemistry, biology, German, French, Spanish, economics, algebra, trigonometry and physical education. A $3 locker fee for enrollment in the latter course will be the only payment required of students. Arrangements have been made at the Y. W. C. A., 1411 Locust street, to handle physical education courses for girl students.

A similar freshman course for 100 Negro boys and girls is being offered at Stowe Teachers' College, where classes also are to begin tomorrow.

BODIES OF TWO CHANCELLORS IN TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Sept. 29.—The exhumed bodies of the late Chancellors Ignaz Seipel and Engelbert Dollfuss, in new coffins of bronze, were transferred tonight to the new Seipel-Dollfuss Memorial Church. The memorial procession was along a five-mile route through torch-lighted streets, following impressive rites at St. Stephen's Cathedral.

The foundation stone of the new memorial was laid a year ago by Dollfuss himself.

Presence of mounted machine-guns and guards around the Cathedral imparted a grim aspect to the ceremonies.

After Cardinal Innitzer had announced a brief mass for the dead, church bells tolled a farewell to Austria's post-war chancellors.

The Cabinet and the Diplomatic Corps, including American Minister George S. Messersmith, participated in the ceremonies.

Led by mounted soldiers, with a large bronze crucifix at their head, the double funeral cortege proceeded slowly through the streets, whose lights had been darkened. Burning candles were in the windows of all the houses along the route.

After a consecration service at the Memorial Church, the two bodies were laid in the crypt of the edifice while Cardinal Innitzer pronounced a final benediction.

TWO MEN SHOT DEAD BY KANSAS CITY POLICE

Patrolman Wounded After Shooting Suspected Robber While Night Watchman Kills Other.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 29.—Two men were killed and a policeman was seriously wounded tonight when the men were surprised in what was thought to be an attempted robbery.

One of the men killed, identified by police as Robert Wilson, 26 years old, a Kansas ex-convict was killed by Frank Brown, policeman, who followed the men into a meat plant near police headquarters.

The other man killed, unidentified, was killed by a night watchman.

KAYE DON, BRITISH RACER, SENT TO JAIL FOR KILLING

By the Associated Press.

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man, Sept. 29.—Kaye Don famous British racing driver, today lost a court fight to avoid going to jail for four months to serve a sentence imposed on his conviction of manslaughter in the death of his mechanic, Frank Taylor.

A local court dismissed his appeal against the sentence after a three-day hearing, and a few hours later upheld the sentence as imposed, refusing to grant a reduction.

Taylor was killed while riding with Don, who was driving, in a midnight test of a new racing car. Their car overturned on a narrow road, and Don himself was seriously hurt.

Don was taken to prison during the afternoon.

Woman Buying Bag Attracts Six Policemen, Crowd of 500.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—A woman customer casually offered a $10 gold certificate in payment for a cloth bag today. Within five minutes three police cars with four detectives and two patrolmen swept up to the store. A curious crowd of 500 men and women tried to peer through the windows.

The startled woman stammered that the certificate was part of "a few dollars" she had saved. She telephoned her husband to come at once, that she was in trouble. Detectives eagerly checked the bill with a list of the Lindbergh ransom notes—and quickly lost interest.

JUDGE ATWOOD SAYS NEW RULES WILL AID BAR

"Designed to Surmount Increasing Difficulties Which Must Be Met If Profession Is to Live."

SPEAKS AT MEETING OF STATE GROUP

Retiring Member of Supreme Court Elected Head of Association to Succeed Jesse W. Barrett

Rules for regulation of the practice of law in Missouri which become effective Nov. 1 are "designed to surmount increasing difficulties which must be met if the bar is to live," Supreme Court Justice Frank E. Atwood told the Missouri Bar Association which elected him president yesterday, at a dinner at Hotel Statler last night marking the close of its fifty-fourth annual convention.

The rules, drafted by a committee of 11 lawyers, headed by former Gov. Henry S. Caulfield, and adopted by the Spreme Court, "are not a radical experiment or even a departure from the experience, leaning and traditions of our bar," Judge Atwood declared.

"They are the outgrowth of planning by plain, practical men to surmount increasing difficulties that must be met and conquered if the bar is to live.

Objective of Rules.

"The great danger is that we ourselves may expect too much for too little of these rules through a lack of sympathetic understanding of their true objective. Whatever benefits the future may hold for an integrated bar, and I believe there are many, it should be clearly understood that these rules of the court do not constitute bar inegration by judicial order as that term is generally understood.

"Nothing could be more harmful than a widespread notion that the Supreme Court is taking over the manifold responsibilities and activities of the bar association," Judge Atwood went on. "Think how sterile and somber even this annual meeting of lawyers would be if held in the cloistered, not to say stuffy, atmosphere of Judges.

"They crave and have a right to expect the interest and active support of the bar in this effort to promote the administration of justice, but the bar must act and speak through its associations, 'the organs of its common will,' and they must continue to function even more aggressively and efficiently than in the past."

Hague Court Member Speaks.

Following Judge Atwood, Dr. Manley O. Hudson, member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague, and Bemis Professor of International Law in the Harvard Law School, discussed international law. Dr. Hudson is a former St. Louisan and a former member of the faculty of the University of Missouri.

"In 15 years," he said, "our international legislation has been completely revamped. In its volume and in its content the world has leaped forward a whole century."

Progress also had been made, Dr. Hudson continued, in efforts to proscribe war and develop adequate agencies for the settlement of international disputes.

"These are the principal lines of our advance," he said. "I think it is not over-sanguine for me to say that our generation is building on firm foundations a new international law and that one may hope that in this regard the twentieth century will be served far more adequately than the nineteenth.

"The law which has grown up through the centuries could no more meet the needs of the modern world than could the Missouri statutes of 1845 be substituted for the Revised Statutes of 1929. In this field I can speak of progress without any qualification.

"Useful But Inadequate."

"In 1914," Dr. Hudson said in discussing settlement of international disputes, "we had the Permanent Court of Arbitration and we nave it today. As a member of that body I appreciate its usefulness but I recognize its utter inadequacy.

"Our generation has succeeded in placing by its side the new Permanent Court of International Justice—the World Court—and I think the experience of these 12 years since the creation of the World Court cannot fail to impress any competent observer with the importance of the role which it is destined to play.

"Its more than 60 judgments and opinions constitute a new store of

ODEON TO BE MADE THEATER FOR NEGROES

The Odeon Theater, for more than 30 years the center of musical activities in St. Louis, has been leased to the Lincoln Amusement Co., which will convert it into a theater for Negroes, showing both moving pictures and vaudeville.

Crittenden E. Clark, Negro attorney and president of the Lincoln Co., said the theater would be opened in about a month. The company also has leased the office space and halls in the building and will sublease the offices for use by Negro doctors and lawyers and the halls for Negro lodges.

Clark said a committee of Negroes had gone to the managers of first run moving picture houses in the city in an attempt to get them to admit Negroes, before leasing the Odeon.

The Odeon became obsolete as a concert hall when the Municipal Auditorium was completed last spring. The Symphony Society concerts, the series of grand operas, and other individual concerts will all be held in the Auditorium's opera house this season.

Built before the World's Fair, the Odeon has been the home of the symphony concerts from the beginning. All of the noted musicians and singers who came to St. Louis have played or sung on its stage.

Henri Chouteau, its present owner, bought the building and the ground in 1922 for $310,000 from James Wilson, president of the Wilson Stove Co. The building, at 1042 North Grand boulevard, is next to St. Alphonsus (Rock) Catholic Church. The old Central High School formerly stood just south of it.

Clark said Chouteau would renovate the building and install sound equipment for moving pictures.

Dr. Kelley's Story Unshaken On Cross-Examination That Dwells on Identifying Captors

Witness Says Attorney Advised Him to Identify No One Except Under Oath or Before Grand Jury.

Cross-examination of Dr. Kelley took the last hour and a half of the morning session, and the first hour and 10 minutes of the afternoon session, in yesterday's hearing of the Rosegrant case. His time under questioning by Thomas J. Rowe Jr., of defense counsel, was thus only five minutes less than the time of his direct testimony, which had been two hours and 45 minutes.

Rowe began by asking Dr. Kelley the date on which he inspected the Johnson farm cabin in St. Charles County, identified by him as the first place of his eight-day captivity, in company with Sheriff Deuser and party. The witness did not recall precisely, saying: "I wasn't interested in the date."

"Did you not state to Roy Alexander of the Post-Dispatch on that occasion that you were not sure it was the place where you were held but that it was very like it?"

"I don't remember. It was—"

"Answer yes or no," Rowe demanded, adding "No explanation."

"The witness has answered," Associate Prosecuting Attorney Wolfe rejoined. "He says he doesn't remember."

"On the way to John Rogers' house after you were found did you not say you could not identify anyone connected with the kidnaping?"

"No, I did not," replied Dr. Kelley.

Those at Rogers' House.

"Who was at Rogers' house when you got there?"

"Only myself and Mr. Rogers. Later other Post-Dispatch men came—Mr. Reese, Mr. Goldstein, Mr. Alexander, Mr. Bovard. Mr. Howard, a shorthand reporter, also came."

"At Mr. Rogers' house did you tell these men you could describe any of the kidnapers?"

"I didn't tell them anything about detailed descriptions."

Rowe rephrased the same question and the witness replied, "Not that I remember."

"Is your memory defective?" Rowe asked.

"I think it is an average memory," the witness replied coolly. "I have never had a psychological test made. I said I had no recollection at that time. I was concerned——"

Exchange by Attorneys.

Rowe objected to this line of testimony and Prosecuting Attorney Anderson rejoined "If your honor please, he is asking trick questions and when the witness tries to explain he shuts him up."

Rowe demanded that the prosecutor be reprimanded for his observation but Judge Nolte simply enjoined the witness to answer the questions, adding "the Court will be the judge of their competency."

"Did you state you could not identify any of the kidnapers?" Rowe resumed. "I can't answer that question because I have no recollection."

"Well, was that account of your captivity a truthful one?"

"The account was truthful."

"Then what you said was the truth?" Before the witness could answer the Court ruled out the question as repetitious.

Conversation with Coakley.

Rowe asked the witness where he was taken from Rogers' home, and the reply was that he was taken to the apartment of Mr. Powell in Hampden Hall, and that Powell, W. D. Orthwein, Sam W. Fordyce, Bradford Shinkle and two or three police officers, one of them Lieut. Coakley, were there. Asked as to his conversation with Lieut. Coakley, Dr. Kelley said:

"He said he was glad I was back, that they had spent a great deal of time looking for me, and he hoped I had not been mistreated."

"Isn't it a fact," Rowe demanded, "that Coakley asked if you could identify any of the men who had held you and you said you could not?"

"I do not remember," was the reply.

"You knew Coakley was a police officer?" "I presumed so."

"Didn't he show you his authority?" "No."

"But you knew he was trying to find out who had held you captive?"

"On the contrary," said Dr. Kelley, "I thought he might be there to escort me home — everybody seemed so concerned about me."

Asked Rogers to Phone Wife.

"But you never telephoned to your wife?" Dr. Kelley began an explanation, and was told to answer the question directly. "I never phoned her at any time," was the reply.

"You never sent her any word?" "I did send her word—I asked Mr. Rogers to phone her, so as not to disturb her and not disturb the routine of the household."

Rowe asked if Dr. Kelley had not

PREVIOUSLY SAID ROSEGRANT AND M'DONALD WERE OTHERS HE SAW

Unshaken by Cross-Examination, Physician, in Nearly Six Hours of Questioning, Gives Details of His Abduction and Release.

W. D. ORTHWEIN II ONLY OTHER WITNESS

T. Preston Sultan, Who Saw Doctor Forced Into Auto, and Sara Jones, Former Employe of Fiedler, to Take Stand Tomorrow.

With the detailed story of his abduction unshaken in any particular by more than two and a half hours of cross examination, Dr. Isaac D. Kelley yesterday afternoon completed his testimony in the trial at Clayton of Angelo Rosegrant, charged with kidnaping him for ransom.

The high point in his testimony for the day was reached when he identified Bart Davit, one of the three defendants in the case still awaiting trial, as one of his kidnapers. He testified that while held by the kidnapers in a house on the East Side in late April, 1931, he looked through an open door and saw Davit in the next room, manipulating the dial of a radio.

Identified Others Earlier.

Previously the prosecuting witness had identified two others of the defendants as kidnapers. He testified he saw Rosegrant passing an open door during the time he was held by the kidnapers on the East Side. He identified Felix Francis McDonald, Jefferson City convict, as the man who seized him the night of April 30, 1931, and as one of his guards during his capitivity, and added that on one occasion McDonald threatened to do him great bodily harm.

On cross-examination, when counsel sought unsuccessfully to make him admit he had previously said he could identify no one, he testified he had been advised by his lawyer, the late William Baer, "that I should not identify anyone except under oath or before a grand jury."

There was an implied distinction in his testimony between his ability to describe his abductors, on the one hand, and his ability to identify them upon confronting them, on the other. No one suspected of the crime was under arrest for his inspection immediately after the kidnaping, and no suspect was ever "shown up" to him by the police until last February, when the present defendants were arrested.

Punched Holes in Blindfold.

Dr. Kelley also was cross-examined closely about his statement that he had punched holes in the taped goggles with his tie pin, and had thus obtained a limited field of vision for himself. He testified that the first time he had mentioned this was before the county grand jury.

"Did someone suggest that to you?" he was asked by Thomas J. Rowe Jr., of defense counsel. "No," was his emphatic reply, "I had been waiting for the moment for three years."

As he testified, he was wearing the tiepin he had used while in the hands of the kidnapers. It was finally taken from him by his abductors and inclosed in the first ransom note sent to his family, as proof that the note was from the kidnapers.

Dr. Kelley also testified that the St. Charles County farm shack of John C. Johnson, Negro state's witness who was murdered by machine gunners last May, was the house in which he first was held in captivity for ransom.

When the physician was excused he had completed almost six hours of testimony, including an hour and 45 minutes Friday afternoon when he began his story. A courtroom crowd which jammed the seats, occupied every available foot of standing room and overflowed into the corridor, followed him intently during his direct testimony.

In the rambling cross-examination which followed, interest of the spectators appeared to diminish and a few left the room.

The only other witness yesterday was William D. Orthwein II, whose wife is a sister of Mrs. Kelley. Excused Friday after he had begun his testimony, he was recalled after Dr. Kelley had completed his testimony. Defense counsel completed his cross-examination at 4:05 and Judge Nolte then adjourned court until 9:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Sixth Day of Trial.

Thus ended the sixth day of the trial, of which three days were devoeed to the selection of a jury, three to taking of evidence.

Prosecuting Attorney Anderson announced that the first witness tomorrow would be T. Preston Sultan, wartime overseas flyer, who witnessed the kidnaping of Dr. Kelley without realizing he had seen an abduction until he read of it next afternoon. He will be followed by Mrs. Sara E. Jones, former employe of the recreation parlor of Adolph Fieldler at Olive Street and North and South roads, where Fiedler testified the kidnaping plot was laid.

Heard Inquiry About "Goldie."

Upon resuming the witness stand at 9:40 a. m., Dr. Kelley was taken back by Prosecuting Attorney Anderson to his closing statement of Friday. This was that, at his third place of imprisonment, on the East Side, he heard a caller, a man, ask where "Goldie" was. He said the man inside the house said, in reply, that "Goldie" and a man, whose name the witness did not recall, had "gone to the slough."

Dr. Kelley repeated this statement yesterday. The State has brought out, in the testimony of Adolph Fiedler, who says he was the kidnapers' confidant, a statement that Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, a defendant in the Kelley case, was known as "Goldie."

'About that time," Dr. Kelley continued, "I was told definitely that I was to go home. They had set the time for my departure as 11 o'clock. I believed there was something to this." The last statement, as to his belief, was struck out.

"There was a great bustle around the house," the witness related. "People in the house were walking to and fro. I asked if I might clean up and shave, as I had been allowed to do once before. I was shown to a bathroom, where there were razor and towels and other needed articles, and I began making preparations for my departure.

Saw Davit Dialing Radio.

"In this room where I was confined there was a stove—I took it to be in the southwest corner. I was seated so that I could look to the left around the stove into a room adjoining. I could see through a door there. There was something hanging in the door, and I could see that there was a radio in the next room.

"I noticed that there was apparently preparation for the departure of the persons who were there. There had been no lights in the room previously but they were on now.

"I saw a man manipulating the dial of this radio."

"Did you see the man since?" he was asked.

"Yes, I saw him in the shadow box."

"Who was he?"

"Bart Davit."

Continuing, Dr. Kelley said: "He was the same man I saw playing the radio several times.

"There was a clock on the opposite wall from the stove, and I kept watching it, since I had been told I was to go home at 11 o'clock. Again there was a knock and I was told to put on the goggles. I heard a man pass through the room and into the adjoining room. There was a whispered conversation, and then he left. The clock reached 11. The house had slowed down. There seemed to be no preparation to leave. At 10 after 11 I called to the next room and asked why, if we were going to leave, hadn't we started?

"I was told, 'No, the plans had been changed. There would be no departure that night, I had better settle down, tomorrow night probably would be definite.'

"I was told to go into the next room, where there was a bed, and did so. I lay down and slept fitfully from time to time."

The witness raised his voice and spoke rapidly as he continued: "I don't know how long I had slept when suddenly I was awakened. Someone yelled at me and told me to 'get up right away, get dressed, you are going home.'

"But I'd been told that so many times," Dr. Kelley explained in lower tones, "that was a stock phrase around there—'You are going home'—and I'd heard it so often that I turned over and said, 'Oh, tell me another.'

Release Finally Under Way.

"Just as I was getting settled comfortably, the man came to the side of the bed, shook me and repeated, 'Get up, you are going home, put on your things.' My things consisted of a raincoat and a derby hat, which I had laid aside on the bed.

"I started to get up when I was stood suddenly on my feet and with no ceremony, I was pushed outside to a car. Two men got in beside me. We started off at what seemed high speed.

"But I must go back for a moment," Dr. Kelley explained to the jury. "The man who awakened me said, 'You are going home and you are going to be turned over to John Rogers of the Post-Dispatch. Do everything he says, because he was the only man in St. Louis who has done anything for you."

"In the car," the witness continued, "another man said, 'You are going to be turned over to John Rogers of the Post-Dispatch; do exactly what he tells you.' Then the car stopped.

Pushed Out of Auto.

"I was pushed out and heard the car speed away. I stood in silence. This seemed extraordinary. It seemed perhaps I really was going home after all.

"I stood there a few minutes, and then put my hand in my pocket and found a package of cigarettes. I pulled one out and struck a match to light it—and discovered that I was still blindfolded. I raised the goggles and saw the night around me. I seemed to be staring at a blank countryside. I found another match and lighted the cigarette, and I wheeled slowly and saw that I was standing in front of a deserted gasoline filling station.

"A pair of automobile headlights were coming toward me. A man got out and approached and we spoke simultaneously. I said, 'Are you John Rogers of the Post-Dispatch?' He asked, 'Are you Dr. Kelley?' He replied, 'Yes,' and I said 'Yes; then I am really going home.'"

Dr. Kelley related that when he got into an (Rogers') automobile he inquired whether any ransom had been paid for his release.

Went to Rogers' House.

"He (Rogers) said no ransom was paid. This man (Rogers) informed me he would drive me to St. Louis and took me over the Municipal Bridge. He said, 'I'm going to take you to my house, for two reasons, first, so that you can notify your family, and second, so that you can tell me the details of your incarceration.'"

"Both these ideas were acceptable to me," Dr. Kelley continued, but this was struck out on objection by defense counsel. Then Dr. Kelley said, "I consented." That also was struck out.

"I didn't want to be unduly hasty about going home," Dr. Kelley resumed. "I didn't want to shock my family. I told this man I would be glad to do anything he suggested, because I had been informed he was the only one who could do anything for me.

"I went to Rogers' home, and there told of the events of my incarceration. I was informed that instead of going straight home I was to go to an apartment where my brother-in-law, Mr. Orthwein, had arranged to meet me and arrange for my return to my family.

"I was taken to the Hampden Court (Hampden Hall) Apartments and when we got there, there were two or three friends gathered to meet me, several police officers and Mr. Orthwein. I talked with them for a while and was told that preparations were being made for me to go home, that my wife had been apprised of my homecoming."

Dr. Kelley said that when he reached his home, he entered through the back door, to avoid a crowd he expected would be at the front.

Then he was asked about the first note he had written, the one intended to reassure his wife. "I have never seen anybody who received it," Dr. Kelley said.

Another ransom note was shown to him, and Dr. Kelley said, "This is the second note, in fact the third I wrote, but the second to be delivered. This was written in the house where I was held for three days, and where I was shown a machine gun."

Shortly before that note was written, he said, one of his captors asked for his tiepin, which Dr. Kelley had previously testified he had used to make small holes in the tape which covered the goggles he was required to wear as a blindfold. He had secreted the pin in his undershirt, but gave it to the man who asked for it.

"A little later I was told the reason for the request for the pin," Dr. Kelley continued. "It was to be used as an identification to go with the ransom note I was to write shortly. I never saw the pin again until I got home." He started to add to this statement, apparently to explain how the pin got to his home, but was stopped by objections of defense counsel.

Dr. Kelley testified that the tiepin he was wearing in court was the one he had while in the hands of the kidnapers. It was inclosed with the kidnapers' first ransom note to the family as proof that the note was from the kidnapers.

Identified Copy of Note.

Dr. Kelley identified a photographic copy of one of the ransom notes and was asked about his automobile, in which he went to the scene of his abduction. He said it was a Lincoln coupe, with an arrangement which turned a light on and off by opening or closing the door. He was asked as to the color of hair of the man who ordered him into the car for the abduction, and said he did not see his hair, but that he wore a soft slouch hat.

In answer to questions, Dr. Kelley said he had met Adolph Fiedler only since Fiedler became a witness in the case, and that he had no acquaintance with John T. Rogers, Post-Dispatch reporter, "until I met him on the roadside that morning."

Visit to Johnson's House.

Questioned about his visits, last spring, to the home of John C. Johnson, Negro farmer, in St. Charles County, the place where he was first held in captivity, Dr. Kelley told of the visit, on which Prosecutor Anderson and newspaper reporters accompanied him. He identified photographs of the exterior and interior of the house. Asked as to sounds which he heard there, the witness said:

"I heard a cowbell, and, strange to say, on my return more than two years later, I heard the same sound of a cowbell."

The room in which he was kept, he testified, had been changed considerably before his second visit. "When I was there first," he said, "the ceiling was in bad repair, and bags were hanging from the roof. On the side wall, parts of cardboard cartons had been placed. My bed was near the north wall. The windows had no curtains.

House Changed on Return.

"When I saw it more than two years later, the roof had been repaired. The side walls had been boarded up, the bags removed, and the room was quite clean. Where the floor met the eaves, there had been an open space of a foot, permitting one to hear things below. That space had been boarded up. The stairway had been changed, and the place was in much better condition."

(Johnson, the Negro owner of the shack, said in his statement to the Prosecuting Attorney that the interior of the cabin had been improved in the manner noted by Dr. Kelley.)

Dr. Kelley said that in looking out from the house on his last visit, he saw the barn he had seen before, and at a distance saw a house of bungalow pattern, with four or five chimneys, which he also had noted when a captive.

Identifies the Building.

"Did you have an opportunity to examine that house in which you had been confined at St. Charles?" Anderson asked.

"I had ample opportunity to observe it," Dr. Kelley replied.

In reply to the Prosecutors' next question, Dr. Kelley explained that he had been out to see the house since the kidnaping, and he identified it as the place where he was first held.

This concluded Dr. Kelley's direct testimony, at 10:25 a. m.

The defense objected to the identification by the witness of three photographs of the house, but was overruled. Dr. Kelley then identified the photographs.

Orthwein, Kelly's Brother-in-law, Is Recalled.

After Dr. Kelley left the stand, his brother-in-law, William D. Orthwein II, was recalled. Orthwein testified Friday and was withdrawn when a defense objection was sustained on the ground that the proper time for introducing the latter part of his testimony had not arrived.

"Sam W. Fordyce," Orthwein replied. He described Fordyce as "head of one of the most reputable law firms in the city."

Orthwein first met Rogers at the latter's home on the Friday following the kidnaping, he said. In reply to questions, the witness said he and the reporter discussed the return of Dr. Kelley.

"We met again that night at my home and decided to do nothing for the time being, as we didn't know anything," said Orthwein.

Receipt of First Note.

Rogers and Orthwein met again the following day, the witness stated. "We met again that night, Rogers, Fordyce and myself."

"Did you have any information at that time?"

"We had received the first ransom note."

"Was anything done about paying?" "No."

"Did anything occur during the conference?" "There was a telephone call between 8 and 9 o'clock. I answered the call."

When the defense objected to the witness' repeating the conversation, Judge Nolte obtained from Orthwein the statement that the conversation related to the kidnaping, and overruled the objection.

"A party called me by name and then said, 'Why in hell don't you get off the line and let those people talk out there.'"

Sounded Like Tapped Wire.

"Did you reply?" "I hung up the receiver."

"Did you hear anything as you hung up the receiver?" "I heard a click, as if the wire had been tapped. In fact, I knew it had been tapped."

The next conference was on Sunday, April 26, at the home of Orthwein's mother. Attending besides himself were Rogers, R. D. FitzGibbon, attorney for the McBride estate, and Fordyce, Orthwein said.

"Was the payment of a ransom discussed?" "Yes."

"Was the money available?" A defense objection was sustained.

At a conference shortly following, also held at the home of Orthwein's mother, Charles A. Karch, East St. Louis Congressman, since deceased, was present, the witness testified.

"Why was Mr. Karch present?"

"Mr. Fordyce suggested that we call him in."

"For what purpose?"

"In the event we might have to do business in Illinois we wanted a lawyer of good reputation, who was familiar with Illinois law."

Why Karch Was Hired.

The purpose of employing Karch, Orthwein said, was to have some one on the East Side "to do business with"—to handle the payment of ransom if necessary.

He was shown a copy of the second ransom note, and was asked what was delivered with it. Dr. Kelley's pearl tie pin, the witness said, came with the note.

Rowe began cross-examination with questions about the party at Hotel Coronado on April 4, 1931, Mrs. Kelley's birthday. Mrs. Muench, Orthwein said, wore no hat when he saw her. Her dress was black, he did not know the material.

The Kelley party left between 1 a. m. and 1:30. Mrs. Muench was still there, the witness added. Rowe recalled Orthwein's testimony that two men accompanied Mrs. Muench, and asked the witness if he could identify the man who did not dance. The witness had identified Rosegrant as Mrs. Muench's dancing partner. He said he could not describe the other man.

Rowe sought to make a point of the fact that the party was held on the Saturday night before Easter, and asked Orthwein if he were a Catholic. Orthwein said he was not, but that Dr. and Mrs. Kelley are Catholics.

Identification of Rosegrant.

Rowe sought to confuse Orthwein on his identification of Rosegrant, asking if the witness, at earlier hearings, had not stated that the man dancing with Mrs. Muench "greatly resembled Mr. Rosegrant." Orthwein said that had been his statement.

The attorney then asked if Orthwein recalled pointing out Rosegrant while on the witness stand Friday. Orthwein said he only vaguely remembered what he said on Friday, but a moment later stated, "I said I was sure it was Rosegrant," in reply to a question concerning the identity of Mrs. Muench's dancing partner.

Under further questioning, Orthwein said Rosegrant had lost weight while in custody and now looks like he did in 1931, but was heavier when Orthwein saw him early this year.

When the cross-examination ended, Orthwein, in reply to redirect examination, said there was no doubt as to his identification of Rosegrant.

Ransom Notes Introduced.

> Kay Darling:
> I am still all well, so do your business with the people who called on you today because there will be no more telephone calls because they are holding me for $250,000, but will compromise for $150,000. Please act at once as you know my condition here. With all my love.
> P. S.—Hurry. DEE.

> My dear wife:—
> No doubt this letter will be some what of a surprise. However don't worry as I am O. K. The letter I have wrote before for $150,000.00 they have compromised for $100,000.00. Kindly get in touch with Sig Bass of Bass & Bass and not to comunicate with the police department. The eats are not much good but under these circumstances am getting along well. Wishing I was at home. Kindly get in touch with the attorney at once. This is a final notice. With love. DEE.

CROSS-EXAMINATION FAILS TO SHAKE DR. KELLEY'S STORY

talked with Lieut. Coakley two hours. The answer was that it was a much shorter time, and that the witness did not talk to Coakley alone. Asked how he was transported from Rogers' house to the Powell apartment, the witness said he was not sure; he thought someone called at Rogers' house for him.

Rowe inquired who had accompanied Dr. Kelley to the Hampden Court (Hampden Hall) apartments. The witness said his recollection was that it was Rogers, but he was not certain. Asked if anyone had explained why he was to be released to Rogers, Dr. Kelley said the only explanation was the statement of his captors "John Rogers is the only man who can do anything for you. You are going to be turned over to him. Do exactly as he tells you."

Defense counsel asked if any one had told him that Rogers or anyone else was to handle any ransom money. Dr. Kelley responded that he heard Rogers' name mentioned only twice, first in the statement he had just mentioned, secondly at the time of his release to Rogers.

Asked About Baer and Karch.

Rowe asked the witness if, after his return to his family, he employed William Baer, attorney, since deceased, to go "to the police station" with him. Dr. Kelley said Baer was employed, but that his recollection was that he went alone to call on Chief of Police Gerk and Chief of Detectives Kaiser. He was asked whether he had met Charles A. Karch, East St. Louis lawyer and Congressman-elect, and whether Karch's name had been mentioned by his captors. He replied "No" to both questions. Karch was retained by the family, according to other witnesses. Karch is now dead.

A series of questions was asked about the retaining and paying of Baer, and Dr. Kelley's reply was, "If a fee was paid, a member of my family must have paid it." Asked which member of the family would be authorized to do this, he replied:

"My family's business is very intricate. I am not conversant with the various businesses in my family; I am a doctor." He said the question of a fee for Baer did not come up in his presence. To further questions about Baer's visit to him at his home, he said it was in late afternoon, and added:

"I don't know anything of the mechanism of how he came. I know he was asked to come."

Employed to Advise Him.

"Was it the purpose for him to act as buffer between you and the police?"

"He was employed to advise me in procedure that I knew nothing about."

Questions were then asked about Dr. Kelley's meetings with reporters, particularly Alvin H. Goldstein of the Post-Dispatch. He was asked whether Goldstein did not take him from the Rogers house to Powell's, but said he did not remember that he did. He saw Goldstein at his Portland place home later, but when asked whether Goldstein was admitted by a side door, said he did not know.

"When I got home," he said, "Mr. (R. D.) FitzGibbon greeted me, and I went upstairs. Later I went to a press conference, and Mr. Goldstein was one of those there. I didn't know the others."

"Didn't you say to Goldstein, (Wendell) Webster of the Star and others," he was asked, "that you could not describe or identify any of those men, for the reason that you were blindfolded with a handkerchief, a sack over your head, goggles and tape, and because the men were masked?"

Acted on Advice of Counsel.

"It is possible," he replied, "that I said something of the kind, because of advice received from counsel before I saw reporters, that it wouldn't be a good idea to make any statement as to identity."

Asked if his reason was that he did not wish to recollect, Dr. Kelley said this was not true.

Dr. Kelley testified, in answer to Rowe's questions, that he was unable to say whether he told reporters of St. Louis newspapers he could identify none of the kidnapers, adding—"If I was asked the direct question of identification—"

Rowe started to interrupt, but the witness continued, "I am not responsible for everything that appeared in the newspapers at that time. I have no reason to believe, one way or the other, that these accounts are exact repetitions of what I said."

Puncturing of Tape.

"Did you tell anyone on the Post-Dispatch that you punctured the tape of your goggles so you could see?" "No."

"The police?" "No."

"Have you ever said so in any public proceeding in this case?" "Yes, I told it to the grand jury."

"Did anyone suggest it to you?" "What do you mean?"

"Did any officer, Sheriff or lawyer, suggest that you say it?" 'No. There was no suggestion. I have told as complete—" here the Court interrupted with an admonition to answer the question without qualification.

Rowe asked if Dr. Kelley, at Rosegrant's bail bond hearing before Circuit Judge McElhinney, had not testified that he punched the hole in the tape which covered his goggles. Dr. Kelley said that was his testimony, as he recalled it.

In a long series of questions Rowe sought to get Dr. Kelley to estimate the dimensions of the room from which he saw Rosegrant during his captivity. Dr. Kelley declined to attempt an estimate in feet and inches, but illustrated the size of the room by pointing to objects in the courtroom.

Rowe persisted in trying to get the witness to estimate, in feet and inches, the dimensions of the courtroom area he had indicated as approximately that of the room. Dr. Kelley said he couldn't attempt it.

"Now, you're a college graduate?" Rowe went on. "You studied mathematics?"

"Yes."

"You know how many inches in a foot?" "Yes, but I can't estimate the length and breadth of this room," Dr. Kelley said, and again sought to illustrate the size of the room as he recalled it. It was, he said, a "good" sized room, not large, but "fair."

"What were you lying on there?" Rowe asked. "A bed."

"How high was the bed?" "I don't know."

At that point, adjournment was taken for lunch. At 1:30 p. m. Attorney Rowe resumed the cross-examination by asking Dr. Kelley how wide the door was open through which he said he saw Rosegrant. With his hands the witness indicated about 18 inches.

"How wide is a door?" Rowe asked. "About three and a half feet, I understand. Some doors are four feet two."

"What size was this door?" "It was the usual door."

"Three and a half feet?" "I don't know. I wasn't interested in its size."

"Did this man stop in front of the door?" "No, he seemed to be going somewhere. I questioned in my own mind if he was conscious he had passed an open door."

"Where were the other men at this time?" "I don't know. I could hear their voices somewhere in the house, but I couldn't tell where they were."

"Well, you don't know what kind of a place this was, a hotel, a tavern, or what?" "I thought I was in a dwelling."

"I didn't ask you what you thought," Rowe rejoined angrily.

Prosecuting Attorney Anderson asked the Court to admonish counsel against arguing with the witness. The Court replied, "Yes, that is correct. The State is sustained."

"I'm not arguing with him," Rowe protested. "It's the argumentative stand he has taken." There was further discussion of whether Rowe's remark was improper, but no ruling was made and he proceeded.

Lying "On Top" of Bed.

"What part of the bed were you lying on?" "I was on top," the witness replied soberly.

"Were you on your back or on your tummy?" (Rowe took the last word from a discussion he previously had had with the witness about a news report in the St. Louis Star in which Dr. Kelley was quoted as saying he was made "to lie on my back and on my tummy.")

"Since I was there all day," was the witness' reply, "I have no doubt I was in all positions."

"When you saw this man pass, what position were you in?" "In a position where I could see him pass."

Remarking that the reply was unresponsive, Rowe re-stated the question to which the witness replied, "On my back."

Rowe went over various points of Dr. Kelley's testimony before Judge McElhinney, at a bail bond hearing, the apparent purpose being to develop discrepancies between that testimony and his present statements. One point was as to the distances, indicated by the witness in courtroom spaces, but not stated in terms of feet, at which he saw the man he said was Rosegrant. At the former hearing, he indicated distances of 20 feet or more; today, the interval indicated was nearer 12 feet.

The place where he saw Rosegrant, Dr. Kelley repeated, was in the east side house where he was taken after the second night's confinement, and the room had heavy curtains, but was not entirely dark.

Not Always Blindfolded.

"Were you at all times blindfolded?" he was asked. "No," he said.

"Did you at all times have goggles on?" "No."

"Were you blindfolded when the men came in your room?" "When they addressed me in my room, I was blindfolded."

"Were the men covered?" "Yes, I did not see them in my room when they were not covered."

"Did you say (at the bond hearing) that you saw them sometimes over and sometimes under your goggles?" "I probably said that."

"Did you testify that you punched holes in the goggles?" "I think so."

Rowe renewed the attempt to

CITY COP CAUGHT IN BURGLARY AT RICHMOND HEIGHTS

'HAD A FEW DRINKS,' NOW HE'S SUSPENDED

There Was Talk of 'Pulling a Job,' He Explains, and They 'Cut Screen Out and Went on In.'

Smith, in uniform, was arrested with Kaercher at 2 a. m. yesterday in the office of the Milton Oil Co., 8500 Clayton road, Richmond Heights.

Both admitted they had entered the place, bent on robbery. "Just damn foolishness," was Smith's rueful explanation as he gave details of the adventure at Richmond Heights Police Station. He and Kaercher had been drinking, he said.

They were released on $2500 bonds. Preliminary hearings are to be held Thursday before Justice Werremeyer.

Suspended After Arrest.

Smith, attached to the North Market Street Police Station until after his arrest yesterday, when he was suspended and deprived of his badge and police revolver, related that when he went off duty at 11:30 o'clock Friday night he met a friend at Broadway and Bremen avenue. They drove in the friend's automobile, he said, to Hodiamont and Easton avenues, where they met Kaercher.

"Someone had a bottle and we had a few drinks while we were driving around," Smith said. "There was talk of 'pulling a job,' and when we passed the Milton Oil Co. we decided to go in there. There was a Clayton police car up the block, and we waited until it had pulled away.

"We cut a screen out of the side window and went on in. We went through the drawers, looking for money, but there wasn't any. We went up on the balcony, and there we heard the police cars."

Kaercher's Story.

Kaercher told a similar story, adding an explanation for an electric drill which the police found outside the window. He said he had taken it from the oil company's office and put it outside, intending to pick it up on the way out.

Smith and Kaercher said the third man had no part in the burglary. He "went on about his business," they said, and made no arrangement to call for them later. They had intended to summon a taxicab to take them away.

A private watchman in Davis place, across Clayton road from the oil company, heard suspicious noises there and telephoned the police.

Smith, 31 years old, has been a policeman for nine years. He lives at 4535 Lindell boulevard, the Monticello Apartments, which are owned by members of his family. Kaercher, 34 years old, is an electrician. He is a son of Patrolman Alexander Kaercher, assigned, as was Smith, to the North Market Street District.

ALLEGHANY CORP. WILL NOT MEET INTEREST DUE MONDAY

Lack of Funds for One of Van Sweringen Bond Series—Period of Grace.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The Alleghany Corporation, leading unit in the $200,000,000 Van Sweringen railroad-holding structure, announced today it would not meet an interest payment due Monday on one of its bond series. Lack of funds was given as the reason.

The decision was said by the New York Times to have been forced by failure of a sufficient number of bondholders to approve a plan of recapitalization that would have enabled the corporation to meet interest payments through issuance of stock.

In presenting the plan to investors, O. P. Van Sweringen, president of the corporation, said it was offered to avoid danger of forced sale of the stocks through which the corporation controls the Chesapeake and Ohio, Missouri Pacific, New York, Chicago & St. Paul, Pere Marquette & Erie railroads.

Semi-annual interest will be due on Monday on $24,532,000 of the corporation's 5 per cent bonds of 1950.

There is a two months' period of grace in which payment may still be made and the situation "cured," as the term is expressed legally, but a brief announcement from the corporation did not say whether the company hoped to be able to take advantage of this respite.

JUDGE ATWOOD SAYS NEW RULES WILL AID BAR

international jurisprudence and as time goes on the World Court reports will become the treasure house of a new international law.

"The old formulas for settling disputes involving vital interests and national honor have been thrown into the scrap heap, and many States of the world have undertaken obligations of pacific settlement which were not dreamed possible a generation ago. I believe that, in this respect, the world is better prepared for the maintenance of peace than it has ever been before in human history."

Referring to the Council and the Assembly of the League of Nations, Dr. Hudson said: "If they have not always succeeded in settling the disputes brought before them, they represent a big improvement on the pre-war situation. What would we not have given for such agencies in 1914?"

Succeeds President Barrett.

Judge Atwood, who will retire from the bench at the end of the year, succeeds former Attorney-General Jesse W. Barrett as president of the bar association.

James E. King of St. Louis and James A. Potter of Jefferson City were elected treasurer and secretary, respectively. Vice-presidents were elected in three of the nine districts of the State. They were: Samuel A. Liberman, St. Louis, first district; R. L. Motley, Bowling Green, second district, and Grover C. James, Joplin, third district.

Plans for Co-ordination.

Plans for co-ordination of the country's 1400 bar associations to further the five-point program of the national association were outlined by Scott M. Loftin of Jacksonville, Fla., president of the American Bar Association.

An organized bar, asserting its leadership in national life, he said, was necessary to counteract political, economic and social ills. The five-point program, he stated, was for strict enforcement of criminal laws, better methods of selecting judges, raising standards of admission to the bar, exaction of professional standards of ethics and elimination of unauthorized practice of the law.

Apathy of the public, Loftin declared, constituted one of the greatest problems in criminal law enforcement. If general respect for law was not increased, he said, a new form of government, more efficient in enforcing observance and less concerned with personal liberties, might be established.

"There will always be work for the conscientious lawyer in defending the generality of public rights, particularly in times when the public is rushing toward what seems a precipice," Henry Upson Sims of Alabama, former president of the American Bar Association, said in an address on "The Future of the Lawyer."

Five St. Louis Attorneys on Bar Character Committee.

Five St. Louis attorneys were appointed yesterday to serve as members of a Character Committee of the State Board of Law Examiners for St. Louis and St. Louis County. It will be the duty of the committee, under rules recently adopted by the Missouri Supreme Court, to investigate the character of applicants for admission to the bar from St. Louis and St. Louis County and to report results of the investigations to the Examiners' Board.

EIGHT INDICTED IN CHICAGO BUS STRIKE KILLING

President of Local Union One of Those Accused in Fatal Beating of Dispatcher.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Murder indictments against eight men, one of them president of a local bus drivers' union, today followed the violence which has marked the six weeks' old strike of motor bus drivers.

First Assistant State's Attorney Crowley said the State would ask for a quick trial and the maximum punishment for those indicted, all in connection with the death of James Kelly, a bus dispatcher.

The grand jury sat an extra day to hear details of the fatal beating and shooting of Kelly Wednesday by a group of five men as he was going home on a street car.

Police arrested nine men, but one was cleared. The officers said they had confessions from several of the other suspects, including three alleged to have participated in the attack and another said to have hired them.

Names of Indicted.

Those indicted were Ralph Stoltzmann, 35 years old, union president; Earl Renner, 40, named by police as the go-between; Albert Sample, 39, who police said confessed firing two shots into Kelly's body; William Semple, 42, his brother; John Bretschneider, 46, an alleged slugger; Edward Nacki, 34, arrested near the scene of the attack and an alleged slugger; Joseph White, a street car company employe who police say is a fugitive, and John Lefevour, 34, also a street car company employe.

Kelly died within 24 hours after the attack, his death following by a few hours that of a woman who had been struck two hours before she died by a steel pellet thrown through the window of a bus. A Coroner's jury attributed her death to natural causes. The physician at the hotel where she resided said he thought the blow on the head induced a fatal heart attack.

Police said confessions made to them by Renner, Semple, Nacki and Bretschneider disclosed that the terrorism during the strike had been paid for by a union officer. They said Renner named Stoltzmann as the man who on two occasions had given him $200 to be used in hiring sluggers to attack bus drivers and damage bus company property. He admitted further, they said, that he had hired several men on various occasions, paying them $10 each for a night's work, and that he confessed hiring the men who assaulted Kelly.

Denies Giving Money.

Stoltzmann denied he ever gave Renner any money or ever had seen Renner before. He said he did not handle the union's funds.

Semple was arrested, along with Nacki, not far from the scene of the assault. Police who arrested Semple said they saw him throw away a pistol which had been fired twice and was still warm. Semple later confessed the shooting, police said, and named Renner as the man who had hired him.

The strike was called Aug. 16 by local No. 1022 of the Amalgamated Association of Electric Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes, of which Stoltzmann is president.

Since that time, representatives of the Chicago Motor Coach Co. argued in getting an injunction against the union two weeks ago, there have been hundreds of individual acts of violence and injuries caused to approximately 400 persons. The drivers' union has since sought to dissolve the injunction, which bars them from interfering with the regular operation of the busses. Decision on this plea is expected next week.

plied: "I don't know whether he will."

Foley said, however, he would request in Bronx County Court next Wednesday that a special panel of 200 veniremen be selected from which to pick a jury of 12 men. By a special panel he said he meant a group of men who have indicated they have no objection to capital punishment.

"The prosecutor's office will be ready for the actual trial any day after Wednesday, by which time our trial papers will be complete," he added. He said the trial would start the second week of October.

"Since 95 out of 100 men already have formed opinions on the case because of the wide publicity," Foley said, "we probably will have to ask for even more prospective jurors than the 200."

There have been no "John Doe" indictments voted in the extortion case for possible accomplices, Foley said. He expressed doubt that an indictment under the Sullivan anti-firearms bill would be returned against Hauptmann, in whose garage a small, loaded automatic was found. Hauptmann has no pistol permit. Ballistics experts are testing the weapon.

Close Watch on Hauptmann.

While Foley prepared for the extortion trial and New Jersey officials pressed their search for evidence against Hauptmann in the actual kidnaping, the prisoner sat quietly in his cell.

Sheriff John J. Hanley examined the cell carefully because of the finding there yesterday of a stolen spoon, one piece of which Hauptmann had fashioned into a sharp instrument.

Guards—changed every 30 minutes—have been instructed to watch the prisoner closely to prevent any suicide attempt. All articles with which Hauptmann might injure himself have been removed from the cell, and his meals are served with paper forks, spoons and plates.

Questioning of friends and acquaintances of the suspect progressed at the District Attorney's office. Hans Kloppenburg, who was included in several group photographs with Hauptmann on outings in 1932, returned for further examination.

"Because he was closer to Hauptmann than anyone yet produced, we are questioning him at great length," Foley said. Kloppenburg was allowed to go to his home after five hours of questioning yesterday.

"If I thought Kloppenburg had any part in the crime," Foley said, "I wouldn't let him go home."

Notebook Being Studied.

Officials studied a notebook found in Hauptmann's pocket, although the District Attorney would not discuss its contents. The book, he explained, was not a diary of continuous events.

The search for further clews in Hauptmann's home shifted to the cellar because of rain. A basement storeroom with a concrete floor over which rough boards had been laid, and cabinets lining the walls were examined.

Detective Lewis Bornmann of the New Jersey State police left the Hauptmann house carrying four short strips of wood and two boards about five feet in length, which he said had been taken from a closet in the home. He also carried a square package wrapped in newspapers. He said nothing important was in the package.

Col. Lindbergh, who disquised himself in viewing Hauptmann Thursday, was reported to be passing the weekend at Englewood, N. J.

Attorney Fawcett said defense investigators had "located a number of material witnesses in New York State, and they have made affidavits extremely helpful to the defendant." He said he was studying the qualifications of pathologists, handwriting and fingerprint experts, with a view to calling some of them as defense witnesses. Fawcett has indicated he will challenge identification of the ransom notes as having been written by Hauptmann.

(Copyright, 1934.)

By the Associated Press.

LEIPZIG, Germany, Sept. 29. — A key presumably for a safe deposit box in New York used by Isidore Fisch, the man who Bruno Richard Hauptmann said gave him the Lindbergh ransom money, was obtained tonight by Detective Arthur Johnson of New York. The key was surrendered to the detective by Hanna Fisch, sister of the late Isidor.

The officer also obtained a contract note belonging to Isidore, involving a transaction in Long Island real estate, and Isidore's bank book, which showed that at the time of his death here last March Hauptmann's friend had less than $100 on deposit.

The officer also was given some letters written by Isidore when he was in the United States to his brother, Pinkus, whom Johnson questioned for some time today.

Johnson was at Leipzig police headquarters until 10 p. m. He questioned Mrs. Pinkus Fisch and Hanna Fisch separately.

"I shall question Pinkus Fisch again," Johnson said. I cannot tell now how long I shall remain in Leipzig."

He refused to discuss his conversation with Pinkus Fisch.

Relatives of Isidore Fisch have said he "died poor and in debt, hence he could not have possessed the Lindbergh ransom money."

New Law Prevents Surprise Alibi Defenses in New Jersey.

By the Associated Press.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 29.— An alibi defense for Bruno Richard Hauptmann will be difficult in New Jersey, due to a law passed by the legislature last April. The law is designed to prevent defendants from esacping conviction by advancing unexpected alibis at their trials, giving the prosecution no time to check them. It provides that the defendant shall, on the demand of the prosecutor, be required to furnish a written bill of particulars "stating the specific place or places at which the defendant claims to have been at the time of the alleged offense, and the names and addresses of the witrely to establish such alibi."

City Gay With Decorations For Veiled Prophet Parade

20 Floats, Recalling Great Adventurers, to Be Drawn Over Five-Mile Route Tuesday Night.

A city gay with purple and gold bunting is prepared for the fifty-fifth annual parade and ball of the Veiled Prophet. The parade will be held Tuesday night, and the ball the following night at the Coliseum.

In the parade 20 illuminated floats, recalling the exploits of great adventurers, will be drawn over a five-mile route through the central and downtown portions of the city.

As in other years, the parade will start at Ranken and Laclede avenues at 7 p. m. The route will be over Laclede avenue, Sarah street, Olive, Jefferson, Washington, Broadway, returning on Olive, Jefferson and Laclede. Twenty minutes, it is estimated, will be required for the parade to pass a given point. Its return to the Prophet's den at Ranken and Laclede is scheduled for 9:50 o'clock. A detailed schedule for the parade appears in an adjoining column.

First Float to Announce Theme.

Mounted police will clear a path for the floats through the crowds which customarily line the route. First in line will be the float announcing the theme "Great Adventurers," and then will come the guard of honor for the Prophet, masked and wearing elaborate court costumes. The Veiled Prophet rides at the head of the procession of floats.

Pages of history will come to life as each float appears in view. In the order of their appearance, the floats will represent: Noah, Richard the Lion Hearted, Marco Polo, Columbus, Ponce de Leon, Balboa, Cortez, and Montezuma, Magellan, Sir Francis Drake, Henry Hudson, Oliver Cromwell, Capt. Kidd, Daniel Boone, Napoleon, Sam Houston, Buffalo Bill, Stanley and Livingstone, Admiral Peary, and William Beebe, the last the only living adventurer in the list.

Eleven bands of 15 musicians each will be scattered throughout the line of march, with a larger band before the float of the Veiled Prophet.

To Clear Route at 5 P. M.

Streets along the route will be cleared of parked cars at 5 p. m. and all traffic in the parade area will be halted 10 minutes before the procession is due.

Many are expected to come from other cities to view the spectacle.

Special excursion rates have been offered by the railroads.

At the ball Wednesday night the Veiled Prophet will choose his Queen of Love and Beauty to succeed Miss Jane Alva Johnson, who retires, after a year as the honorary queen of St. Louis society.

Coliseum Decorated.

The Coliseum has been draped in white and silver in preparation for the ball, with purple draped boxes for the former Queens, and touches of gold and black. A pointed arch is the central feature of the setting. Above it, two great lances support a canopy under which the Prophet's throne is placed. A colonnade of gold columns and arches of varicolored stones is on either side.

Those invited to the ball will be required to wear formal dress. For men that is taken to mean a white vest and tie with at least a dinner jacket, although swallow tail coats are preferred. Those in the gallery may dress as they please.

After the ball there will be a supper at Hotel Jefferson in honor of the new Queen. Her identity is kept secret until she makes her appearance at the ball.

MAN CROSSING IN MIDDLE OF BLOCK KILLED BY AUTO

John Moriarity, 5208 Theodosia avenue, was killed last night when struck by an automobile as he was crossing Easton avenue in the 5300 block.

Moriarity, who was 55 years old, died of a fractured skull on the way to City Hospital. He was a laborer for the Public Service Co. His Body was identified at the Morgue by a friend, Harry Wade, 5213A Easton avenue.

The driver of the automobile said he was Edward Patterson, a clerk, of 8110 Springdale avenue, St. Louis County. Patterson, who was driving east in Easton avenue, said Moriarity was attempting to cross the street in the middle of the block and had halted near the center of the street to permit traffic to go by. Patterson swerved, he said, to avoid striking him, but the left side of his car knocked Moriarity down.

Unidentified Man Seriously Hurt When Hit by Auto.

An unidentified man, about 30 years old, was seriously injured when struck by an automobile on Oakland avenue about 100 feet east of Macklind avenue last night. At City Hospital he was found to have a skull injury.

The man was attempting to cross Oakland avenue when he was struck by an automobile driven east on Oakland by Marion Scott, a Negro butler, 7799 St. Albans avenue, Richmond Heights.

Stanley Malone, 23 years old, suffered a skull injury last night when his automobile, southbound on Broadway, turned west into Pine street and collided with an eastbound street car which had stopped at the intersection. He was taken to City Hospital. Malone, a truck driver, lives in the 1500 block of North Fifteenth street. Joseph Abramczyk, 20, of 1426 Monroe street, who was riding with him, suffered an injury on the right knee. Four others in the automobile sustained minor injuries.

Man, 62, Mysteriously Slugged.

Louis Passen, 62-year-old tailor, was treated at City Hospital last night for scalp lacerations suffered when, he told police, two young men slugged him at the corner of Hamilton avenue and Hamilton terrace as he was returning home from his shop at 1341 Hamilton. He was not robbed and could give no reason for the attack.

WOMAN RIDER STRUCK BY TRAIN AND KILLED

Webster Groves Telephone Operator Loses Life Near Ironton, Mo.

Miss Helen O. Coyne, 19 years old, of Webster Groves, was killed on horseback at 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning when a southbound Missouri Pacific passenger train struck her at a grade crossing two miles north of Ironton, Mo.

Two young women with whom she worked as an operator for the Southwestern Belle Telephone Co., accompanied her for a ride on horses rented at a resort at which they were spending their vacation. They said Miss Coyne's horse reared as the engine approached and became unmanageable.

The train stopped and took the body to Ironton.

Miss Coyne was the daughter of Thomas F. Coyne, a tailor, and resided with her parents at 612 Clark avenue.

Her sister, Miss Elizabeth Coyne, was drowned three years ago when she stepped into a deep hole in the Meramec River.

YOUTH SHOT DOWN ON HARRISBURG STREET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HARRISBURG, Ill., Sept. 29. — Harry Newkirk, 19-year-old son of a coal miner, was shot and seriously wounded as he stood on a street corner tonight.

Police said his assailant was Norman Tavender, 24, a United Mine worker. Tavender was said to have fled into a nearby bank building after the shooting. A crowd of several hundred persons gathered about the building, jamming all entrances. Police, fearing violence, indicated they would not attempt to arrest Tavender until the crowd had dispersed. They were confident he could not escape from the building.

Witnesses said Tavender walked up to Newkirk and shot him without warning. The bullet struck the youth in the head.

RAINFALL HERE IN SEPTEMBER 2.40 INCHES ABOVE NORMAL

Total 5.86 for Wettest Month Since May, 1933; Temperature Averages 67.5 Degrees.

A wet September followed the three months of heat and drouth that gave St. Louis a record-breaking summer. Rain fell on 15 days of the month and totaled 5.86 inches, more than had fallen in any month since May, 1933.

The average temperature for the month was 67.5 degrees, three degrees cooler than normal. Temperatures were high enough, however, to enable vegetation to take full advantage of the moist soil conditions, and trees and gardens made a good recovery.

The rains of September were chiefly the steady, soaking sort. Precipitation during the month was 2.40 inches more than normal. The Mississippi continued at low stage, the average for the month being .5 of a foot, compared with a normal of 9 feet.

HALF MILLION HIKE IN LAKE OF OZARKS TAX ASSESSMENT

FIVE COUNTIES GAIN, LOSS FOR ANOTHER

Commission Recommends Uniform $56 an Acre for All 60,403 Acres and This Is Adopted.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 29.—A request by the Union Electric Light & Power Co. of St. Louis for review of alleged excessive assessments by Benton county of a portion of the land submerged by the impounding reservoir formed by the company's Bagnell hydro-electric power dam, has resulted in an increase of $514,083, or 18 per cent, in the assessed valuation of all such submerged land in six Missouri counties for 1934 taxes.

The State Board of Equalization today announced it had fixed the assessed valuation of the 60,463 acres submerged by the impounding reservoir, known as the Lake of the Ozarks, at $3,385,928, for 1934 taxation. This is an increase of $514,083 over the aggregate of $2,871,845 which had been fixed by the local assessors in the six counties.

Union Electric Asks for Review.

When the reports of the local county assessors on valuation of the submerged land, for 1934 taxes, were submitted along with assessments of other lands in their counties, they were approved by the State Board of Equalization. Subsequently the Union Electric asked for a review of the Benton County assessment of $999,250 for 15,457 submerged acres, which was at the rate of $64.64 an acre.

The Union Electric was represented at the review hearing by James P. Aylward of Kansas City, then chairman of the Jackson County Democratic Committee and now chairman of the Democratic State Committee. Aylward is prominent in the Pendergast Democratic organization of Kansas City.

Assessments which had been reported by other counties in which land is submerged by the impounding reservoir were: Miller County, 2455 acres, $71,665, or $29.19 an acre; Camden County, 32,313 acres, $1,357,100, or $42 an acre; Morgan County, 9913 acres, $436,260, or $44 an acre; St. Clair County, 135 acres, $2610, or $19.33 an acre; Henry County, 190 acres, $4960, or $26.10 an acre.

After the review hearing by the State Board of Equalization, the State Tax Commission, which is a fact-finding body for the State Board of Equalization, on its own motion ordered a review of the assessments of the submerged land in all of the six counties.

For Uniform Assessment.

As a result of this review the Tax Commission recommended a uniform assessment of $56 an acre for all of the 60,463 acres of submerged land in the six counties, or a total assessed valuation of $3,385,928. This recommendation was adopted by the Board of Equalization, which includes Gov. Park, Secretary of State Dwight Brown, State Auditor Forrest Smith, State Treasurer R. R. Nacy and Attorney General Roy McKittrick.

Under this order Benton County, which was the cause of the Union Electric's request for a review, loses $133,658 from the $999,250 assessment made by its assessor for 1934 taxes, but actually gains over its assessment of the submerged land for 1933 taxes, which was $42 an acre or $649,194 for the 15.457 acres.

Gains by Five Counties.

Gains in assessed valuations by other counties, as a result of the State board's order, were: Miller, $65,815; Camden, $452,428; Morgan, $118,868; St. Clair, $4950 and Henry, $5680.

The Tax Commission has no figures available on the additional taxes which must be paid by Union Electric, as a result of the order, due to varying total tax rates in the six counties.

The dam on the Osage River near Bagnell, was not included in these assessment figures. The dam proper is assessed locally in Miller County. This local assessment of the dam does not include the electric generating equipment, which is a part of a $30,617,648 assessment against Union Electric by the State Board of Equalization, for 1934 taxes, on that part of its property necessary in the production and distribution of electric current.

show that Dr. Kelley previously had said he could not recognize or identify any of his captors. In reply to such a question, as to a statement about Rosegrant after Dr. Kelley first saw him in a shadow box, the witness replied:

"I don't remember saying anything of that kind. Whatever I said was on advice of counsel. This advice was that I should not identify anybody except under oath or before a grand jury."

"Who advised you in that manner?"

"William Baer."

Asked whether the man whom he saw outside his door, who he says was Rosegrant, was smooth-shaven, Dr. Kelley said the man did not have a mustache, and that he so testified before.

Again Rowe attempted to draw from the witness an admission that he said he could identify none of the kidnapers. Dr. Kelley said he had not, so far as he could remember, but called attention to the fact that the kidnaping was more than three years ago and added: "I was asked innumerable questions and I have no idea what I may have answered."

"Weren't you asked in the bail hearing if you could identify anyone, and didn't you say, 'I refuse to answer?'" "That was not asked."

"Weren't you asked if you could identify Rosegrant and didn't you object to the question?" "Yes."

"Didn't you testify in deposition, 'I say that if I have been asked questions by persons I consider it is none of their business, I may give any answer, ambiguous or otherwise?'" "Yes, that was my answer."

"Did Mr. Rogers of the Post-Dispatch pay any money in your presence to these men?" Prosecuting Attorney Anderson demanded "What men?" Rowe replied, "When he was released," and the witness replied, "When I saw Mr. Rogers there, nobody was about. It was all desolate."

"Did you pay any money?" "Yes. They took my pocketbook from me with more than $100 in it. I got back everything but the money. I presume that was kept for my board."

"In that statement you said you could not identify anyone, didn't you?" "If it is in the statement, I said it on advice of counsel."

"Well, you were talking to the officers of the law, were you not?" "Yes."

"And the lawyer who gave you that advice is now dead?" "Yes, I believe he is; William Baer was the name, and I recall reading about his death."

Told to Do What Rogers Said.

"Why didn't you go direct to your home following your release?" Rowe demanded. "I was in John Rogers' car and he said he was taking me to his house. I had not commandeered that car. I asked him to take me home, but he said he would take me to his house. I had been told to do whatever he said."

"What did you discuss on the way back?" "One thing that interested me, how the release could have been accomplished without ransom."

"John Rogers told you there had been no ransom?" "Yes."

"Now the first time you mentioned picking holes in the tape of the goggles was before the grand jury here in St. Louis County, wasn't it?" "Yes."

"Did anyone suggest that to you?" "No," was the emphatic reply, "I had been waiting for the moment for three years."

"And why did you not tell about the holes before?" "My lawyer advised me to say nothing that would force me to identify anybody, except before a grand jury under oath."

"If you could have made an identification, why did you not report it to the police?" "Because the men were not under arrest. I told them I would gladly and willingly do so if the men were under arrest. I'm not a peace officer, I'm a doctor of medicine."

"Did you withhold any information which would have assisted in making an arrest?" "No; I withheld any information I had as to identification."

"Did you get counsel for the reason you were of the opinion you might incriminate yourself?" Rowe inquired. "I got counsel to know how far I could talk," Dr. Kelley replied. "Incrimination never entered my head," he added.

Never Met Karch.

Replying to questions which skipped from one phase of the case to another, Dr. Kelley said he had not met the late Attorney Karch at any time; that he did not know whether anyone representing the McBride estate paid Karch a $12,000 fee; that he did not witness any such payment in Samuel W. Fordyce's law office, and in fact was never in Fordyce's office; that Fordyce was a friend whom he met frequently, but not his legal adviser; and that in his consultation with Attorney Baer, "I wished to be advised as to my conduct in respect to this kidnaping."

There were questions about the McBride family, of which Mrs. Kelley is a member, and Dr. Kelley said he could not say how many heirs there were to the McBride estate. A moment later, he was asked whether the Negro Johnson, (since murdered) had not told him of the changes in Johnson's cabin which he described. He answered this in the affirmative. He identified the photograph made of him by the Post-Dispatch on the day of his return, wearing the goggles given him by his captors, which he kept in his raincoat.

Redirect Examination.

Re-direct examination of Dr. Kelley, conducted by Anderson, was brief. The prosecutor's first question: "Why did you not identify anybody before this time?" was withdrawn, on objection by the defense.

"When was the first time you told anybody that you identified Rosegrant?" asked Anderson.

"I told it many times after I testified before the grand jury," Dr. Kelley said, "because I thought I could."

"Did you act on advice of counsel?" This question was withdrawn after an objection.

"When you saw Rosegrant in the shadow box, did you identify him?" the witness was asked.

"In my own mind, yes."

"Were you sure?" An objection was sustained, but Dr. Kelly's reply "Yes," was uttered before the objection.

The final matter of questioning was about photographs of Dr. Kelley wearing the goggles, and it developed that more than one such picture was taken.

The defense did not choose to renew the cross-examination, and Dr. Kelley was excused at 2:40.

Thomas J. Rowe, Jr., counsel for Angelo Rosegrant, on trial for the kidnaping of Dr. Kelley, declined yesterday to make public the names of witnesses for the defense who are being subpenaed by private process servers.

ROSEGRANT JURY USES SCHOOL GYMNASIUM

Pleased at Extra Supply of Blankets for Beds in Courtroom.

Members of the jury trying Angelo Rosegrant for the kidnaping of Dr. I. D. Kelley, locked up since the taking of testimony began Thursday, were escorted last night to the Clayton High School gymnasium and took advantage of the opportunity to make use of the shower baths.

The jurors will have the use of the gymnasium again today. No arrangements have been made for any of them to attend church.

Accompanied by bailiffs, the jurors took a long walk through Clayton streets before dinner last night. On their return to the Courthouse they were pleased to find that the county had provided more new blankets and towels for them.

The jurors sleep on iron cots which are arranged in the courtroom. It was apparent from their comments last night that there had been a shortage of blankets the night before.

Card games, played on the counsel and press tables, help while away idle time, and the jurors are provided with the comic sections of newspapers, other parts of the papers being forbidden.

Judge Nolte Tries to Keep Proceedings Moving Briskly.

Judge Nolte's courtroom at Clayton was again jammed yesterday when the sixth day of the Kelley kidnaping trial began, but the crowd thinned out during the afternoon session, and there was standing room. Among the spectators were a few boys and girls of grade chool age. Some of those who had seats did not give them up during the luncheon recess, but ate lunches they had taken with them.

Rosegrant, suffering from a heavy cold, used his handkerchief frequently. He followed Dr. Kelley's testimony intently, conferring occasionally with Clay Rogers, defense counsel from Kansas City. During the cross-examination of Dr. Kelley, Rosegrant idly drew scrolls on a pad of paper.

In recess periods the ceiling fans and an exhaust fan were turned on the freshen the air in the crowded courtroom.

Judge Nolte was impatient of delay and sought to keep the proceedings moving. When attorneys stopped questioning witnesses to confer, he hastened them with the comment: "The Court is waiting." The Judge also made it a point to admonish witnesses to give direct answers.

Laughter in the courtroom followed Dr. Kelley's testimony that the kidnapers retained $100 they found in his purse" to pay for his board." Judge Nolte instructed the bailiffs to eject any spectator guilty of laughing in the remaining sessions. "This is a serious business," the Court said.

HAY AND NOLTE ARGUE USE OF LIQUOR TAXES

Counselor Presents Plans to Mayor as Comptroller Gives His to Aldermen.

Comptroller Nolte and City Counselor Hay engaged in a debate of prepared statements yesterday over a proposal made by Hay Thursday for use of liquor excise taxes to support part of the $16,100,000 issue of improvement bonds voted last May.

Hay's fiscal program, which was adopted by Mayor Dickmann, suggested deferring issuance of the remainder of the bond issue, but urged immediate issuance of some of the bonds in order to provide employment this winter and retain the city's right to $5,291,000 in PWA grants. It advocated increase of the merchants' and manufacturers' license tax to provide money to support refunding bonds which the city has been considering issuing next year to replace old bonds maturing.

While Hay was making his recommendation to the Mayor, Nolte was sending a report to the Board of Aldermen, in which he insisted the liquor taxes should go into the sinking fund to support the refunding bonds.

Recalls His Suggestions.

In his statement yesterday the Comptroller recalled that it was at his suggestion the liquor ordinance set liquor revenue aside for the sinking fund.

"If we are to have new bond issues, we should have new sources of income to support them," Nolte declared. "Refunding necessitates revenue to maintain a sinking fund for the refunding bonds and pay interest thereon. If a refunding plan is finally adopted, it certainly is sound fiscal policy to pay interest and principal of existing debt to the fullest extent of our present income for debt service, and refund only those bonds on which we cannot meet the principal payments."

Nolte pointed out that he is responsible to the people, under the charter, for the safeguarding the city's credit. The City Counselor, he went on, is responsible to the Mayor and has no responsibility in determining financial policies. "I would be reluctant," the Comptroller added, "to issue this statement, did I not feel that the City Counselor should refrain from publicly dictating matters of policy in the field of municipal financing, in which, so far as I have knowledge, he has had no experience and is not regarded as an authority."

Hay's Answer.

"I would welcome any assistance which Mr. Nolte can give," Hay said in reply, "in helping our city government to carry out the will of the people, as expressed by their vote at the bond issue election, to complete projects started under a former administration and to give good and deserving people a chance to make a living. If I can at any time be of service to the city in any field whatsoever, I shall consider it my moral, if not my legal, duty to render that service. If Mr. Nolte does not take my suggestion as proposing the proper plan for refunding of bonds and surviving new bonds to go on with the improvement program, then he should not delay in coming forward with a plan of his own."

GUARANTEED MINIMUM INCOME FOR ALL PROPOSED

"So You Really Believe in Santa Claus?"—Topic of Young Republicans' Chairman.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Sept. 29.—A guaranteed minimum income for every citizen was advocated by George Olmsted, chairman of the Young Republican National Committee, at a luncheon meeting here today in connection with a conference of young Republicans of Western states. Representatives from California, Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, Utah and Wyoming were present.

In advocacy of his plan, Olmsted contended it would eliminate all forms of public and private charity at less than the cost of administration of New Deal policies.

Speaking on the subject, "So You Believe in Santa Claus?" Olmsted charged that Rexford Guy Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, whom he referred to as "Bughouse Tugwell," had in mind as early as 1931 the creation of an autocracy in the United States, which he asserted the New Deal was carrying forward.

Olmsted criticised Secretary of Agriculture Wallace as an exponent of crop reduction for selfish purposes and the AAA as "a destroyer of plenty." He dismissed the administration claim that it had abolished child labor as "prattle," saying the problem was encountered only in the Democratic states of the South.

The PWA and the CWA he classed as 'doing only for the destitute and offering something only to paupers."

The Rev. James Hardin Smith, pastor of Hyde Park Congregational Church, is in Shawnee, Ok., today to officiate at the wedding of Miss Mary Lee Gallaher to Kenneth Lee McDonald of Oklahoma City, keeping a promise he made 33 years ago.

At that time the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gallaher, had asked the Rev. Mr. Smith to marry them but he had not yet been ordained. He told them then that if they ever had a daughter he would perform her wedding ceremony.

NRA LETS MINIMUM TIRE PRICES EXPIRE

Board Declines to Be Rushed Into Extension Order on Eleventh-Hour Request.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The NRA today abandoned price-fixing temporarily at least, in the rubber tire industry.

It refused to extend a scedule of minimum prices and differentials proclaimed under the retail tire and battery code which expires at midnight tomorrow.

The extension was requested for a 30-day period by the industry's code authority, but NRA officials took the stand they could not review the situation on such short notice and declined to continue the present setup.

Minimum prices were first declared last May by Hugh S. Johnson, then recovery administrator, in an effort to stabilize the industry.

What course of action could be taken in the event of a renewal of what the NRA has repeatedly called "destructive price cutting" in the industry is problematical, but it is indicated that in such event the recovery administration may step in.

The price level was revised five weeks ago to include a system of differentials in an attempt to help the smaller manufacturers and retailers.

Most of the new NRA board members were absent from the city today, but a meeting is scheduled for next Tuesday. One of those present, Walton Hamilton of Yale University, a former member of the Consumers' Advisory Board, commented that the board's new job calls "both for a clear cut ideal and for hard-headed realism. * * * If it (the job) is to be done, fact must be mated with vision in a cause which sarves interests and rises above them."

By Oct. 15 the board headed by Clay Williams must advise Mr. Roosevelt on his temporarily stayed order cutting the cotton garment work week from 40 to 36 hours without a wage slash.

The NRA board today named D. M. Nelson of the Industrial Advisory Board, Willard Hotchkiss, chairman of the General Code Authority, and Father Francis J. Haas, another member of the authority, as an impartial committee to investigate the cotton garment work week.

Two Boys Killed in Cave-in.

By the Associated Press.

AURORA, Neb., Sept. 29.—The bodies of two boys, crushed when the cave in which they slept collapsed, were extricated today from a heap of wood, steel sheeting and clay. The boys, Robert Phillips, 14 years old, and Earl Dreier, 15, dug the cavern yesterday under a shack they used as a playhouse. They slept in the dugout last night and, when they failed to return to their homes early today, a search was made.

4TH CLASS POSTOFFICE GRAFT UNDER ATTACK

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The Postoffice Department expects to recover up to $100,000 and perhaps considerably more as a result of an investigation of the practice of fourth-class postmasters themselves mailing heavy merchandise and even bricks and stones to swell their postal receipts.

Fourth-class postmasters are not paid a straight salary but receive as compensation double the amount of the postage they cancel. Thus there is a definite incentive to get ail the parcel post mail possible and thousands of postmasters at little way stations have gone far beyond legitimate means to boost their pay checks. They pay for the postage themselves and yet make a hundred per cent profit.

Investigation of this Government racket was begun at the request of Congressman John J. Cochran of St. Louis.

$31,000 Already Recovered.

K. P. Aldrich, chief postal inspector, reported to Cochran that more than $31,000 has already been recovered and that claims totaling $45,000 more are in process of collection.

"Postmasters have been recommended for removal or the offices recommended for discontinuance in 328 cases," said Aldrich. "In addition 260 investigations have not yet been completed."

While the Postoffice Department puts the cost of this racket to the Government at a fairly moderate figure, Cochran is convinced that it amounts to many hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of dollars a year. It was for this reason that he called upon Postmaster-General Farley for an investigation.

Fourth-class postmasters often mail eggs, butter, cream, fruit and other heavy merchandise with no charge for the postage in order to increase their cancellations, according to the Postoffice Department. When there was not enough of this free business, they wrapped up iron weights and stones and mailed them to friends.

The investigation disclosed that Kentucky was the worst offender, with 318 fourth-class postoffices found guilty of this practice. Virginia was second with 162 cases and Missouri third with 107.

New Legislation Helps.

"Legislation strengthening the Postmaster-General's power to withhold commissions on mailings of this kind was enacted at the last session of Congress, and more of this revenue should be recoverable hereafter" Aldrich said in his report to Cochran.

"Fear of prosecution would do much to break up this practice among fourth-class postmasters. None of the existing penal statutes clearly applies to the offense. A bill embodying the department's recommendation was introduced at the last session of Congress but failed of passage. Its enactment would have a salutary effect."

Cochran, who was defeated for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator in Missouri and is now campaigning for reelection to the House, has indicated that he will sponsor the move to prevent this postal racket if he regains his seat.

CALIFORNIA DEMOCRATS ELECT SINCLAIR MAN STATE CHAIRMAN

Speaker Who Charges Party "Has Gone Communistic" Is Shouted Down.

By the Associated Press.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 29.—After listening impatiently to a speaker who charged "the Democratic Party has gone Communistic and we might as well be frank about it," the Democratic State Central Committee today elected as its permanent chairman Culbert Olson, a follower of Upton Sinclair, the party nominee for Governor.

Olson, a candidate for the State Senate, overwhelmingly defeated Curtis Hillyer of San Diego, who had been nominated by Seth Millington, the speaker who attacked Sinclair's "end poverty" program. The vote was 543 to 43, and received thunderous applause.

Olson will have charge of Sinclair's campaign. Sinclair, a former Socialist, is opposed in the November election by Acting Gov. Frank F. Merriam, Republican, and by Raymond L. Haight, nominee of the Progressive and Commonwealth parties.

Millington, an unsuccessful opponent of Sinclair in the primaries, was shouted down when he nominated Hillyer. Several minutes were required for restoration of order.

IRISH NEWSPAPER STRIKE ENDS

Workers Get 25 Pct. of Requests; Papers Suspended Nine Weeks.

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Sept. 29.—The city's newspaper managers, following upon the settlement of the general newspaper strike, announced today that they would resume publication Tuesday. For nine weeks Dublin had been without newspapers, its citizens depending mainly on rumors for their local and foreign news.

The newspaper workers won about 25 per cent of their original requests. Among the terms of agreement were an increase of 9 per cent in salaries of $12.50 a week or less, a 6 per cent increase in salaries of $12.50 to $14, an increase of 60 cents in salaries amounting to more than $14 up to an agreed maximum of $17 weekly. The managers agreed to employ only union members in the future.

Clothing Found in Suitcase Carried by Companion; Stories Conflict.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 29.—No trace had been found tonight of 14-year-old Ruby Wigger, who went to Memphis, Tenn., recently with Louis Knight and Edna Kesterson, 17, companion of Marvin Day, alias Marvin O'Day, who Memphis police say has confessed he murdered Marverine Appel, 8, at South Bend, Ind., in 1930.

The Kesterson girl was placed in the Cole County jail last night by Chief of Police John Bruner after she had been returned here from Memphis. After arriving here, a bundle the girl was carrying was found to contain a hat, sweater, dress, pocketbook and a pair of hose belonging to the Wigger girl. She told police that her companion left her at Memphis and had gone to Little Rock, Ark.

Bruner said Knight told him at Memphis that the girl had taken a taxicab for Jefferson City. Day was quoted by Bruner as saying she had gone to Canada. Relatives of the girl here have received no communication from her.

NEWSPAPER TAX CASE PUT OFF

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 29.—Judge Wayne G. Borah in Federal District Court today postponed hearing on application of 13 Louisiana newspapers for preliminary injunction to restrain collection of a 2 per cent tax on advertising levied under an act of the Louisiana Legislature this summer.

It was understood the hearing would be next November. A restraining order recently issued by Judge Borah stays in effect. The order was directed against the State Supervisor of Public Accounts. The newspapers maintained the law was spite legislation aimed at them by Senator Huey P. Long, the head of the State administration political forces.

Government Subpenas Nearly 200 Witnesses, Records of 75 Firms in Mail Fraud Case.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Nearly 200 persons and the records of 75 companies have been subpenaed by the Government for the trial of Samuel Insull, charged with fraudulent use of the mails in selling some of his utility securities. The trial is set for Tuesday.

The list disclosed today includes Insull company officers, investors and the managers, bookkeepers and clerks of brokerage houses. Dr. Thomas W. Mitchell, Federal Trade Commissioner, has been called, as have Robert T. Sundelius, assistant treasurer of the Chicago Stock Clearing Corporation, and Kenneth Smith, assistant secretary of the Chicago Stock Exchange.

Others summoned include C. W. Brand of Ettinger & Brand, Cleveland brokerage house; W. J. Church of Frazier, Jelke & Co., New York; William L. Flannigan of Hall, Stieglitz & Co., New York; J. D. Scheinman of J. D. Scheinman & Co., Los Angeles; Arthur R. Hebblethwaite, Indianapolis; Sam Miller, Kidder, Peabody & Co., New York; Miss Vera D. Branman, Medora, Ind.; Oscar B. Thompson, Indianapolis, and Martin McDermott, Indianapolis.

Insull Officers Called.

Subpenaes also named many Insull company officers, among them Harry A. Bigelow, trustee in bankruptcy for Insull, Son & Co.; Daniel C. Green, receiver for Middle West Utilities Co.; Sam Howard, receiver for Corporation Securities Co.; Eugene V. R. Thayer of Mississippi Valley Utilities Investments, Inc.; A. L. Tossell, secretary of the People's Gas, Light & Coke Co.; B. P. Shearon, secretary of Midland United Co.; John W. Evers Jr., secretary of the Commonwealth Edison Co., and A. E. Patton, secretary of the Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois.

Besides the brokers some 60 brokerage firms are included—the Government's witnesses will include bankers. George Goessele, auditor for the Central Republic Bank and Trust Co., is under subpena, as is George Schaefer of the Northern Trust Co. Records of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. have been subpenaed for information about the finances of Insull and Corporation Securities Co. Washington Flexner, alleged stock agent for some of the Insull transactions; Attorney John E. Wing, and Oliver E. McCormick, identified as a member of "Syndicate A," also were subpenaed.

Basis of Fraud Charge.

The mail fraud case is based on Government allegations of conspiracy to sell $113,000,000 in stock and $30,000,000 in gold notes, and to borrow $20,000,000 from banks in manipulation of Corporation Securities Co., the now bankrupt $2,000,000,000 Insull holding company, in efforts to stave off the crash of the Insull utility empire.

Albert L. Deane Says His Plan Would Lift Relief Burden From Treasury.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29. — An "American" plan to end unemployment and the need of Government aid for the needy was outlined today to the Mobilization for Human Needs conference by Albert L. Deane, president of the General Motors Holding Corporation.

Deane said his plan was in accord with "New Deal principles," and would "guarantee a job to every worker, a market to industry." Furthermore, he said, it would relieve the "strain" on the Federal Treasury and permit balancing of the budget.

Outlines Proposal.

Now serving as a deputy administrator of the Housing Administration, Deane said the plan would involve no expense to the Federal Government except administration costs. He described it as follows:

A monthly survey would show the average weekly hours of employment feasible in each industry. Into this would be divided the total number of workers in the industry, whether employed or not. The resulting weekly average would be used to determine the hours worked in each industry.

Employers would not be required to conform to this average, however. Those preferring to hire a smaller number of employes would pay double time for hours worked over the average. The workers, however, would receive only time and a half. The other pay for extra hours would go into a national employment fund.

Not only would this fund finance work supervised by the Government for those not employed in industry, Deane said, but it would furnish the money for cushioning a fall in production and the consequent reduction in purchasing power.

In the latter case a 10-year average of weekly hours in each industry would be taken. For each hour the worker was employed less than this average, he would receive half pay.

Dropping the Undeserving.

Deane's plan was presented to the conference after President Roosevelt and Harry Hopkins, Relief Administrator, had indicated to the conference their concern over the number still on relief rolls. Both Mr. Roosevelt and Hopkins said those not deserving aid should be removed from the rolls, and that some states must meet their shares of the burden.

What the Technical Committee studying social legislation to be presented at the next Congress was considering was indicated to the conference by A. J. Altmeyer, Assistant Secretary of Labor. Altmeyer rejected the view that the needy should "be fed as cheaply as possible." He advocated a system of social legislation which would embrace State insurance systems now existing.

Chairman of the Technical Subcommittee of the Security Committee named by President Roosevelt, Altmeyer said private savings were "inadequate" to protect the working people against hazards of old age, illness and unemployment.

'NEW DEAL' TERM OF SUPREME COURT OPENS TOMORROW

Three of Five Cases Based on Roosevelt Recovery Laws Attack NRA Control of Oil Output.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Justices of the Supreme Court gathered in the Capital today for the opening on Monday of what promises to be the tribunal's most portentous term. Awaiting the decision of the nine Justices are cases involving several major parts of the New Deal. In particular, five cases arising out of Roosevelt recovery laws are pending.

A compilation of cases involving the NRA and AAA in the lower courts showed that the New Deal has a batting average of .768 so far.

The United States Law Week in its next issue will publish the following score on actions in lower Federal courts:

Cases instituted under the NRA and AAA—232.

Cases in which trial courts have acted—99.

Won by Government (favorable court action)—76.

"Should Be Discounted."

"The relative success scored by Government counsel should be discounted somewhat," the Law Week will say, "since in 12 of the cases counted as resulting in court action favorable to the Government the decrees were entered by consent; in some of the criminal cases the defendants plead guilty; and the favorable action taken in a few other cases was the entry of a temporary injunction pending final hearing.

"Considering only decisions in which Federal courts have announced opinions on the constitutionality of the National Recovery and Agricultural Adjustment Acts, the Government's score is not so high. Its percentage in such cases has been only about 50 per cent."

Of the "New Deal" cases pending before the Supreme Court, up till today, three were from the East Texas oil field. In general they attacked the authority of the Federal Government under the NRA to control oil production. Two others from New York assail the authority of Congress to prohibit gold hoarding and suspend gold payments.

Doubt on Status of Oil Cases.

Some doubt exists as to the status of the oil cases. The Justice Department announced today that producers of oil in Texas who violated the State quota would not be prosecuted by the Federal Government for such violations committed prior to last Tuesday. At the oil administration it was indicated that one of the cases thus might be dropped but that two others would remain before the court.

There is doubt whether the oil cases as a group will be decided on their merits or dismissed without a hearing. The Justice Department had urged the court to review them. It disclosed the cases were prepared, tried and decided in the lower courts under a misapprehension on the part of all involved, including counsel and the Judges, that the revised executive order of President Roosevelt made oil production in excess of quotas allotted by States, unfair trade practices and violations of the petroleum code.

If past cases can be taken as a rule, the Supreme Court decisions on the cases involving the constitutionality of new deal acts may be close. The same nine justices affirmed last term by 5 to 4 decisions the legality of the Minnesota mortgage moratorium and the New York milk control act.

However, the action of the Court in the two State cases is not accepted in legal circles as definitely forecasting its position on Federal "New Deal" controversies.

Although the National Recovery Act was emergency legislation similar to the two State laws sustained by the Court, the State laws had the advantage of being enacted under police powers not enjoyed by the Federal Government.

The Other Two Cases.

Outside the pending oil decisions, the two other New Deal cases center on past presidential monetary moves. In one Norman C. Norman of New York City is challenging the validity of the suspension of gold payments. In the other Frederick B. Campbell of New York City is attacking the constitutionality of the gold hoarding act. Both were sustained by the lower courts.

The docket of the Court is crowded with approximately 430 cases, most of them accumulating during the recess. The Court will devote the first week of its new term to conferences to decide which it will review on their merits and which it must dismiss without a hearing for failure to present questions within its jurisdiction.

CLIENT SAYS LAWYER EMBEZZLED HER $69

Negro Woman Obtains Warrant Against Irving Spencer —He Gives Bond.

Warrants charging Irving L. Spencer, a lawyer, with embezzlement were issued yesterday on the complaint of Mrs. Carrie Taylor, a Negro, 4066 Enright avenue, who asserted she had given him $69 to pay the rent on her home, but that it was not paid.

Spencer, who has offices in the State National Life Building, was arrested Friday and furnished $1000 bond, returnable in Court of Criminal Correction next Friday. Mrs. Taylor said a real estate company notified her the rent had not been paid, after she had given Spencer the money for it. She exhibited receipts which she said he had given her. Last Nov. 13 she gave him $10, she declared; $25 on Dec. 23, $24 on Jan. 15 and $10 on March 22.

Mrs. Taylor said she had engaged Spencer originally to get a loan for her. She also alleged she had given him $3 to buy her a vender's license, but that he did not obtain the license or return the money.

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Sept. 29.—Gen. Eoin O'Duffy, supplanted by his former friend, E. J. Cronin, as head of both the Fein Gael Party and the Blueshirts, announced tonight he has decided to sever all former political connections and form a completely independent party.

His statement followed upon a meeting with Blueshirt leaders loyal to O'Duffy in his apartment. About 20 attended, including, however, only about three or four out of some 30 county directors. O'Duffy had an armed police guard present for the first time since he was appointed police chief.

COST OF CCC WORK $443,000,000 SO FAR

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.— The Civilian Conservation Corps today reported that 850,000 young men, war veterans and Indians, had been given work at a cost of $443,000,000 —about $522 each.

Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, in a report to President Roosevelt covering 18 months, gave these totals and conclusions: Payment of $136,000,000 to boys in the forestry camps; remission of $113,000,000 of this amount to their familes, about 300,000 in number, for relief purposes; expenditures of $273,500,000 for foodstuffs, clothing, transportation, automotive equipment, heavy machinery and tools; advancement of the nation's forestry program from five to 15 years, and addition of 5,000,000 acres to national forests and 67,000 acres to national parks.

Fechner reported that the President authorized enrolled strength of the camps was 369,838 and that beginning Monday an additional 100,000 would be enrolled to fill vacancies caused by discharges during the third six-month period which ends tomorrow.

"Men are now dropping out to accept private employment at the rate of about 10,000 per month," Fechner said. "The CCC movement has lightened State and local relief burdens by giving employment to men whose families were on relief roles. In almost all cases the jobs in the forest camps have gone to young men willing to allot five-sixths of their monthly cash allowance of $30 each directly to families or dependents." Fechnes said the outdoor work, regular habits and wholesome food had increased the average weight of the youths seven pounds. Many instances of 15 to 25-pound gains were noted. The boys, he said, also had acquired new self-confidence and new ambition and had learned new trades through the camps' educational system.

Major work accomplishments of the boys listed as including: Construction of 34,570 miles of truck trails to open up inaccessible areas and strengthen the fire control system; opening up of 23,000 miles of fire breaks; planting of more than 15,000,000 trees; campaigns to eradicate or reduce destructive activities of rodents over 7,000,000 acres, insects over 2,700,000 and tree-attacking diseases over 1,000,000; development and improvement of more than 1,000,000 acres of forest lands by removal of undesirable trees, and construction of 609,000 check dams in gullies to check soil erosion.

TWO DESPERADOES SHOOT 3 MEN IN ESCAPE FROM JAIL

SEIZE MAIL TRUCK, THEN STEAL AUTO

Every Available City and State Policeman Joins in Wide Search for Fugitive Killers.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 29.—Walter Legenza and Robert Mais, members of the notorious Tri-State gang under sentence of death for murder, shot their way out of the Richmond city jail today, wounding three officers.

Legenza and Mais suddenly drew pistols as they were being led from their cells to confer with an attorney. They shot Warden W. A. Moore and Deputy Sergeant John A. Selph and then ran through the front reception room, firing wildly.

Policeman W. A. Toots, rushing to the jail entrance from the outside, was shot in the chest as the gangsters forced their way through the jail door.

Running through an alley next to the jail, Legenza and Mais held up a mail truck and forced Joe Richardson and H. D. Moon, Negro drivers, out at the point of a pistol. The men drove the truck several blocks to the door where E. T. Carpenter was parking a sedan, took it after dragging him from the seat, and drove away.

Every available city and State policeman was summoned to join in the hunt for the two men, who were awaiting transfer to the death cell in the State penitentiary for their part in the holdup and murder of E. M. Huband, Federal Reserve Bank mail driver, here last March. The warning went within 15 minutes to cities on every main highway and roads were guarded.

Legenza, who boasted at his trial that he had cracked safes from New York to New Orleans, and Mais, now suffering from six bullet wounds fired into his back by Baltimore police, had been guarded with great care. The manner in which they obtained pistols was not known.

There was disorder among the prisoners in the jail as the two gangsters began firing, but officers said none of them attempted to escape.

Unarmed jail attaches dropped to the floor and ran while Charles W. Moss, attorney for the two men and a member of the Virginia Legislature, ducked behind furniture in the room at the other side of the hall.

Moss said he had gone to the jail to confer with the two gangsters about an appeal to the Virginia Court of Appeals.

The wounds of Warden Moore and Deputy Sergeant Selph were not serious.

Legenza was to die in the electric chair Oct. 22 and Mais was to follow early in November.

CHARLES M. PARKER FUNERAL AT 2:30 P. M. TOMORROW

Former St. Louisan to Be Buried in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

The funeral of Charles M. Parker of Los Angeles, former St. Louisan and former president of the American Radiator Co., who died suddenly in Los Angeles last Wednesday, will be held here at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Interment will be private, in the family lot in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mr. Parker, 65 years old and unmarried, was a son of the late George W. Parker, St. Louis banker, railroad executive and Republican candidatae for Mayor in 1901. He was a brother of the late Clarence F. Parker, vice-president of the Illinois Central Railroad.

Entering the employ of the Radiator company as a young man, Mr. Parker later was placed in charge of the European plants of the company, with headquarters in Berlin. After becoming president, he resided in Chicago. When the United States entered the World war he became a captain and later a major in the army, assisting in organizing production of airplanes. He retired from active business after the war, but retained his place on the board of directors of the radiator company.

U. S. Chamber of Commerce Head Hopes It Will Yet Correct Many Business Defects.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and a member of the NRA Industrial Advisory Board, today said the resignation of General Hugh Johnson and the reorganization of the NRA came just in time.

"The National Recovery Act had fallen into serious disfavor and disrepute," he declared. "Extremists among the bureaucrats had extended it into fields it never was intended to invade . . . It was delaying the recovery it was meant to bring about.

"The NRA was intended as an experiment in industrial self-government. The Government was to act as umpire. It was intended to cover only the major industries. . . . engaged in interstate commerce. . . . While it has accomplished some outstanding good, its value in the form it took under General Johnson was very questionable."

Harriman said he hoped NRA would evolve into a wise measure that would enable business to correct many of its defects. He added: "without in any way limiting fair competition, it should function to end ruthless, cutthroat, suicidal competition."

KANSAS CITY WOMAN VISITS CONVICT WHO KIDNAPED HER

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 29.—Miss Mary McElroy, daughter of H. F. McElroy, city manager of Kansas City, Mo., is still "interested" in George McGee, serving a life term in the Missouri penitentiary for kidnaping her.

She visited him for about 20 minutes today in the office of Deputy Warden Tom Scott. Her last visit with him was during the latter part of July. Scott said Miss McElroy said she "wanted to help him (McGee) if I can," and that she was "very much interested in him. I think he has a lot of good in him."

Miss McElroy was abducted May 27, 1933, and released unharmed the following day after her father had paid half of the $60,000 ransom demanded by her kidnapers.

BELA KUN SPEAKS IN MOSCOW

Hungarian Bolshevist Leader Praises Third International.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 29.—Bela Kun, who headed the Bolshevist government which controlled Hungary for a short time in 1919, was one of the chief speakers at a celebration last night of the seventieth anniversary of the founding of the First International by the institution of Marx, Engels and Lenin.

Bela Kun declared the third Communist International, as pointed out by Lenin, was "a step toward the world's socialist republic of soviets" and the true successor to the organization established by Karl Marx in London.

NAMED TO ENFORCE STOCK EXCHANGE ACT

Jacob Gruber, 30 Years Old, Successful Prosecutor of Fraud Cases in New York.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Jacob Gruber, a 30-year-old Assistant Attorney-General of New York, today took over the task of enforcement for the Securities and Exchange Commission as assistant counsel. The anti-manipulative sections in the Stock Exchange Act become effective Monday.

Gruber, who will be assistant to John J. Burns, general counsel of the Commission, was said at the Commission to have successfully prosecuted 150 security fraud cases for New York State in the past three years.

Among the provisions of the law which will go into effect Monday are those penalizing manipulation of security prices through pool operations and the like, restricting activities of specialists, providing penalties for short selling in certain instances, and granting purchasers who have relied on statements filed with the Commission civil remedies against those responsible for misinformation.

Sections which will not become operative until Oct. 14 or later include the 25 to 45 per cent margin requirements established by the Federal Reserve Board, restrictions on borrowing by brokers or dealers, and prohibitions against trading in unregistered securities.

Registration Regulations.

The Commission today made public regulations permitting registration of securities which will not be listed on a national securities exchange by Monday but which it may be desired to list before the date when regular forms for registration are adopted.

Twenty-four exchanges have been formally registered with the commission. Twelve others have been granted a 60-day exemption.

In regulations promulgated today, the Commission said registration on a national securities exchange "will not relieve new issues from the necessity for registration under the Securities Act of 1933."

Pending preparation of detailed forms for information to be furnished for registration of securities listed or to be listed on an exchange, applicants will be required to comply with all the listing requirements of the Exchange.

Provision for Certification.

In addition, they will be required to furnish a simplified form of registration and to agree that the registration will expire if they fail to file the information to be called for by the prescribed forms within 90 days after such forms shall have been published.

The rules provide for certification by the exchange that its listing requirements have been met by the applicant and that it approves the registration of the security. It also is provided that the registration statement may become effective 30 days after the exchange has certified that its listing requirements have been met, or within such shorter period thereafter as the Commission shall determine.

GERLING DISCUSSES VALUE OF PARENT-TEACHER GROUP

Thinks Them Helpful in Bringing About Co-Operation Between Home and School.

The value of the Parent-Teacher Association in bringing about co-operation between the home and the school and in awakening the public into consciousness of the problems and aims of the school, was discussed by Dr. Henry J. Gerling, Superintendent of Instruction, in the school and community program on radio station KSD last night.

Assumption by the school of many duties formerly regarded as belonging to the home alone, while "a great and hopeful gain" had been accompanied by a marked loss of family solidarity, the Superintendent said. The Parent-Teacher Association could help to restore failing parents to a renewed consciousness of their responsibilities, he asserted.

"The second great value of the Parent-Teacher Association is in the mutual understanding it develops between parents and teachers," he said. "Parents can assist more intelligently when they understand what the schools aim to accomplish. Likewise teachers can cooperate more effectively when they know the purposes by which the parents are actuated and the conditions under which, in many cases, they are obliged to live. A parent's judgment of the school can never be better than his information concerning it."

ARTICLE TELLS HOW TO PLANT

The proper methods of growing plants from seeds are discussed in the September issue of the "Missouri Botanical Garden." The article is a revision of a similar account published in the bulletin of February, 1928, and widely copied by various horticultural journals.

It describes seed selection, desirable equipment, methods of watering and sowing, preferable soil mixtacles, transplanting the seedlings, sowing seasons, drainage, protection and fungus control. The bulletin can be obtained at the Garden at a small cost.

FORMER FRENCH OFFICIAL CHALLENGES LAWYER TO DUEL

Slapped on Face by Attorney; Seconds Will Settle Question of Weapons.

SAINT MALO, France, Sept. 29.—Jacques Renouvin, Paris lawyer, slapped the face of Guy Lachambre, former Cabinet member, yesterday and Lachambre has sent seconds to the lawyer demanding "satisfaction by arms" or apology for the "insult." As an apology appeared a remote possibility, the seconds were charged with settling the question of weapons to be used.

A traffic jam held up Lachambre's automobile on a street here. Renouvin, recognizing Lachambre, opened the door, reached in, and slapped him twice.

"I was a manifestant on Feb. 6," he said, "you are only an assassin." With all formality he handed Lachambre his card, saying "I await your seconds."

After consulting several friends, Lachambre, now a member of Parliament, decided to fight the duel.

The affair was the result of bitterness which has grown out of the riots last February when mobs stormed the Chamber of Deputies.

On Jan. 25 Deputy Andre Hesse and John Beineix, a lawyer, twice fired at each other in a duel in a football stadium at Paris. Neither was hurt.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 29.—Francis M. Goodrich, 19 years old, Clinton, Ill., pleaded guilty in Federal Court yesterday to a charge of sending an extortion letter demanding $25,000 to Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. Goodrich was allowed to enter a petition for probation and posted bond for $5000. He was arrested after threatening letters, mailed from Clinton, had been received by Gifford and Gov. Horner.

Control of Power

Big league pitchers know that power is not enough. The important thing is to control that power—particularly in tight situations where you've got to bear down to win.

The Ford V-8 gives you all the power you need—and some to spare. But that's only half the story. It performs superbly because it gives you sure, effective control of that power.

Speed that takes you over the pathways of the world and brings you safely home, as fast as you want to go. Stability on curves and a feeling of confidence in every tight situation. A quick change of pace that saves you minutes in traffic.

The Ford V-8 shortens distance, not so much by its top speed, but by the swiftness with which it resumes running speed after the inevitable stops and pauses.

It's a seasoned campaigner—this Ford V-8—and it has proved it can take it in many severe tests. It has scored important victories in road races at Elgin, Jacksonville, Los Angeles and Targio Florio. On Labor Day, three Ford V-8 cars broke all previous stock car records for climbing Pike's Peak. The Fords in this climb were equipped with high-compression cylinder heads, optional equipment for altitude driving. The V-type engine holds every major speed record on land, on water and in the air.

Every day—on every road—in the hands of hundreds of thousands of motorists—the Ford V-8 is proving its leadership both by outstanding performance—and by low cost of operation. Drive it yourself and see what a tremendous difference the V-8 engine makes.

KINGS OF JUGO-SLAVIA AND BULGARIA MEET

Confer Privately While Their Ministers Discuss the Balkan Pact.

By the Associated Press.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 29.—While the Bulgarian and Jugo-Slavian foreign ministers and Premier Gueorguieff conferred in Rilo Monastery today on whether Bulgaria should join the Balkan pact, King Boris of Bulgaria and King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia met privately at King Boris' hunting estate at Tsechamkorje.

King Boris at a brilliant banquet attended by more than 600 guests last night addressed King Alexander in these words: "Sire— I am particularly happy on this occasion to offer your majesties my warmest and most cordial welcome. It is with sincere joy that we salute this august visit because it constitutes a new manifestation of the sincere desire of both our peoples to follow a policy of genuine peace, mutual confidence, and hopefulness.

"The propinquity of our two peoples, their common Slavic origin, racial ideals, and their peculiar national interests make it imperative that we live as good neighbors in peace and harmony.

"Myself and the Bulgarian people know this noble desire is also dear to your Majesty, whom all hail as a wise and dignified guide of the destinies of the Jugo-Slavian people.

"As an interpreter of the sentiments of the Bulgarian people, I can assure you that this visit of your Majesty, which is a new and precious contribution to the efforts of Jugo-Slavia and Bulgaria for the consolidation of Balkan and international peace, will find a profound repercussion with us and reinforce the work of the rapprochement between our two countries, contributing to their prosperity, development, and progress."

King Alexander, replying, reciprocated all King Boris' sentiments and said he would work devotedly for the ideals and aspirations enunciated by his neighbor.

The sovereigns then drank toasts to each other.

UNITED RELIEF GOAL $3,250,000; DRIVE NOV. 14-28

Six Other Campaigns for Autumn, Winter and Spring — $3,718,500 to Be Sought in All.

Residents of St. Louis and St. Louis County will be asked to contribute $3,718,500 for private social welfare and relief work in seven campaigns in the coming autumn, winter and spring, it was announced yesterday by the Welfare Plan Committee.

This includes an estimated goal of $3,250,000 which United Relief will seek to raise in the principal campaign, Nov. 14 to 28. In the last annual United Relief collection, last December, the goal was $3,700,000 and $2,200,000 was raised.

Other campaigns of the coming season and their tentative goals will be: Y. M. C. A., Oct. 16 to 26, $149,500; Y. W. C. A., starting Jan. 15, $80,000; Salvation Army, January, $85,000; Girl Scouts, February, $24,000; Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A., starting March 15, $40,000; Boy Scouts, April, $90,000.

The character-building agencies, including the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A. and boy and girl scouts, are not members of United Relief and have conducted separate campaigns since United Relief was formed three years ago. Tom K. Smith, chairman of the Welfare Plan Committee, explained that joint announcement of the prospective calls for funds was made this year so that the public would be fully informed of the entire program of private welfare work. This, he added, would give opportunity for contributors to budget their subscriptions among the various agencies if they wished.

Requests of Three Groups.

Preliminary requests of the three organized groups constituting United Relief—the Community Fund, Jewish Federation and Catholic Charities—determined the estimated goal of United Relief, according to Leo C. Fuller, chairman of this campaign. An exact figure will be announced when the Joint Board of Review has gone through the budgets.

Formerly the home relief department of the Salvation Army was included in United Relief, while the Army conducted a separate campaign for money for its religious work. The home relief department recently withdrew from the Community Fund and United Relief, and the Army's campaign this winter will cover all its activities.

The Y. M. C. A. fund will be raised for needs of 15 months, from tomorrow to Dec. 31, 1935.

Money in the seven contemplated campaigns would be needed, Smith declared, "despite the great amount of relief funds being spent by the Government." He continued: "Private social agencies carry on necessary welfare work for which the Government does not provide funds, and the demands on the private agencies today are the greatest in history. The Government limits its expenditures to the supplying of food, clothing and shelter for the jobless. Private social agencies supply hospital and medical care for the needy, provide for widows, orphans and helpless old people, underfed, underprivileged children and the whole range of character-building activities."

Citizens' Committee of 100.

The Welfare Plan Committee consists of about 100 leading citizens. It was formed several months ago to survey private social welfare work in the city and county, in order to plan future work commensurate with community needs.

City Budget Director Meyers discussed the relief problem at a conference here Wednesday, attended by State Relief Administrator Wallace Crossley, Mayor Dickmann, Harry B. Wallace and Peter Kasius, chairman and director, respectively, of the Citizens' Committee on Relief and Employment, and others.

Voluntary contributions for relief have been greatly reduced during the depression, while Federal and municipal expenditures have been greatly increased, he pointed out. He presented the following summary of funds administered by the Citizens' Committee on Relief and Employment, exclusive of the CWA program:

1931—$1,683,725 spent, including $539,957 from the city and $1,143,768 from citizens, but nothing from the Federal and State governments.

1932—$3,526,133 spent, including $608,885 of Federal money, $814,547 from the city and $2,102,699 from citizens, but nothing from the State.

1933—$7,302,553 spent, including $4,867,617 of Federal money, $1,671,493 from the city, $79,988 from the State and $683,454 from citizens.

1934 (first eight months)—$6,289,719 spent, including $4,154,927 of Federal funds, $1,211,666 from the city, $494,996 from the State and $428,129 from citizens.

Total from Jan. 1, 1931, to Aug. 31, 1934—$18,802,132 spent, including $9,631,430 of Federal funds, $4,237,664 from the city, $574,985 from the State and $4,358,051 in voluntary public contributions.

Meyers declared the Federal, State and municipal governments would be responsible for relief for "some time to come."

Basis of Responsibility.

Discussing the basis of responsibility in caring for the needy and the unemployed, Meyers said:

"It is my opinion that all those families and individuals who are on the relief rolls by virtue of unemployment should be definitely fixed as Federal cases. These cases of unemployables in which relief is necessary are, in my opinion, the responsibility of State, county and municipal governments and the private charitable agencies. However, in the cases where there are unemployables who would not be dependent if the employables of the family were earning a living, such cases should also be Federal responsibility. On the border line cases that might fall in either the employable or unemployable group, the responsibility should be that of the agency whose resources are such that it can best handle the case, which would be the Federal Government. The relief of interstate transients should be Federal responsibility and of intrastate transients state responsibility."

Why Policy Is Desirable.

The policy he outlined is desirable, Meyers declared, because the Federal Government has taxing power superior to that of smaller political units, and because, "It is not fair to continue the policy as at present, with no State or local effort in some localities, while extreme pressure is exerted on other localities to match Federal contributions on some sort of ratio, with hardly two places alike." Governmental agencies should participate in bearing the relief load in the order of their power to tax—Federal, State, county and city—Meyers said. He added that in St. Louis the order has been Federal, city, State.

The $4,600,000 relief bond issue voted by the city in 1932 will be exhausted early next year. A program for handling the city's share of relief costs thereafter has not been adopted. City Counselor Hay has estimated the demand on the city will be $3,000,000 or more annually, beginning next year.

MOTHER QUITS WASHTUB FOR BIRTH OF QUADRUPLETS

Premature Arrival of Babies, Who Die in 20 Minutes, Due to Lack of Care, Doctor Says.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29. — Four babies born to Mrs. Joseph Spinelli today died 20 minutes later.

According to Dr. Nicholas Sabella, called by neighbors when it appeared that not only the quadruplets but also the mother would be sacrificed, Mrs. Spinelli had toiled until almost the hour of birth. The babies, the doctor said, were six-month infants and their premature birth was due directly to improper prenatal care. "Only a few hours before she had been working over a wash tub," he said.

Dr. Sabella said he had been told that Mrs. Spinelli recently applied to a hospital for pre-natal treatment and was told she would have to pay for it. But she had nothing to pay with.

Formerly a construction superintendent, her husband was out of work a year before he got his present CWA job in the Bronx at $12 weekly.

Mrs. Spinelli, 35 years old, has had six children, of whom three are living. Josephine, 17, goes to trade school. The others are Mildred, 15, and Antonio, 8.

READY TO BEGIN CHECK ON SALES TAX EVADERS

State Auditor to Put Agents to Work in Every County This Week.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 29.—A checkup on evaders of the State sales tax, who total nearly one-half of the estimated number of merchants and business concerns subject to the levy, will be started next week in every county in Missouri, State Auditor Forrest Smith said today.

After the sales tax of one-half of 1 per cent on all retail sales of tangible personal property and certain services became effective last January, Smith estimated, between 70,000 and 75,000 individuals and companies in the State were subject to the tax. This was based on lists compiled by his department. So far the largest number of tax returns filed is 37,718, for June.

Smith said he would appoint a special agent in each county to check on all individuals and companies coming under the tax law. Reports of these agents will be compared with returns filed. He said probably 12 agents would be appointed for St. Louis. Smith estimated this check could be completed in most of the counties in one or two weeks.

Under the sales tax law, an individual or company, not filing the required monthly returns and not paying the tax, may be penalized 10 per cent of the tax, plus interest at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent a month. The law defines failure to file a return as a misdemeanor, and authorizes such a charge for each separate month for which no return is filed.

Collections of the tax have been disappointing to sponsors of the law, who had estimated it would produce $7,000,000 a year, and possibly more. For the first six months the law was in effect, including June, the collections totaled $1,943,956. Checking of July returns and tax payments has not been completed.

Based on these figures, Smith estimated, the collections for 1934 would total about $4,500,000. The collections have been increasing from month to month.

Smith has requested Attorney-General Roy McKittrick to file suits against the municipally-owned water plants of St. Louis and Kansas City to compel them to pay the sales tax. These two plants and several smaller municipally-owned utility plants have refused to pay the tax, contending they are exempt under the State Constitution.

Four Killed in Auto Crash.

By the Associated Press

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 29.—Four persons were killed and another injured seriously in an automobile collision near here today. The dead: G. L. Mounce, 22 years old, of Houston, former University of Texas golfer; Miss Martha Caroline Wyatt, 18, of Houston; J. W. Clayton, 40, of Richmond, Tex., and Ernest Morgan of Houston. George Barnes, 22, of Austin, University of Texas student and a brother of Bruce Barnes, professional tennis player, was seriously hurt.

Rapid Increase in Population In St. Louis Region Proves Need for Planning, Report Says

Rapid rate of increase of the population of the St. Louis Region and of the metropolitan district within the region since 1900 has constituted "conclusive evidence" of the necessity of planning, according to the preliminary report of the regional survey and plan.

The second and concluding section of the report was made public last night by the St. Louis Regional Planning Association, which prepared it for the National Resources Board. The first section, containing numerous recommendations and conclusions, was published last Sunday.

Between 1900 and 1930 the average increase of population in St. Louis proper was 12.7 per cent, while it was 18.9 per cent in the whole region and 20.9 per cent in the metropolitan district or central residential and industrial area. The region consists of the city and all or parts of four Missouri and four Illinois counties surrounding it.

"The many problems which accompany a concentration of population are no longer ce ered within the central city," the report continued, "but instead, are spreading over a large area. The entire region must be considered as a unit, so that one portion will not grow at the expense of another.

Basic Pattern Satisfactory.

"The basic pattern of the region is logical and generally satisfactory. The detailed development is, however, much less satisfactory. The different urban land uses are not closely grouped or confined to separate well-defined areas, but tend to intermingle throughout much of the region. Both industrial and commercial establishments encroach upon residential sections and scattered multiple dwellings are found throughout certain portions of the residential area. The total urban growth has not spread uniformly, and there is much scattering of development, particularly in the outlying sections. Where such instability exists there can be no permanently desirable environment for any type of land use nor any well-founded economy.

"The most desirable form or pattern of the future of the region should be clearly defined. It should be given some official status. Individual, co-operative and public activities can then be directed in harmony therewith."

The report estimated that the metropolitan district would have in 1960 population of 1,890,000, which would require, including heavy industries, only 325 square miles, or 40 per cent of the district's area. It urged general zoning to control use of land under "a complete future organization," enabling each part of the region "to be used for its most logical and most productive purpose, higher standards of development, greater stability and less total cost for public improvements."

Population Estimates.

Population of the city proper in 1960 was estimated at 910,000; of the urban part of the metropolitan district at 955,000 and of the agricultural part at 25,000. It was concluded that land required for the urban population of the district, outside St. Louis, should be divided as follows: Residences, 101 square miles; multiple dwellings, 1.3; commercial, 6.5; industrial and railroad, 16; public and semi-public, 70; parks and playgrounds, 3; streets and alleys, 53; total, 252 square miles.

"This area," the report went on, "should be so developed that no large vacant tracts exist, and the different uses should be segregated into homogenous and properly related districts. . . . Much of the vacant land within this area should be developed with new housing facilities, primarily single family dwellings. The majority of this new development should be by individual or private action, but some public assistance is essential, particularly in regulatory and protective measures. The more important factors that should be observed in this development are that the facilities be developed in close relationship to the need and demand; that desirable standards regarding construction, lot sizes and the like be secured, and that development spread progressively rather than leave large intervening vacant spaces."

Complete reconstruction would be essential in slum areas, the report added, but individual and piecemeal efforts would not result in proper improvements, large-scale methods being necessary. A map in the report showed the principal area of slums, or undesirable housing facilities, as in St. Louis, between the river and Grand boulevard, flanking the central business section for a considerable distance to the north and south. One other such section was shown in the city—south of Manchester avenue and east of Kingshighway. In St. Louis County, Kinloch Park and small sections of Wellston, Brentwood and Webster Groves were shown as slums, while in East St. Louis, Granite City and neighboring East Side communities 11 slum areas were reported.

Insufficient Sewers.

Another map showed clearly the sections served with water and adequate sewers, or lacking such services. Only a few communities outside St. Louis were listed as having both adequate water and sewer facilities. The report discussed at length a serious lack of sufficient sewers for sanitary and storm water purposes. It advocated co-ordination of water supply systems, particularly those of St. Louis and the St. Louis County Water Co. Attention was called to the importance of Horseshoe Lake in the Cahokia drainage system, as the lake stores storm water, permitting reduction of the main outlet channel of Cahokia Creek to less than one-half of the size otherwise needed, at a saving in cost of pumping facilities of possibly $1,000,000.

Park area of the region was found to be divided as follows: 15 large parks, 5588 acres, including 2362 acres in eight St. Louis parks, 1670 acres in an Illinois State park near Grafton, and Lake Park, East St. Louis; 38 neighborhood parks, 721 acres, of which 17, containing 369 acres, are in St. Louis; 50 playgrounds and recreation areas, 172 acres; 40 squares and plazas, 84 acres; total 6625 acres. Recreational facilities in public parks of the metropolitan district were found to be distributed as follows: Four golf courses, 279 acres; 92 baseball and football fields, 172 acres; 170 tennis courts 28 acres; 38 swimming pools, 27 acres; 50 playgrounds, 55 acres; miscellaneous, 690 acres.

Outer Park System Needed.

The figures were used in the report to prove the inadequacy of park and recreational facilities. It was declared that an outer park system was especially needed in the region, and a map was included suggesting a complete system of such parks, interconnected by parkways along stream valleys. The parks would be combinations of hill and valley land largely, adjoining rivers and lakes in many instances, and utilizing submarginal land to a considerable extent. The largest ones would be in Monroe County, Illinois, between Waterloo and the Mississippi; on the Missouri, near Musick's Ferry; along the Mississippi, opposite Grafton, and, outside the region territory, along the Mississippi below Crystal City. A feature of the scheme was to dam the Big River at its mouth, forming a lake in Jefferson County.

"The region," said the report, "abounds in rivers, rugged topography, wooded areas and other interesting scenic qualities providing fine park sites. Their character and distribution would insure a representative system of fine variety and interest, as well as convenient access to all persons within the region. The parkways are primarily located along the streams, although certain ridges may be utilized. The majority of the streams should be protected against the encroachment of private development, in order that they may carry surface drainage and eliminate the need of expensive sewer construction. This objective is accomplished by locating a parkway along a stream, and a pleasing route is also provided for pleasure driving. Park and drainage authorities should cooperate in this matter throughout the region."

As to schools, the report asserted improved standards and economy would result from consolidation of many sparsely settled districts. It gave statistics on a general deficiency in school sites, according to accepted standards, and went on: "The existing major defects are: Instances where the site is poorly related to existing and probable future distribution of population; inadequate area in sites; unsatisfactory improvement, particularly playground facilities and landscape treatment; too many small school districts in outlying areas; utilization of the majority of the school grounds only during the school term, instead of the entire year."

Urges Highway Analysis.

Analysis of highway needs was urged by the report, for the sake of a balanced and economical program. The demand for improvements is not so essential now as in the period when use of automobiles was rapidly increasing, the planners declared, "and a somewhat different character of development is needed." Many unconnected highways and indirect alignments were found, requiring correction to give a unified and adequate system.

Advocating minimum right-of-way width of 100 feet for major highways, the report said only a few routes have adequate width, the widest being chiefly in St. Louis and St. Louis County. Many county roads, it was added, are only 40 feet wide or less, and eventually must be widened. A survey of traffic volume showed a range in a 12-hour daytime count from 12,867 vehicles on Clayton road near the city to 88 on State aid route No. 17 near Dupo.

Additional study was recommended as to necessity of elimination of the many railroad grade crossings in the region, there being a question as to the economy of separating some. Grade crossings delaying traffic and endangering motorists were found chiefly on the through highways, especially in Illinois. Widening and improvement of principal radial roads, provision of additional interconnecting routes in the urban section of the region, and extensions and connections in the outlying sections were recommended.

Turning to railroads, the report noted that freight terminals of individual lines were highly competitive, with much unnecessary duplication of facilities. It recommended careful study of commuter passenger service by railroads and other agencies, advocated consummation of the scheme for general railroad use of Municipal Bridge, and pointed to the advantage of grade crossing elimination in preparation for faster trains. As to local mass transportation, the report declared additional facilities would be needed, with existing lines as the basis. Direct routes, with limited stops and a minimum of traffic interference were suggested, with the prospect of a combination of subways and elevated or depressed automobile routes.

E. J. Russell, chairman of the City Plan Commission and president of the American Institute of Architects, is president of the St. Louis Regional Planning Association, in whose work many officials and citizens have co-operated.

The petition of Max F. Ruler, an attorney, for permission to file a claim of $5000 for legal services rendered the Prudential Casualty & Surety Co., which is now in charge of State Superintendent of Insurance O'Malley, was overruled yesterday by Circuit Judge Hamilton. O'Malley objected to the claim on the ground it was presented after the time for filing claims expired.

Ruler said he was not aware of a court order fixing a time limit, as during the period embraced he was suffering from loss of memory and nervousness due to illness of his wife and also from mental anxiety over the loss of about $100,000. He contended the court could exercise discretionary power if it saw fit and permit him to file his claim.

Counsel for O'Malley said the law providing for a time limit in such matters makes no exception on account of mental lapses. Ruler asked Judge Hamilton for a rehearing, alleging the decision is erroneous.

New Auto Term Is Introduced in Tests By Dr. Andrew H. Ryan

Motordom finds itself enriched by a new term, "auto fatigue." The man originating the expression and fixing its meaning is Dr. Andrew H. Ryan of Chicago, who makes it the theme of a report on a six-months' series of automobile driving experiments apparently due for animated discussion in automobile engineering, medical and lay circles.

Dr. Ryan is the scientist whose duties of occupational fatigue, made during the war in association with Professor F. S. Lee and P. F. Florence, proved of tremendous value because they enabled American and British war material plants to increase their production efficiency, while safeguarding the workers' health and physical well-being.

In his latest researches, Dr. Ryan determines the comparative degree of discomfort experienced by drivers of and passengers in different makes of automobiles. Aided by a laboratory full of queer instruments and machines and assisted by a crew of selected subjects, both men and women who drove different cars over 2000 miles daily, he determined which of the cars driven is less fatiguing than the others.

Dr. Ryan does not indulge in generalities but puts his findings out in definite figures. Persons having had access to Dr. Ryan's tests are of the opinion that they will cause even more comment than attended the introduction of some of the latest developments in motor car mechanics.

Rare Mineral, Used For Spark Plugs, in Ford Exhibit at Fair

Only Known Deposit of It Is in California Mountain Fastnesses.

The gigantic educational exhibit of the Ford Motor Co. at the Century of Progress Fair is a trip of exploration, for it is not only a tribute to man's ingenuity and accomplishments, but also an exposition of how man, with all his ingenuity, must in the last analysis fall back on the elements of Nature.

One sees iron ore, copper ore, aluminum, cork, glass, rubber, wool and a host of other natural elements, traced from their raw state into the finished product which goes to play some part in the modern Ford V-8 car.

The lowly soy-bean plays an important part in the car's fabrication. That exhibit attracts many visitors and causes much comment.

An exhibit, labeled Sillimanite, is of a rare mineral. The commercial deposit of it known in the world today is in the remote fastnesses of California, near the Nevada border. It is a tough hard mineral, which must be brought down 12,000 feet on the backs of burros.

It is ground in miniature mills, mixed into a plastic state, filtered and formed into little, round "blanks." Then it is fired, at 2900 degrees Fahrenheit, and takes shape as a spark plug core or insulator.

Pontiac Connecting Rod Balance Result Of Exclusive Process

An important factor in the smoth operation of an automobile engine is the uniformity of balance and weight of its connecting rods. Perfect balance and uniformity of weight of Pontiac connecting rods are claimed as a result of an exclusive design and a patented manufacturing process.

St. Louis Ford Branch Prize Winners

Ninety-one prize winning service managers and parts merchandisers for Ford dealers in Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri photographed at the Chase Hotel last week, where the awards had just been made by M. N. Johnson, St. Louis manager for the Ford Company. The prizes awarded were for the greatest percentages of increase in service activity. The prizes ranged all the way from 15 trips of four days each to Chicago and A Century of Progress to fitted toilet sets.

Oldsmobile Shows Big Increases in 1934 Retail Sales

"In St. Louis and St. Louis County, Oldsmobile has enjoyed a most outstanding public acceptance, as reflected in registration figures," states H. A. Klees, zone manager of Olds Motor Works in St. Louis. For four consecutive months Oldsmobile has out registered all but three makes of cars.

Klees states, further, that 29 key cities in the St. Louis zone are registering in fourth place or better. "Oldsmobile business is good and the outlook is even better," states Mr. Klees.

"Oldsmobile retail sales for the first 20 days of September are continuing to reflect the successful sales records being made by Oldsmobile this year," states D. E. Ralston, vice-president and general sales manager of Oldsmobile. "Retail sales for the first 20 days of September are 94 per cent ahead of the same period last year. Reports from our dealers in every section of the country point to this month as being one of the largest Septembers in Oldsmobile history," said Ralston.

"Production at the Oldsmobile factory for the year up to and including Sept. 20 is 115 per cent greater than production for the same period last year. The splendid record made by the Oldsmobile six and eight this year leads us to look forward to increased volumes for Oldsmobile in the future. In anticipation of larger volumes the factory is now undergoing an expansion program which will materially increase our production facilities."

In the 1934 Pike's Peak race, in which B. D. Hammond smashed the stock car record, the first three places were captured by stock Ford V-8's with original Firestone tires. The 12-mile Pikes Peak course has 203 dangerous hairpin turns and leads to a height of 14,000 feet above sea level. The road bed of crushed granite is acknowledged as a test of non-skid safety. According to C. E. Routh, Firestone St. Louis district manager, during the eight consecutive years that Firestone tires have been on the winning cars, engineers have gathered data that has enabled them to build better tires each year, with more non-skid safety.

Major Brower Is New Manager of General Air Express

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Appointment of Maj. L. G. Brower as general manager of General Air Express, was announced today by Rogers M. Combs Jr., chairman of the system and air express traffic manager of American Airlines.

Brower, a former World War flyer and graduate of Cornell University, has been connected with General Air Express as New York sales manager, since December, 1932, shortly after organization of the system.

"Auto - Fatigue" Test in Operation

Chevrolet to Give Badges to Qualified Master Mechanics

The Chevrolet Motor Co. is about to put in effect a nationwide plan for awarding special master mechanic badges to those qualified in service stations.

Eligibility to the recognition will depend not only on character and length of service, but also on the applicant's proof of superior ability. He will have to take two examinations, a month apart, on Chevrolet service methods. Dealers may recommend for the badge only employes who have worked for three years as automobile mechanics and at least one year on Chevrolets. Examinations will be given by zone service representatives. All records and examination papers will be judged at the central office, Detroit, which will forward the badges to those who make good.

Before the zone service representatives give the examinations, they, too, must pass them under the zone service manager, who previously must have passed the examination himself.

The badge will be a large oval medallion engraved with the employe's name and the title "Chevrolet Master Mechanic." It is believed that service customers will welcome the innovation, since they will recognize in badge holders mechanics whose ability is attested by the makers of the car.

Mexico Invests in Roads.

In addition to the millions of pesos spent on the main national highways, chief of which is the Mexico City-Laredo road, the Government of Mexico, in co-operation with various state governments, expended during 1933 more than 5,000,000 pesos on secondary roads which are to branch in some cases from the national highways and some of which will form short stretches of the national highways.

Dodge Zone Executives Predict Sales Will Hold Up This Fall

The practically unanimous opinion that September deliveries of passenger cars and trucks by Dodge dealers will exceed the sales figures of August, and that October business will outstrip sales in July, pervaded a two-day conference at Detroit attended by factory executives and by managers of the 12 geographical regions composing the Dodge Brothers field organization.

The principal subject of the discussions, cited by A. Van der Zee, general sales manager as having prompted the gathering, was the realization that the closing months of the present year would afford a close parallel with the fall of 1933, in which Dodge dealers' retail sales continued in very sizable volume without a seasonal slowdown.

Among the plans presented by Van der Zee and his factory associates for taking advantage of the favorable conditions confronting Dodge dealers, are an autumn advertising campaign, the enlistment of additional man-power to handle the expected large volume of business and a general widening in the scope of dealer activities.

Reo Opens Safety Campaign Planned On Nation-Wide Scale

The Reo Motor Car Co., Lansing, Mich., began a National Safety Campaign the past week. The Steiner-Fahrenkrog Co. is in charge here.

This campaign is in line with efforts being made locally, as well as in every part of the United States, to reduce the toll of accidents on our streets and highways.

Reo claims that the development of the "self-shifter," an exclusive feature of Reo cars, is a great forward step in promoting motoring safety.

So Riders May See "Knee Action"

That riders may see, as well as feel, how knee-action units absorb road shocks, the Chevrolet Co. has built special demonstrator cars, each carrying an extra set of knee units mounted high above the front fenders, and linked to the chassis and wheels, so that they operate in unison with the units that actuallly support the car. The first use of the new demonstrator cars was at the Michigan State Fair, Detroit, carrying visitors on rides over a specially laid cinder track in which were imbedded large cobbles and railroad ties.

More New Trucks for City

The Milstrand Motor Company have delivered to the City of Saint Louis, Department of Streets and Sewers, in the past week the above five Dodge Dump Trucks for the Street Cleaning Section. The Milstrand Co., also delivered in the past 30 days three Dodge 1½-ton trucks to the City Lighting Department; two 1½-ton Dodge trucks for the Garbage Department and two heavy duty Dodge trucks to the Paving Division.

Hammer in Chrysler Fair Exhibit Strikes 15,000-Ton Blow

On the one hundredth anniversary of the invention of the steam hammer, without which the automobile industry could hardly have developed to its present proportions—Chrysler Motors have put into operation at the Chicago World's Fair a 4000-pound steam drop forge hammer.

This massive piece of mechanism, weighing more than 60 tons, is the only forging operation on the fair grounds and at the same time presents one of the most intricate of all forging operations—making steering knuckles for Plymouth cars. These are forged from red hot billets of steel at the rate of one a minute. The finished product is then shipped to Detroit for assembly into the automobile.

The force with which the hammer ram strikes the bottom die is equal to that of a 2000-pound automobile traveling at 40 miles per hour, striking an object. The average force of the blow is 15,000 tons. But it is possible to place an open face watch on the die and strike a blow so accurately gauged that the crystal of the watch is cracked without damaging the works.

Public Is Back To Quality Buying Says Auburn Head

AUBURN, Ind., Sept. 29.—One of the most hopeful signs of a permanent business improvement is that Americans generally are again getting quality conscious, Roy H. Faulkner, president of the Auburn Automobile Co., said here today in an interview.

Faulkner pointed out that during all major business let-ups price becomes the determining factor with the public generally and that quality of merchandise often is sacrificed to meet price. People, he said, in such periods ask, "How much?" not "How good?"

This attitude has been very apparent in the automobile business in the last three or four years, the Auburn executive said.

"The first of September of this year we brought out the new 1935 Auburns," Faulkner said. "These cars have been designed in the manner of America's most costly automolibes. The reception which the public has given them is gratifying. We believe that the appearance of these models, the fact that they are designed and built for people who want more than mere transportation have been responsible for this reception rather than price. Our actual sales are running triple to what they were a year ago.

Science Cuts Operation Cost.

As a result of latest mechanical improvements, costs of operating motor cars have been reduced approximately 25 per cent in the last two years.

Goodrich Silver Fleet Has Covered Almost 8,000,000 Miles in Tests

Since the Silver Fleet of the B. F. Goodrich company was formed, it has traveled nearly 8,000,000 miles in testing tires, it is announced by S. B. Robertson, vice-president in charge of the Goodrich tire division.

Previous to organization of the Silver Fleet as its official tire-testing group, millions of other miles had been traveled by Goodrich test cars, with the objective of constantly improving tire quality.

The company was the first in the industry to use automobiles for actual road tests of tires.

The original Silver Fleet was formed in January, 1929, when 14 cars and one truck left New York on a nation-wide tour. This ended on Nov. 1, 1929, when the fleet returned to New York after having traveled a total of 451,680 tire miles.

Upon completion of this official tour, Goodrich test car drivers were put in uniform and the practice of painting test cars silver was continued until today the Silver Fleet is among the noteworthy organizations of its kind in the United States.

On Sept. 1 of this year the distance covered by Silver Fleet cars had reached the total of 7,848,018 miles.

Speedometer Clause in Auto Code Aimed at Protecting Buyers

A vital feature in the Automobile Dealers' Code is that requiring that the speedometer be connected when a new car leaves the factory.

The code requires that: "A dealer shall on delivery of a new car from the manufacturer, inspect and ascertain that the speedometer on the new car is connected before using the car for any purpose. A dealer shall not disconnect the speedometer or permit it to be disconnected. The purpose of this provision is to insure the customer having full knowledge of the mileage traveled by the motor vehicle which is offered for retail sale."

Prior to the adoption of the code, it was customary for some factories and dealers to drive cars from the factories to the dealer's places of business, in some instances upward of a thousand miles, with the speedometer disconnected. After the cars reached their destinations, the speedometers were connected and the cars sold as brand-new.

The abuse of this method became objectionable in the instance of deliveries to the West Coast, although its general practice was felt to be to the disadvantage of the new-car buyer everywhere.

Under the code, the customer is now protected because, with the mileage shown, he knows the condition of the car he is purchasing. Ordinarily, the careful driving of a new automobile for a number of miles does not detract from its value, and in many instances the customer is appreciative of the fact that he is not required to spend the time in the tedious job of breaking in the new car.

Steel Custom Bodies Built for Chrysler Custom Imperial Cars

For the first time, an all-steel custom body is available. After exhaustive experiments, Chrysler engineers and the LeBaron-Detroit Co., custom body division of the Briggs Manufacturing Co., have designed this body for Chrysler Custom Imperial cars.

Four body styles on a chassis of 146 inches, and one on a wheelbase of 137 inches, have the all-steel custom body. This gives the entire Chrysler Airflow line the all-steel type of construction, as it was used on the Airflow Eight and the Airflow Imperial from the first.

Wood has given place to steel throughout. Body, frame and sill are welded into one unit, which is of fused, girder-type construction. Body panels and cross members are electrically welded, trussed and braced with steel at points of stress.

The all-steel custom body is said to be not only an improvement on the type formerly used in custom jobs in appearance, but also to give the added advantages of rigidity, strength and quietness.

Tour to Florida

Florida is the goal of many motorists at this season. There are numerous routes to that point—each a hard surfaced road, offering excellent stop-over accommodations and possessing individual beauty and points of interest. The following itinerary has been selected because of its directness.

Out of East St. Louis follow State 13 by way of Carbondale and Harrisburg to Shawneetown; at this point ferry the Ohio River and continue on Kentucky 56 to Morganfield on to the junction with U. S. 41; then 41 to Hopkinsville and East 41 to Nashville. That is the state capitol and some of the points of interest located there are Vanderbilt U., War Memorial Building, the Capitol, the Parthenon and Centennial and Shelby Parks.

From Nashville U. S. 41 leads to Jasper, Tennessee; then State 27 over Signal Mountain to Chattanooga. This region is famous for its scenic beauty and close by are the battlefields of Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mt.

Leaving Chattanooga, U. S. 41 is again followed, this time to Atlanta, Georgia. This is the largest city in the state and is the location of numerous Civil War battlefields. The Capitol is also located there. Close by is Stone Mountain, the famous Confederate Memorial monument.

Follow 41 to Macon, the site of various Indian mounds of Confederate fortifications and the birthplace of Sidney Lanier, then 41 to Valdosta to Lake City, Florida.

U. S. 90, the old Spanish Trail, goes directly from Lake City to Jacksonville. This route passes Osceola National Forest and borders close to Okefenokee Swamp which contains half a million acres of swamp land with its diversity of plant, animal and bird life. It was there that the Seminole Indians made their last stand against the white man.

From Jacksonville, U. S. 1 runs to St. Augustine to Daytona Beach to West Palm Beach to Miami to Key West. St. Augustine was the first permanent settlement in this country by Europeans in 1565; there one can see "Fountain of Youth," "oldest house in America," and the Old Sea Wall. Key West is the southernmost United States city and is reached by an oversea highway over Florida Keys.

Return may be made by way of the west coast over U. S. 41 through St. Petersburg, Tampa and back to Lake City.

Buick Sales Ahead Of Last Year, Dealer Stocks Much Lower

FLINT, Mich., Sept. 29. — Sales of Buick motor cars continued at high seasonal levels during the second 10 days of September with domestic retail sales totaling 1734 units as against 1780 in the previous 10 days and 1325 in the corresponding period a year ago, it was announced today by W. F. Hufstader, Buick general sales manager.

"The volume during the period just ended exceeded that of any corresponding period of the past four years," Hufstader said. "Last year 1325 cars were sold in the second 10-day period of September, in 1932 the total was 677, and 1931 the volume was 1671.

"The first 10 days of September likewise established a four-year record, making the first 20 days of this month the best since 1930."

Hufstader said there has been a healthy reduction in dealer stocks, there now being approximately 2000 fewer cars in the hands of dealers than on Aug. 10. Since Sept. 1, dealer stocks have been cut by 1400 cars.

Auto Retailing Code Protects Buyer on Installment Basis

About 60 per cent of all new car sales today are purchased on time contracts. To protect this army of buyers, the Motor Vehicle Retailing Trade Code contains a provision limiting charges for financing retail conditional sales. The code states:

"Charges for financing retail conditional sales shall be upon an equitable basis to consumer and dealer. No dealer, in financing conditional retail sales, shall charge a lower rate than the lowest or a higher rate than the highest rate charged by regularly established finance companies in the same district as the dealer."

Rubber Fenders Ease Ship Docking Shocks

Danger of damage to ship or dock during docking operations has been reduced by a new rubber dock fender that absorbs the shocks of contacts unavoidable when warping a vessel into its slip.

The new fender consists of sections of tough compounded rubber tubing, suspended over the sides of docks and slips with steel cables. The cables run through the tubes. Washers are attached to the lower ends so the fenders can't fall off when used vertically.

The rubber of which they are made is the same compound used in the tires of their manufacturer, the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

The Pittsburgh supply boat, "Frontier" at Sault Ste. Marie, has this fender applied as a strake around the stern of the ship and two tugs of the Great Lakes Towing Co. have two bow fender installations of the same material.

Cotton Pads for Curing Concrete Highways.

Tests of a curing pad utilizing cotton as a filler already have proved successful on several concrete paving propects in Texas. The cotton pads are more effective in insulating fresh concrete against the heat of the sun than any of the methods now in use. In addition, the average curing time was reduced from 10 to six days.

Autos Sent Rolling Down Ramp to Test Variety of Road Rails

Devices to Make Roads Safer Tried on Proving Ground by Highway Engineers.

Obsolete automobiles were sent crashing at high speed into road guard rails, in tests conducted at Kansas City for 10 days under the supervision of highway engineers to determine the safety character of various designs and materials used in these devices. Many different types, ranging from standard steel cables to specially modeled steel ribbons were charted as to their ability to withstand shock.

A proving ground has been constructed in Kansas City and an ingenious arrangement made to approximate actual service conditions as met on highways. A ramp, more than 300 feet in length, has been built on the side of a steep hill with the lower end leading onto a level roadway. Across this road and within a few feet of the ramp end, the guard rail to be tested is installed, according to specifications used in actual highway service.

Cars Smash Into Test Rails.

An old automobile is released from the top of this ramp without a driver. Gathering speed, it hastens down the steep incline on the wooden track then crashes full force into the test rail at an acute angle. Upon impact, the car deflects down the roadway and stops as it slides along, either breaking through the rail or staying in the roadway.

The impact of the speeding car, in some instances, snaps the eight inch square guard posts at their bases, and when deflected careens drunkenly for a considerable distance. One witnessing these tests can only be indelibly impressed by this dramatic example of the terrific momentum built up by a speeding car and the damage that can result when a car gets out of control.

Tests Photographed.

A complete group of instruments of many kinds are used in these tests by engineers to obtain a complete record of each experiment. The path, speed, damage, and deflection of automobiles, and the alignment, deflection, damage, point of impact, and a vast assortment of other data necessary to determine the character of the guard rail are collected. A battery motion picture cameraman photographs each test from various angles, so that a detailed study can be made of each test.

"Through these tests, the Highway Department is obtaining additional information as to the safety character of guard rails of various designs and materials, as well as the particular type best suited to meet each service condition," T. H. Cutler, Chief Engineer of the State Highway Commission, said.

Experiments to check the effectiveness of safety in other devices are regularly made by the Department.

U. S. Rubber Co. Plantations Produce 49,000,000 Pounds

Forty-nine million pounds of rubber, an amount three times greater than that produced by all other American rubber companies combined ,was produced by the U. S. Rubber Co. on its plantations in Sumatra and Malaya last year. The plantations cover 135,000 acres, of which 99,000 are planted and 83,000 are in tapping.

Industrially, the growing of rubber is most important farming project in the tropical zone. It is also the most painstaking one. It requires foresters to study trees, soil experts to study land, engineers to solve drainage problems, and chemists to delve into the mysteries of latex, the milk from which rubber is derived.

But all the work—clearing of jungles, removing stumps, drainage land, breaking ground, growing seedlings from selected seeds, budding, grafting, transplanting and carefully tending young plants, building roads, railways, wharves, storage tanks and structures to house power plants, equipment and employes in a wild, tropical country—places the manufacturer in the advantageous position of controlling quality of the product from the beginning.

The U. S. Rubber Co., in addition to plantations, operates its own chemical plants, cotton mills, research laboratories, and manufacturing plants.

England Wars on "Night Tooting."

As the result of an effective "anti-honking" campaign waked in London during sleeping hours, the Ministry of Transport plans to extend the "no noise" order to every city and town in the country. Thus England will become a vast silence zone between the hours of 11:30 p. m. and 7 a. m., as far as motor horns are concerned.

Packard Rearranging Plant to Prepare for Building Low Priced Car

With a complete rearrangement and renovation of its plant well under way, the Packard Motor Car Co. has started a major readjustment of its organization.

The changes and additions in both personnel and manufacturing facilities are being carried out not only to maintain sales of Packard cars, but also in anticipation of the greater activity to follow introduction of the low price car on which Packard is now intensively at work.

Without requiring any decrease in manufacturing operations on its present cars, the factories in Detroit have been going through the biggest program of rearrangement in the history of the company.

Through intensive study and employment of the most modern methods of factory layout, the mile-long plant is being made into two separate plants, in one of which manufacture of Packard cars will be carried on, while the new and much smaller car will be built in the other. Both plants will be among the most compact and efficient in the industry.

The new car will be built in large production without any major increase in factory space as a result of the work now in progress.

Reorganization in connection with the smaller car was started months ago with the addition of more than 90 engineers to the engineering department.

Revenue derived by Federal, state and local governments from motor truck taxation climbed to a new peak in 1933 when the more than 3,000,000 trucks registered were assessed $303,467,000 in registration fees, gasoline and excise taxes, according to "Automobile Facts and Figures" now being released by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Truck taxes have continued to increase in face of a decline in truck registrations. Though trucks were but 13½ per cent of the motor vehicles registered last year they paid nearly 27 per cent of the special motor vehicle tax bill.

"The climb of motor truck taxes has paralleled the rise of all motor vehicle taxes," declared Alfred Reeves, vice-president and general manager of the motor organization.

"The motor truck is one of the highest taxed commodities in the country, and the revenue received therefrom is a substantial part of the cost of state highways. In addition to the highway use taxes, truck owners are paying huge sums in personal property taxes on trucks in operation and income and property taxes on garages, terminals, repair shops and trucking companies.

"These increasing burdens must, of course, be added to the price of foodstuffs and other necessities hauled over the highways.

"In several high-tax states the decline in registrations is more pronounced. Special highway taxes have been diverted to other uses than roads, thereby impairing progress with highway transportation."

Car Upkeep High in Germany.

The upkeep of a small automobile in Germany costs approximately $80 a month, while the maintenance of the so-called "midget" cars, which are verey popular in the country, is estimated at $48 a month. The items making up these figures include depreciation, insurance, garage, gasoline, oil and repairs.

Cadillac, La Salle Sales In September Maintain Monthly Gains Over 1933

Sales of Cadillac LaSalle cars continue not only to maintain their month by month lead over the same months of last year, but during the first 20 days of September show a 9 per cent increase over the same period of August this year, and give every indication of reaching the highest September total since 1931, according to J. C. Chick, general sales manager.

Compared with the first 20 days of September, 1933, Cadillac LaSalle sales for the same period this year are 48 per cent greater, and, according to dealer reports, the demand is increasing.

This substantial development is largely attributed to two factors. First, a remarkable expansion in the nation-wide Cadillac LaSalle dealer organization during the present year and, secondly, an increasing tendency on the part of the motoring public to buy during the autumn months in order to enjoy the comfort, reliability and security of a new car during the exigencies of winter driving, Chick said.

Dealer reports from all sections of the country indicate that Cadillac LaSalle sales will not only maintain the 25 per cent lead shown to date over the same period of last year, but owing to the growing business activity in many sections, will substantially increase this lead during the balance of the year, according to Chick.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Securities markets brightened again this week.

Wall street had feared last week's rally was just a technical rebound, but resumption of the forward movement this week aroused hopes that there had been a real change of trend.

Commodities turned reactionary, however, which, together with strength of the dollar in foreign exchange dealings, gave a "hard" money pattern to the markets.

Both stocks and bonds were lightly traded, as Wall street was still extremely cautious. The Standard Statistics Co. price index of 90 representative stocks, however, advanced 1.1 points to 72.3, and of 60 corporate bonds, .7 to 83.6.

Wheat was under considerable pressure, partly in sympathy with foreign markets. Chicago futures prices showed declines for the week. Corn held about steady but cotton at New York lost about $1 a bale. The heavy ginnings to date have caused some conjectures as to whether the crop may not have been under-estimated.

Trading on the New York Stock Exchange in September hit a new low for the last 13 years.

Total sales for the month approximated 12,600,000 shares, the smallest since August of 1921, when only 10,990,000 shares were traded.

The volume for the preceding months was 16,690,972 shares, and for September of last year 43,333,974 shares. The biggest monthly turnover on record was 141,700,000 shares in October, 1929.

This month was the first in years in which there was not a single day with a volume as large as 1,000,000 shares.

The "hard" money pattern of the markets seemed to spring chiefly from strength of the dollar against sterling. It advanced against the gold currencies as well. The British equalization fund seemed to be letting the pound go down at a time when seasonal pressure is normally against it. This is the period when London buys dollars to pay for cotton and tobacco imports. It was rumored in the exchange market that some unusually large payments for tobacco were being made.

Await President's Address.

This appearance of the markets led to considerable speculation as to whether any change in the administration's monetary policy might be pending. The securities markets turned rather hesitant toward the end of the week, awaiting President Roosevelt's address. It was recalled that it was almost a year ago that he announced the gold price fixing policy in just such an address.

The best business news continued to come from merchandising organizations. Reports indicated that retail trade is still holding well above a year ago. Steel production is also gaining a little. The week's reports of both power production and freight movement, however, showed moderate recessions from the previous week.

Settlement of the textile strike was welcome news at the start of the week, but appeared to have been discounted in advance as a market factor.

Wall street was prepared for the taking effect of important provisions of the Securities and Exchange Act next Monday. Marginal rules were published, but their effective date deferred until Oct. 15. The rules were about as expected, and were regarded as probably a trifle less severe than marginal requirements generally in effect.

Listless Week-end Trade.

Markets remained in a rut at week-end session as the curtain fell on the third quarter of the financial year, leaving memories of the dullest September trading in stocks since 1918, the final year of the war.

In contrast with its boisterous exuberance in former years at this season, the share market had a meek and subdued air as Wall street prepared to accept, starting Monday, full Federal control of security exchanges.

Stocks moved listlessly, firming toward the finish, through a session which contributed only 222,370 shares to the month's turnover.

Elsewhere along the financial front a disposition to mark time also was apparent. In part, the quiet was characteristic of week-end trading, but it was accentuated by the desire of traders to hear what President Roosevelt has to say in his "fireside talk" tomorrow night before making new commitments.

United States Government bonds steadied but other groups for the most part eased off following the recovery of the investment market from the mid-September low points. Commodities were mixed, with grains tending lower and cotton rallying for net gains of 65 to 80 cents a bale. A break of 2½ to 3⅝ cents in old and new September wheat was ascribed to the closing out of options for the month. Other wheat futures were off ½ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel. Barley was up as much as 3 cents a bushel.

Mixed Changes Shown.

Mixed changes also were the result of routine motions in stock trading.

American Can, U. S. Steel common, General Motors and other pivotal shares rallied fractionally. Among rails, Santa Fe and New York Central firmed, the former finishing a point higher. American Telephone steadied, closing slightly higher after its decline in the preceding session.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks was two-tenths of a point higher at 72.3.

Steel reports encouraged hopes for a pick-up in demand in the fourth quarter. Automobile makers were expected to come into the market for steel for new models. In preparations for 1935 operations, the automobile industry continued to curtail operations this week. Cram's reports estimated output at 37,234 units, a decline of 1095 compared with the week previous and 6666 below the total for the like 1933 week.

The British pound closed ¾ of a cent lower at $4.96⅛, but the French franc showed a gain of .00⅛ of a cent at 6.64½ cents. Belgian belgas and German marks rallied .03 of a cent each to 23.58 cents and 40.56 cents, respectively. Dutch guilders firmed .02 of a cent at 68.35 cents and Swiss francs were up .01 of a cent at 32.90 cents. Canadian dollars were 1-16 of a cent higher at 102.75 cents. The Shanghai dollar eased ⅜ of a cent to 36.40 cents.

Orders as "Old Accounts."

Announcement was made today through the New York Stock Exchange that orders executed on the exchange yesterday and today will have the status of old accounts" and thus will not be immediately subject to the new margin requirements laid down by the Federal Reserve Board. Such transactions will have the benefits of provisions of sections 7-A of the Federal Reserve Board regulation even though they are not entered in accounts until after Oct. 1, when the new margin requirements will be effective.

STOCK EXCHANGE TOPICS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The stock market came to the end of its September trail today in the same mood of indecision and hesitation which characterized the start of the month. From a technical standpoint, the month provided an important test of the resistance points established July 26. But there was no indication of a decisive turn in secondary trend, which has been on the downgrade since February. The rally this week came within a couple of points on the average of duplicating the August rally tops. Until stocks have broken out of the trading range they have been moving in the past two months, most market analysts prefer to temper bullish views with a large amount of caution.

Insofar as a change in the general position of the market was concerned, the net result of September trading in stocks was virtually nil. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 selected stocks at the end of August stood at 72.6. Today it closed at 72.3. The character of the group movements underwent some change, however. Gold and silver shares relatively lost ground, while utilities and rails earned a little more bullish favor as result of waning inflation talk.

Both in business and in the stock market, September failed to live up to its reputation, enhanced during the bear market years, as a pivotal month. From 1929 onward, September proved a month of decisive importance in that it marked the start of new phases in the cycle of deflation and, in 1932, of reaction from a big upswing. Last year the action of the market was rather confusing, but trading was comparatively active and swings fairly broad. This September was the dullest and most disappointing to brokers and stock market followers in at least a decade. Usually after Labor day Wall street has been taught to expect an expansion in speculative activity. But not in one session did the volume attain a million shares on the Stock Exchange. The turnover last Tuesday at 839,085 shares, was the banner session of the month.

COTTON MARKET SCORES ADVANCE AT WEEK-END

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Cotton reversed its recent trend by advancing about 75 cents a bale today. Reports received in the trade regarding a more general disposition of farmers to accept the 12 cent Government loan offer aided the tone, and December rallied from 12.33 to 12.52, closing at the high. The general market ended steady, at net advances of 13 to 16 points.

Initial prices were 3 to 8 points lower in sympathy with relatively lower Liverpool cables and owing to an accumulation of overnight selling orders credited to old long domestic and foreign account offerings from the South were noticeably lightened following the call and when the initial selling orders had been executed offerings became relatively scarce.

The lessened pressure from the South was attributed to reports that at present levels, more cotton was going into the Government 12 cent loan and that less cotton was coming out from the interior.

Demand was fair and prices rallied about $1 a bale above the initial lows. This carried the general list up to net gains of 13 to 16 points with October rallying from 12.20 to 12.41 and May from 12.53 to 12.74. Final prices were at the top.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 111,000 bales against 132,000 last year and 138,000 two years ago.

MONTH'S BOND TRADE TOTAL $285,000,000

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The bond market tore another month off the calendar today without any particular indication as to what it intended to do with October.

Closing prices were moderately irregular and trading quiet. Transfers totaled $4,049,000, par value, against $7,743,000 last Saturday. The Standard Statistics average for 60 domestic corporate issues was off one-tenth of a point, the only decline of the week. For the six trading days this average was up seven-tenths of a point.

The turnover in bonds for September amounted to $285,009,000, par value, compared with $317,108,000 in August. The Standard Staistics Co. composite for the last month showed a net loss of half a point.

U. S. Government securities were dull in today's brief session, but gaisn of 1-32d to 6-32ds of a point predominated in this list.

Several of the rails reacted fractionally to around a point under profit taking. Among these were bonds of Alleghany Corp., Baltimore & Ohio, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific. Loans of Wabash, Pere Marquette, Northern Pacific and Hudson & Manhattan improved.

Paramount issues were again the gainers by a point or so. Loans of U. S. Rubber, Interboro Rapid Transit Goodyear, International Telephone, McKesson and others were slightly higher.

The foreign department was listless and somewhat mixed. Some obligations of Argentina, Chile, Brazil, Germany and Japan eased.

SILVER TRADE UNDECIDED

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Negotiations continued today between various commodity brokers and interests identified with the Toronto and Montreal Stock Exchanges concerning the question of consolidating the proposed silver futures trading markets of the two exchanges.

While no statement was issued, it was indicated that a tentative agreement had ben received, but would not be made public pending further conversations with a number of brokers who have thus far failed to commit themselves one way or the other in the matter.

The majority of them were said to be unanimous in their belief that there was insufficient business at the present time to justify a futures market in both cities.

The opening of the Montreal Silver Exchange, originally set for Monday, has been postponed until Wednesday, at which time it is expected that a definite decision will have been reached on the question of consolidating with the one now established in Toronto.

SEPTEMBER WHEAT SHARPLY OFF IN FINAL TRADING

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Flashing swiftly downward like exhausted fireworks, prices for September delivery of wheat fell 4⅝ cents a bushel in the last few minutes of today's dealings.

The tumble of values furnished a bit of excitement for the time being, and had a sympathetic disturbing effect on quotations for December delivery of wheat. The collapse, however, appeared to be due almost altogether to belated selling-out on the part of a few holders of September contracts who had incorrectly expected that speculators short of wheat to adjust accounts would be compelled to pay fancy prices in an end-of-the-month squeeze.

Wheat closed nervous, with something of a rally, ½ cent to 3⅝ cents under yesterday's finish, December $1.02¾@1.03; corn ⅜@1¼ down, December, new, 77¾@78c; oats unchanged to 2 cents off, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents decline.

Contributing to weakness of the wheat market was the fact that numerous would-be buyers appeared to be holding off to relieve themselves of uncertainty in regard to what President Roosevelt might say in an address scheduled for tomorrow night. Another bearish circumstance was that Liverpool wheat quotations today and the market at Buenos Aires yesterday showed new downturns. Furthermore, a handicap to friends of higher prices for wheat was considerable selling of wheat here against purchases of corn.

Advocates of a spread in which wheat was sold and corn bought said corn husking returns would disclose new reductions of yield in many areas, and that there would be a ready demand for corn in the coming months. It was emphasized, too, that continued aggressive marketings of Argentine wheat were an unsettling influence on wheat values, despite domestic factors of wheat strength. On the other hand, October unofficial crop estimates Monday were expected to show a decrease of about 75,000,000 bushels of corn, compared with the Government's latest forecast.

Sympathy with late weakness of wheat, nevertheless, pulled corn and oats down, despite predictions of possible frost tonight in Iowa and other corn territory. A transient flurry in the oats pit early was attributed to buying for traders short of oats needed to meet month-end deliveries.

Provisions went lower with hog values.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 11,408,000 bushels, corn 5,741,000. Open interest in wheat was 148,352,000 bushels, and in corn 84,651,000.

WEEK'S METAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—A further reduction of $1 a ton in lead last week carried prices into the year's lowest levels. The decline, however, had the effect of materially stimulating the demand with practically all sources of consumption being represented in the buying. Favorable August statistics, showing a reduction of about 6300 tons in smelters' stocks or refined lead, and the increase in steel operations has helped to create a better feeling, and predictions have been made that a firmer position will follow the catching-up of demand with the current rate of consumption.

Zinc underwent a downward revision of $1 a ton. Although the ore situation and market conditions generally for the moment were unfavorable, the outlook was regarded as more promising. Current demand is admittedly slow, but some pick-up from galvanizers, etc., is anticipated coincident with the enlargement of steel operations.

Steel registered a marked improvement with the national operations going to 22 per cent of capacity, a gain of 2½ points for the week. Pressure on prices met stiffer resistance, as demand from the automobile industry expanded, in conjunction with heavier miscellaneous buying. Continued fears of eventual currency inflation and settlement of the textile strike helped to encourage freer buying.

Copper was quiet and unchanged at 9c for Blue Eagle. Action of producers in their recent meeting is believed to have removed the danger of an early reduction in price, which buyers believed inevitable because of the steadily accumulating unsold sales quotas. With this feature removed, buyers are expected to show more confidence in the outlook. Producers agreed to reduce output so as to establish a balance between production and consumption as a cautionary step in the event that future sales of copper fall below the code sales book of 30,750 tons a month.

Tin prices were alternately steady and unsettled, but ended the week with little or no net change. The decline in sterling was disturbing, but there was evidence of renewed consumer interest on recessions and prices hardened again on moderate buying.

Antimony continued quiet and unchanged. Europe reported a better demand, but the domestic situation remained slow. China's protest against the United States silver policy, and reports that the National Government might adopt a gold basis, attracted attention, but generally opinion was reserved pending definite developments.

Elmer Siem, driver of an oil truck for a St. Charles, Mo., firm, was robbed of $40 at 9:30 a. m. yesterday by three men, two of whom carried sawed-off shotguns, and forced him to stop his truck on a Warren County road near Dutzow, Mo. They commanded Siem to throw them the money, which was in a sack, from the cab.

A half-hour earlier the men were observed driving slowly past a bank in Dutzow before it opened, and after they left the town it was discovered the telephone wires had been cut on each side of Dutzow. County officers said they believed the men intended to hold up the bank but changed their plans because of a group of men standing across the street.

TEXTILE PEACE PLAN GOES INTO OPERATION

"Stretchout," Pay and Other Inquiries Under Way This Week.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The administration plan for peace in the textile industry will be put in operation early next week, with the appointment of a board to regulate the "stretchout," one of the causes of the recent strike. The new Textile Labor Relations Board will appoint this second group.

The Labor Department has prepared meanwhile to begin its inquiry into hours, wages, wage differentials and working conditions in the textile industry on Monday.

On Monday, too, strikers who have been refused re-employment will apply for work again, in a move to compile a new list of cases of alleged discrimination. These will be filed with the Textile Labor Board. Union leaders decided on this procedure, at the recommendation of the board itself, for the purpose of determining the number of such cases and their factual basis.

The "stretchout" is what Southern workers call the practice of gradually increasing the number of machines which an operative must tend. The Winant mediation board, appointed by President Roosevelt, asserted that importance of the "stretchout" as a cause of the recent strike could not be overemphasized and reported that the "stretchout" had increased under the textile codes.

The "stretchout" board will make investigations in mills selected by the code authorities and the United Textile Workers. By January it must submit a permanent regulation plan to President Roosevelt, and prior to Feb. 1 the manufacturers are forbidden to make any increase in the machine load.

Machine Load "Greatest Evil."

In a speech at Providence, R. I., today, Francis J. Gorman, national leader of the recent strike, declared the "stretchout" was a cause of real suffering for those who must work under it.

"We want and mean to fight until we get higher wages and shorter hours," he said. "But the greatest evil in the textile industry today is the machine load, and we mean to throw it off and return to a job which permits us to live without the nerve-wracking strain of overload.

"The report of the Textile Inquiry Board (The Winant Board) dealt at length with this question, and provided ways and means of correcting the evil. The code authorities in wool, cotton and silk have refused up to now to meet this problem.

"They have even permitted employers to increase the machine load since the codes became effective. Thousands of people here today are the victims of the machine load. I mean both those who are working under it and those displaced and thrown out of work on account of it."

Maine Mill Discontinues.

Discontinuance of operations at Westbrook, Me., by the Westbrook Weaving Company silk mill, whose 104 employes forced its closing during the recent textile strike, was announced today by Sidney R. Schulhofer, general manager. He said the company had relinquished its leases and was moving its property to other mills. The company opened in Westbrook a year ago.

Mayor Rufus K. Jordan said the unemployed operatives would not get city aid unless they earned it.

When the mill opened last Wednesday, only 25 of the employes were given work and the union opposed the return of any unless all were employed.

HITLER'S RADIO TALK TODAY TO CLOSE HARVEST FESTIVAL

600,000 'Noblemen of Labor' Formerly Known as Farmers, to Be in Ceremonies.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler will broadcast a speech throughout the nation tomorrow to end the Thanksgiving exercises on Bueckberg Hill. This town was chosen because it was in this locality ancient teutonic tribes routed the Roman legions.

At least 600,000 "Noblemen of Labor," to which status Nazi propaganda has raised German farmers, are expected to participate in thanksgiving ceremonies of the National harvest festival.

While the main show, with a procession of one deputation of peasants from each district clad in their native costumes, is presented on Bueckberg and culminates in Hitler's address, local festivals in small circles have been arranged in the remotest villages of the Reich.

The Thanksgiving celebration will be the largest and the only one in the Reich tomorrow. The Nazi propaganda ministry has seen to it weeks ago that other mass assemblies or separate local or church harvest festivals are forbidden, "in order not to interfere with the National holiday."

LA GUARDIA SIGNS INCOME AND BUSINESS TAX BILLS

Fate of Lottery, Approved by New York City Aldermen, Is in Doubt.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Two income and business tax measures, designed to raise funds for unemployment and home relief, were signed today by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, but the fate of the third relief measure approved by the Board of Aldermen—the lottery bill—remained in doubt.

One of the bills signed provides for a one-tenth of 1 per cent tax on gross business receipts, and the other for a 15 per cent tax on Federal income tax payments.

The tax on gross business receipts will double the rate imposed on business receipts earlier in the year, while the income tax impost will develop an entirely new source of income. "A tax on the books is worth two in committee," the Mayor commented.

How Handwriting Experts Deduced That Hauptmann Penned Lindbergh Notes

Cameras, Microscopes and Involved Mathematical Calculations Used in Long Study of Messages.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29—The most celebrated criminal case of a generation, the State vs. Bruno Richard Hauptmann, seemingly well turned upon so simple a thing as the strokes a man makes with a pen. When the stoic German stands up finally to face New York's extortion charge in the Bronx and later New Jersey's more serious charges in the Hunterdon County courtroom, he will know that the prosecution must prove to the jury's satisfaction that he wrote those 14 ransom letters in the Lindbergh case. And he will know that at least in New Jersey his life depends on whether or not the jury is convinced.

Hauptmann knew what was going to happen when, in the early hours after his arrest, the police forced him to write long passages from dictation. He got tired after a while and wanted to stop but they made him go on. After one writes a long time it's harder to disguise handwriting. Hauptmann's attempts at disguise in those "request writings" were obvious, an expert divulged.

Identification has proved the most difficult link to forge in the long, tangled chain of evidence. Dr. J. F. (Jafsie) Condon, the negotiator, failed to identify the prisoner conclusively as the ransom recipient. There were no eye-witnesses to the kidnaping. There were, despite rumors, no fingerprints found in the nursery at Hopewell, N. J.

Question of Fingerprints.

One of the mysteries of the case is whether any of the many ransom notes bore fingerprints, "latent" or otherwise. If experts are working on this, they are keeping it quiet. It has never been brought out definitely, either, that the kidnaper might have disguised his handwriting in the original notes. The analysts connected with the case, however, concede the boldness of the extortionist because he did not bother to use the most obvious dodge, block printing.

The Lindbergh case is faithful to the last in its records of superlatives, in that it will bring to the courtroom the most circumstantial evidence and the most testimony. But with all the careful structure built from the evidence, this testimony rests on one slender foundation—did Hauptmann write the ransom notes?

Hence one of the most important figures to the prosecution will be Albert D. Osborn, a laconic, well-dressed man of about forty, whose offices on the Woolworth Building's fortieth floor command a wide sweep of Manhattan Island. His name is on the office door under that of his father, Albert S. Osborn. Under the name of each is lettered neatly "Questioned Documents." Here, where the course of the most famous case may well be set, there is an air like that of an English barrister's quarters, quiet, leisurely.

Osborn already has given his opinion that the handwriting of the ransom notes and that of Hauptmann are the same. He is supported in this by Bert Farrar of the United States Treasury Department at Washington and by experts of the Federal Division of Investigation. These opinions will be presented before the jury in New Jersey when the state is ready to extradite the prisoner for indictment on charges of kidnaping and murdering the Lindbergh baby.

Osborn, the younger, the consultant in this case, will appear before the jury with samples of the handwriting of Hauptmann and the ransom writer, for comparative purposes. Enlargements of large size already have been made in the offices of Federal agents and police, who guard the evidence. The expert may carry microscopes, hand magnifiers and other paraphernalia to tell the layman jurors how he reached his decision.

It will be little comfort to the prisoner to know that the Osborns have seldom failed to influence a conviction. There was Manny Strewl, for instance. Manny obligingly volunteered to act as go-between in negotiations in the John J. OConnell Jr. kidnaping at Albany last March. The elder Osborn showed that the negotiator himself had written the notes, and Strewl went to prison.

The name of Osborn appeared in the news in 1930 in connection with the mystery of Starr Faithfull. Osborn testified that the young woman's diary entries and her suicide notes to Dr. George Jameson-Carr, ship's surgeon, were genuine. Miss Faithfull's letters to Dr. Carr told of her intent to commit suicide because of her love for him and because of the futility of her life.

His Wide Experience.

The elder Osborn, gray-haired and slightly deaf, has given testimony in many other celebrated cases, such as the suits resulting from the unsolved Arnold Rothstein mystery. He has testified in 39 of the 48 states, in virtually all of the provinces of Canada, and has been called on often for opinions by lawyers abroad. Moreover, he has written two textbooks on the subject which may be seen on his son's desk.

The younger Osborn will not discuss this particular case, since he is to be an expert witness in it, and feels, as he puts it, that "the case should be tried in the courts, and not in the newspapers."

However, it is possible to reconstruct the steps all the many experts must have taken in studying the handwriting involved. Though ransom notes and copies were naturally available long ago. It was possible from these to determine the sex, nationality and occupation of the ransom writer. These were—male, German and a carpenter. Photo-micrographs were made and enlargements of these were available, and many microscopic examinations were made. There were also mathematical calculations and tabulations.

The First Deductions.

The inconspicuous writing habits characteristic of the writer and him alone were engraved on the minds of technicians at the Division of Investigation's laboratories at Washington, and of police officials all over the country and in Europe. It was agreed that the man was "uncultured," obvious enough from the spelling itself.

It was discerned that the writer had first learned German. The foreign "accent" to the specimens showed many forms recognizable to the trained eye. Some of these customary German characteristics include the little, needless tip or curve at the top of certain letters; the small "s" and capital "p," the small "t" finish—close to the base-line and between the two strokes; the peculiar capital "W" with the low centers; the finish small "f" similar to the "T," the capital "I's" similar to the English "T;" disconnected small "a" and "g" with the top of the oval thrown far over to the left or made continuous; the small "o" made like the English "c," the capital "O" finished very low.

One German characteristic neither the ransom notes nor Hauptmann's writing show is the figure "7" with the usual cross strokes.

In the Bertillon system of indentification by measurements, only 11 measurements are made yet experience shows that the chance of these few traits exactly coinciding in two persons is as remote as to be nearly impossible. The variations in handwriting are innumerable, but the characteristic habits of a given writer are so few and easily defined that they can usually be identified as belonging to him alone.

Theory of Possibilities.

This gives rise to what Inspector H. H. Clegg of the United States Division of Investigation terms the theory of possibilities in handwriting detection. In the Lindbergh case the fact that the note writer was a German made him one in millions. For that matter he might have been Swiss, or Austrian or belonged to any German-speaking nation. The fact he was uneducated meant little more, nor was his occupation particularly significant, although that narrowed the field, making him one in perhaps thousands.

But when the tabulations of his writing habits were made, the ratio of possibility dwindled to what experts view as an even chance. No other man, they believe, can have that "o" open at the top; that "s" open at the bottom in just that way; that exact habit of tipping the upstroke of the "r," that precise sort of capital "D"; that same slant with the "9" and "7" in which the tail of the "9" is longer than the tail of the "7," no matter which numeral comes first.

These are just a few of the more elementary observations the analysts made up until the time Hauptmann was arrested, and since then they've had a field day.

Instruments and appliances of all kinds have been trained on Hauptmann's motor licenses and samples of his "request writing." They have been photographed, microscoped, and elaborate comparison charts made using the same words taken from the ransom notes and from Hauptmann's writing. Both specimens have been tested for movements of writing, including "rhythm," finger movement and alignment; pen pressure and shading; size, proportion and spacing of letters, words and margins, and so on indefinitely.

Final Comparisons.

Then came the most vital part of the handwriting analysis. Writing is identified much as a person is—first by comparing general characteristics that with a person indicate class or race, and then comparing that which is distinctly individual and personal.

The features and qualities of a particular writing are tested and classified as permanent or variable; habitual or usual; occasional, and exceptional or rare, and accidental. Variations in writing may be seen in several signatures of the same person, which may differ in one particular or another. The important fact here is that the variations themselves are habitual. This problem comes up oftenest, perhaps, in forgery cases. Investigators realize that fraudulent writing of this character shows painful attention to detail, and a labored effort to produce a certain definite form and outline. In other words, the forger's writing does not have the habitual variations of the genuine writing.

The expert, then, feels that he has identified a writing when there do not remain significant differences that cannot be reasonably explained.

The catch in this kind of testimony, of course, is that it may become so involved that it cannot be made clear to, or verified by the court or jury. Also conflicting testimony may be given by another witness apparently as well qualified. Analysts who realize this recommend that the testimony be simple and clear, and illustrated by well-designed and accurate photographs.

Study of Note Paper.

One of the most recent developments in the Lindbergh case was the disclosure that paper in Hauptmann's home had been found by investigators to be the same kind as that used in the ransom notes. This discovery, too, falls within the province of the authority on handwriting. Osborn, the elder, points out in his volume, "Questioned Documents," that the origin, identity or difference in paper is shown by its color, thickness, finish or surface, watermark, woven or laid style, cutting, size, ruling, padded or loose sheets, composition, rounded corners, and by the bookbinder's stitch or wire marks.

Micrometer calipers measuring accurately to ten-thousands of an inch are used on paper being compared. Folds, creases, perforations, blots, offsets, and cleanliness are checked. The exact tint of paper is determined in day light by the use of a color microscope. The paper is also examined to find whether it is regular note letter, legal or foolscap size, or some irregular or unusual size. It is tested to see whether it was colored on the edge or glued at the top or side. The exact width, uniformity, and color of the sheet's ruling is observed and any imperfections of the paper is noted.

In this way, the experts soon were able to give an opinion on the similarity of the Hauptmann paper and that of the ransom notes.

Private handwriting investigators find their criminal cases often among forgeries. However, the Federal agents, since the passage of the Lindbergh law, have inherited many extortion cases. The testimony of their experts has served to bring convictions in virtually all of these. Now, with their No. 1 case near trial, the Federal men hope to score once more.

ICKES DYNAMITES SLUMS AND GOADS LIBERTY LEAGUE

Says Bad Housing Will Have No Place in "Newer and Finer Social Order."

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Sept. 29.—Secretary Ickes here today challenged those "who are bewailing the loss of 'liberty'" to join "us in the organization of a 'Liberty League' for the clearance of slums."

"It is not enough," he said, "to crusade for 'liberty' for the captain of industry, the banker and the multimillionaire. These gentlemen, after all, have little to complain of. Let us instead enlist under the banner of President Roosevelt, fight for liberty for the underprivileged, for the liberty of men, women and children to have homes in the neighborhoods where they can at least have light and * * * sweet air * * * where they will not be forced to rub elbows daily with vice and corruption."

"Slums were the inevitable and universal by-product of a laissez faire social order. It was an accepted part of that America in which the strong had all the liberty they wanted to exploit the weak; where the sweatshop ground out the lives of mothers and was responsible for puny children born from worn-out bodies. * * * Slums will have no place in the newer and finer social order that we are evolving."

The slum projects were dynamited personally by the Secretary in Atlanta. He visited Spelman College, a Negro institution, and explained the Federal housing program. A moment later he touched off a charge that dynamited a Negro slum district nearby.

BODIES OF FIVE MEN KILLED IN SEWER CAVE-IN RECOVERED

Nine Scramble to Safety as Columbus (O.) Tunnel Collapses After Rains.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 29.—Five men were crushed and smothered to death 17 feet underground today in the collapse of a sewer tunnel in which they were working. Nine other men scrambled to safety, but returned and risked their lives in an effort to save hteir somrades.

They were balked by the tons of mud which slid into the tunnel as fast as the men could dig it out.

Several hours later the bodies of the five were recovered. The victims were Arthur Powers, 34 years old; Gaylord B. Stephenson, 29; Aaron Frazier, 41; Robert Holcomb, 30, and George Smith, 26, Negro. Workers said the walls of the sewer had been weakened by heavy rains.

BALTIMORE DAIRY FIGHTS AAA

Gets U. S. Court Order in Effort to Block License Action.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 29. — The Royal Farms Dairy obtained from Judge W. Calvin Chesnut, in Federal Court today, an order for Secretary Wallace to show cause by next Thursday why the AAA should not be restrained from "interfering with said dairy's business relations." There will be a hearing the next day on a petition of the dairy for such an order.

With a suit already pending alleging the AAA dairy license is invalid, B. B. Derrick, Milk Administrator here, this week declared the Royal Farms and nine other dairies "in violation" of the license. He warned other milk distributors not to do business with the 10 dairies. Derrick charged the dairies with violating the AAA license chiefly by failing to pay to farmers the price it prescribed for milk.

Norman Thomas Sponsors New Socialist Party Plan

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—With organized socialism in the United States facing the loss of some of its potential support to the New Deal on the one hand and to Upton Sinclair's "Epic" plan on the other, and torn by intraparty dissension over its stand on war, one section of the Socialist party, led by Norman Thomas, is now advocating the new "Commonwealth Plan" which, according to its proponents, embodies a definite platform for bringing about socialism. The plan is intended ultimately to provide a $5000 annual income to every family.

Thomas and Paul Porter, field secretary of the League for Industrial Democracy, who drew up the plan, admit that its ultimate objectives do not differ from the traditional party platform. They assert, however, that the Commonwealth Plan lacks the faults which have kept the original platform from attracting the votes of the working population.

The four major provisions of the plan are merely a restatement of the fundamental aims of socialism, namely, industrial democracy and social ownership of all industry, the farmer's right to his land, peace and domestic tranquility and worker-farmer control of government.

The split in Socialist ranks which has been brought to a climax by the stand on war adopted recently at the Detroit convention is manifest in a paragraph in the introduction in which Porter says that if the popular style of the plan has shocked some of the "Talmudic defenders of the literal world" he considers that style doubly justified.

Socialism by 1937 Envisioned.

The plan assumes that Socialism will come about in the United States by 1937, and in reply to critics who say that it is visionary and Utopian, Porter answers that the United States is ripe for Socialism.

"The exceptional support Upton Sinclair has been obtaining for his Epic—naive though both he and the plan are—emphasizes the importance of stating a genuine Socialist program as a unity which can be widely comprehended," he said.

Thomas, in an interview, said Sinclair was unconsciously a possible forerunner of Fascism, although he himself was far from being a Fascist. Even if the fundamental aims of Sinclair and the Socialists are the same, Thomas holds the latter must oppose the Democratic nominee for Governor of California.

Calls It One-Man Plan.

"The Sinclair victory and a number of related events," Thomas said, "are at once encouraging and discouraging. It is enormously encouraging because people in California have waked up to the fact that they must have certain changes. But they are trying to accomplish them with one man rather than with a revolutionary party. That is a blow to Socialism and it is brought about by the desire of American people for shortcuts. A similar situation exists in Wisconsin with the LaFollettes. If you are the friend of all the people you are the friend of none.

"This attack (Sinclair's) on old-line capitalism has been effective, but there is danger that its effect may take that form which Hitler's took. Sinclair is no Fascist. But he may be paving the way for Fascism, especially if he fails. And we have the roots of Fascism in this country. Huey Long's speeches, if translated into German, would sound like good Fascism. We offer an entire plan, rather than one man's ability, to obtain a Socialist program and prevent Fascism."

Thomas said that the Socialists were getting into closer cantact with labor and with the farmers, that the Commonwealth Plan would bring to these two groups something specific and definite.

Through this plan, he said, it would be possible to obtain Socialism in the not too distant future. In the meantime, however, the Socialists who support him were willing, he said, to amalgamate with a "genuine" farmer-labor party, but would like to preserve their own name and identity for "educational" purposes. Thomas said "without the aid of the farmers we can do nothing."

The question became one of adopting a platform which would have an almost universal appeal, and the Commonwealth Plan was the result.

Provisions of Plan.

After pointing out that there is sufficient wealth in the United States to give each family an annual income of $5000, and that this has not been done because of the present system of private industry the Commonwealth Plan calls for the election of a Socialist Congress and President, whose platform would include the following:

Establishment of a 30-hour week, minimum wages of $1 an hour, to be increased as rapidly as possible to $5000 a year; a guaranteed market for all farmers; a modern home for every worker and farmer; electricity in every home; construction of needed public works; revenue for reconstruction raised by just taxation; protection of savings; adequate pensions for the aged and infirm, and an economic general staff.

Basic Socialist Ideas.

The plan then reverts to the original basic provisions, the first of which is industrial democracy and social ownership. After stipulating that all public utilities, banks, mines, railroads, and so on, shall be public property, it is provided that public corporations shall be organized to operate them. These corporations are to consist of democratically chosen representatives of the manual workers, technical, executive and clerical workers and the public.

These corporations are to be run without the profit motive. No individual is to receive any income other than wages, salary or a moderate bonus.

In farming, occupancy shall be the sole title to land, with all marketing and processing, such as stockyards, elevators and dairies, declared public enterprises. They are to be run, as are other public corporations, with the provision that farmers, through their representatives, shall be entitled to participate in their direction.

The peace and domestic tranquility section provides that armaments and small arms shall be reduced to a minimum and "all Fascist organizations and other private armies, including coal and iron police, shall be outlawed."

Farmer-Labor Control.

In describing how the farmer-labor population would control the government, the plan reads: "The control of the executive and legislative branches of the government must be safeguarded from capitalist reaction through the courts. Mindful of the fact that the Supreme Court has reversed income tax, child labor and other legislation expressing the will of the majority, the President shall be empowered to appoint 10 additional Supreme Court justices in order to insure that the will of the masses shall be construed as law. Judges of the lower courts guilty of hampering or sabotaging legislation embodied in the commonwealth plan shall be summarily removed from office."

In industry, for example, each unit such as transportation or textiles would be run by corporations composed of representatives of labor and the management of the plant.

Twenty-year bonds bearing 5 per cent interest, would be issued for property taken over by the government and at the expiration of the 20-year period they would be void. Similarly, all present stocks and bonds would be replaced, and building up great fortunes in the future would be stopped by the establishment of taxes of 100 per cent on all incomes above $25,000 annually.

CARDS CAN WIN PENNANT IN TODAY'S GAME; TAKE LEAD BY BEATING REDS AS GIANTS LOSE

Van Mungo, Brooklyn, Defeats Parmelee, 5-1; Fans Three in the Ninth

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The 1934 National League pennant race came crashing down around the ears of the frantic New York Giants this afternoon as the irate Brooklyn Dodgers, behind the magnificent pitching of young Van Lingle Mungo, beat them 5 to 1, knocked them out of the lead they've held since June and just about boosted the St. Louis Cardinals right into the world series with the American League champions, the Detroit Tigers.

There is one more game to go before rigor mortis sets in officially, but as far as the world champion Giants are concerned, the situation is as desperate as it can be without all hope having departed. The Cardinals' 6 to 1 victory over Cincinnati gave the Redbirds a full game lead with but one to go. The Giants must whip the Dodgers in the final game tomorrow while St. Louise is losing, to restore the tie and force the first play-off series in major league history. Under no possible circumstances can the Giants now get better than a tie for the regular season, or the Cards worse than that.

Dodgers Still in the League.

It was a day as drab and cheerless as the Giants' prospects. Thirsting for revenge ever since Bill Terry coyly questioned for publication last winter whether Brooklyn was still in the league, the Dodgers came roaring over the bridge that separates the boroughs to play like world champions while the Giants frittered nervously all over the rain-soaked sod in the half drizzle that shrouded the play.

And the swarm of rabid rooters that came with the invaders, numbering most of the 13,774 who paid to get in, didn't help the Giants any with their whole-hearted booing and mad array of noise-making machinery.

Mungo, the young fireball right-hander, was the triple threat hero of the occasion, and tonight he's the toast of the most rabid fandom in the world. He scored the Dodgers' first run in the fifth after singling to center, taking second on a passed ball, and resting there until "Buzz" Boyle singled him home with a rap to center. He drove in the second run in the sixth with another single to right after little Lonnie Frey, 21-year-old shortstop from St. Louis, had opened with a single to center and had been sacrificed to second by Len Koenecke.

Mungo Fans Three in Ninth.

Then to top it all off, when the desperate Giants rose against him in the ninth, with Terry scratching an infield hit and Mel Ott walking, the lanky youngster hitched up his trousers, hurling his fast one swifter through the gloom, and fanned Travis Jackson, George Watkins, and Lefty Frank O'Doul in a row to end the ball game. Watkins, who belted a long homer into the right field stands in the seventh for the only score off Mungo, never even saw the third strike, while O'Doul passed out without taking his bat from his shoulder. All told Mungo, winning his eighteenth and final game of the seaosn, fanned seven and allowed only five hits.

KANSAS IS HELD TO SCORELESS TIE BY COLORADO U. ELEVEN

By the Associated Press.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Sept. 29.—Colorado and Kansas played a scoreless tie in their football season opener here today before a crowd of 5000.

Giants' Debacle Worst in Major League History

NO team in baseball history ever has blown in so short a time the lead the Giants had piled up, seven full games, at the high water mark, Sept. 6, after leading the league from June 8 on.

The world champions have lost 12 out of their last 20 games, while the Cards have won 19 out of 24.

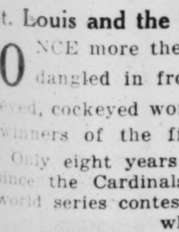
The closest approach to this colossal debacle was the loss of a seven-game lead by the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1921, but five of that evaporated in an August series with the ultimate winner, John McGraw's Giants.

WRAY'S COLUMN

St. Louis and the World Series.

ONCE more the world series with its dollars and glory is being dangled in front of a St. Louis baseball club, with the pop-eyed, cockeyed world wondering what the harvest will be when the winners of the final games of the season are known tonight.

Only eight years have elapsed since the Cardinals entered a world series contest, the first in which a St. Louis club had taken part in 38 years. Not even goofy Detroit can hope to equal the wild scenes that followed St. Louis' reaction to the finale of that championship struggle in which the Cards beat the Yanks for the title



COMISKEY

And now that the Cardinals are again reaching out for another flag and another right to take part in a world series, we are reminded that this city has been responsible for some of the most thrilling and some of the most unusual championship events in baseball annals.

Four Straight a Record.

ST. LOUIS, in 1885-6-7-8, for example, set a record when it sent a team into world championship struggles for four successive seasons—a feat which has never been surpassed and has been equaled only once. That was by the New York Giants, who won four successive pennants from 1921 to 1924, inclusive.

The St. Louis team of 1886 under the leadership of that baseball pioneer, Charles Comiskey, played and won the only world series in history to be contested on a winner-take-all of the gate receipts basis.

Prospect of Rain Today In New York

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.

Fairmount Jockey Club's farewell party was a huge success. Despite the fact that the thoughts of sports followers here have taken a decided turn to baseball, there were about 8,000 spectators at Fairmount Park yesterday afternoon to witness the eight-race program which brought the meeting to a close, seven days ahead of schedule.

Even as they stood at the race track they thought of baseball and when Announcer Jim Farley informed them of the progress of the Cardinals' and Giants' games, there was always a lusty shout of joy.

Although the track was deep in mud, the races were run for the most part in formful fashion, the favorites dominating.

Captain Joy Wins Feature.

In the feature, fifth race on the card, Captain Joy, the star of Butsy Hernandez' stable, went to the post a 3 to 2 favorite, and he fully justified the public's confidence. Little Freddie Smith, who incidentally won the watch offered for the best jockey of the meeting, had the Captain off well, and although Judge Dixon took a momentary lead, Smith and Captain Joy were out in front by the time the half mile pole was reached. Thereafter not one of the seven rivals was close enough to actually challenge Captain Joy. Getalong, under Machado's urging, made up some ground in the last eighth to finish second and Preferred was third but there was no question as to the winner's supremacy.

Favorite Runs Last.

There was nothing surprising about Raffles Problem's fine performance in winning the opening race but there was keen disappointment in the dismal effort of the favorite Truebuck. He was not only out of the money but he finished last in the field of eight. Truebuck, owned and trained by Butsy Hernandez, had previously won four out of his 13 starts.

Gurgler seemed to revel in the muddy going, outrunning the dangerous Indianole in the first half mile and then adding to his advantage in the stretch, winning as Jockey Leyland pleased to permit him. Sleive's Pride, second, and Indianole were badly beaten second and third and the others were too far behind to deserve a mention.

Friend Fred Wins Third.

The order of finish in the third race appeared to be largely a matter of riding judgment. Mathews, on Bangobar, made his move at the half mile pole and took a slight lead. Then as he approached the stretch turn, he left the alley on the rail open, losing a couple of lengths thereby and permitting Machado, on Friend Fred, an opportunity to steal the lead. That's what happened, and although they ran on even terms throughout the last eighth, the loss of ground at the head of the stretch appeared to be the deciding factor.

There was a lot of shifting of position in the running of the fourth race before the field turned

By W. J. McGoogan

St. Louis University's regulars turned on the heat in the first quarter at Walsh stadium yesterday, rolled up 18 points through three touchdowns on the Freshmen, then cooled off through the rest of the contest to defeat the yearlings, 38 to 14, but prospects for the 1935 eleven was the chief topic of conversation among the few hundred spectators as they left the park, so impressive was the showing of some of the first-year men.

Jim Hurley, brother of Tom, Varsity half back, who is out of the lineup with a leg injury, counted both touchdowns for the Frosh while Bob Fuchs, Luke Hart and Ed Drone also shone for the Freshmen. Hart was injured, his right ankle being hurt so badly that he probably will be out of the game for some time.

Ed Drone did some fancy kicking for the Freshmen and also passed to Jim Hurley for a 50-yard gain and a touchdown.

Captain Scores Three Times.

Captain Carl Kane did most of the Varsity scoring, counting three touchdowns while Bill Cochran, Mitchell and Padgen each scored one. Ray Bernsen, halfback, kicked the two extra points which the varsity scored while Hart scored one extra point for the Freshmen on a run and Nisbet place-kicked the other.

Nisbet, Varsity center, who is ineligible this year, played with the Freshmen and spent his time in the Varsity backfield. He was all over making tackles and his 225 pounds added great strength to the yearling line.

The Varsity started out as though they would really make the Freshmen look bad with Hemp and Cochran collaborating in running the ball to the Frosh one-yard line from where Cochran bucked over. Shortly afterward Kane cut back through the line for a 50-yard run for a touchdown. A pass, Kane to Mitchell, shortly after netted a 35-yard gain and another touchdown. None of the tries for extra points were successful.

In the second quarter, Ed Drone fumbled a Varsity punt on his own 30-yard line and the Varsity recovered. After several plays Paul Casey, fullback, carried the ball over the line only to fumble, but center Frank Padgen fell on the oval for the touchdown. This time Ray Bernsen, place-kicked for the extra point.

Starting the second half the Freshmen went to work and a pass,

Chicagoans Win Illinois Prep Tennis Titles

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 29.—Both singles and doubles titles in the Illinois State High School tennis tournament went to Chicago schools today as Arthur Jorgenson of Parker High won the individual title and Chester and Bill Murphy repeated their triumph of last spring to win the doubles crown for Tilden.

The Murphy twins went through their four contests with ease and lost only five games during the competition. In the final they defeated Hitt and Rand of Glenbard, 6—0, 6—0.

Those amazing Cardinals have done it. They are in first place all alone, a full game ahead of the world champion Giants and Frankie Frisch's men need only one more victory to clinch the championship of the National League and qualify to oppose the Detroit Tigers in the world series.

Paul Dean, 21-year-old juvenile star of the Redbird staff, serving his first year in a major league, had the honor yesterday afternoon of pitching the Cardinals into sole possession of the league leadership. The young right-hander, working with only two days rest since his defeat at the hands of the Pirates on Wednesday, scattered 11 hits so effectively that the Reds manufactured only one run off his delivery and the Cardinals triumphed, 6 to 1.

And while the victory was being cheered by a Ladies' Day crowd of 23,041, including 11,500 cash customers, Casey Stengel and the Dodgers were lending a helping hand in a battle at the Polo Grounds, to make it possible for the Cardinals to use their decision over the Reds as a stepping stone to the threshold of the league championship.

Only one more game now on the schedule for the Cardinals and only one for the Giants and in that crucial contest this afternoon, Manager Frisch has decided to send Dizzy Dean to the hill and if Dizzy can tame the Reds again and register his 30th triumph of the season, the Cardinals will be league champions regardless of what happens at the Polo Grounds as the Giants meet the Dodgers in the final contest of the season.

The Cardinals cannot lose the pennant now, unless they lose it in a play-off series. If they were to be defeated today and the Giants were to win, the race would end in a tie and a three-game struggle would be necessary to decide the championship.

On the other hand a defeat for the Giants this afternoon would give the Cardinals the title, even though the St. Louis team were to lose to the Reds in the series final.

Paul Dean hurled brilliantly as he racked up his 19th victory of the season, but it was a team triumph rather than an individual feat of skill. The Cardinals played as a team inspired. Frankie Frisch made seemingly impossible stops. Martin was a stone wall at third base and Leo Durocher a nimble cat at short, pouncing on everything. And in the outfield, too, the younger Dean boy had perfect support as the three fly chasers hauled down everything hit within reach. Orsatti especially distinguished himself as he made two running catches of line drives in the seventh inning.

Paul Derringer was the losing pitcher again and while base hits eventually knocked him out of the box, an error by Gordon Slade, the goat of the series opener, started the Redbirds on their way to a comfortable lead.

Martin, leading off in the first inning, was safe when Slade missed his hot grounder and on the next pitch Martin pretended that Mickey Cochrane was catching and stole second by such a wide margin that Lombardi didn't even bother to throw. Pepper moved to third on Rothrock's infield out, Frisch lined

Cardinals Now 4 to 1 to Win The Pennant

THE Cardinals are 4 to 1 favorites to win the National League pennant, according to odds announced last night by Tom Kearney. If you still think the Giants have a chance to win you can get 1 to 2½.

On the world series the figures are 4 to 5 against either league, take your pick. On the first game it's the same, 4 to 5.

The chances of one team winning the first two games have been placed at 2¼ to 1. If you pick the team that might win the first three the odds are 6 to 1, and on four straight victories it's 15 to 1.

A BREAK IN THE HEAT, SAYS GERMAN OF U. S. ENTRY IN THE OLYMPICS

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 29. — The American decision to participate in the 1936 Olympics at Berlin was hailed today by Hans von Tschammer Osten, Reich sports leader, as marking "a turn in the international campaign of heat against Germany."

Asserting Germany was strictly observing the rules of fair play in treatment of Jewish athletes, Tschammer Osten added: "Anyway, we are being left in peace on a glorious green athletic field."

Memories of those years during which Roosevelt crushed opponent after apponent on its way to City High School League football championships, were revived as the Rough Riders plowed their way to a 12 to 0 victory over Central in the opening game of the campaign yesterday afternoon at the Public School Stadium. The attendance was estimated at 1200.

It was not so much the score, as the manner in which Roosevelt gained its decision, that was impressive. Using for the most part a double-wing back formation, the Rough Riders counted 11 first downs and gained 276 yards from scrimmage. Not once did they try a forward pass.

Take Advantage of Fumble.

Taking advantage of Tom Cigno's fumble on the Central 19-yard line, the Rough Riders recovered and then began their march that netted them a touchdown in the second period. Guy Moser ran to the 10-yard mark. Joe Szuch picked up six yards over center and Moser skirted left end for the score. Szuch failed to place-kick the extra point.

Shortly after the opening half, Roosevelt tried one thrust which failed at the Central 19-yard line. Tom Cigno, who kicked well for Central all afternoon, punted out to his 43-yard line. On an end-around play, Alfred Seidel slithered down the right side of the field for the second and last score. Szuch's place kick for the extra point was blocked.

That constituted all the scoring. From the way the Rough Riders charged and blocked(they looked the best of any of the six city schools so far this year. Either Beaumont or McKinley rates about second, with a toss-up between Cleveland, Soldan and Central for the last three places.

"What Are the Cards Doing?"

Apparently more people were interested in the Cardinals than in the football game. The press box was constantly beseiged with requests for news from the "front." When it was announced that the Giants were losing and the Cardinals winning, the crowd cheered heartily.

Next week the first doubleheader of seven is scheduled. Soldan will play Beaumont in the first game and Cleveland, the defending champion, will battle McKinley in the second.

SAILOR BEWARE TIMED IN 1:36 3-5 IN MILE STAKE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Sailor Beware, a two-year-old rated only as a faint-hearted sprinter early in the year, today came within three-fifths of a second of equaling John P. Grier's track record as he stepped off a mile in 1:36 3-5 to win the Junior Champion Stake at Aqueduct.

With Omaha the favorite at even money, Mrs. Whitney's entry was held at 16 to 5 to take the purse of $3990. Rain, which fell throughout the day, made conditions dreary for the spectators, but the track had a firm bottom although sloppy on the surface.

Muny Golf Final Scheduled Today

Davenport entered the final round by defeating Bill Bentley, 3 and 2, and Spencer advanced by eliminating Carl Tietjen, 5 and 4. The semi-final matches were played last Sunday.

Today's final will start at 9:30 with the final 18 holes starting at 1:30.

Van Duesen will start Hendrickson at end, Dooley, tackle; Brown, guard; Morgan, center; Johnson, guard; Null, tackle and Pribble, end. Blome and Litchwager are slated for two of the backfield positions. The other backs will be announced prior to the game.

Gilbert Fishback, coach of the St. Charles team, also named his opening eleven with Ferrell at end, J. Wilmer, tackle, F. Wilmer, guard, McDonahue, center, Lanix, guard; Hanstick, tackle and Sullentrop, end. Fishback has Feldman, Thomas and Snider for backs and Smith as quarterback.

OUR BROWNIES CLOSE AGAINST DETROIT TODAY

DETROIT, Sept. 29. — The only thing the Detroit Tigers were sure of tonight, as they prepared to close their regular 1934 schedule tomorrow against the St. Louis Browns, was that they are champions of the American League.

Speculation over what team they will play in the World Series and when the series will open was rife among the Tiger players. Tonight, as guests at a huge testimonial banquet attended by more than 1000 fans, the Tigers expressed only one wish — that the National League race was decided.

The Tigers are generally agreed that they would rather meet the New York Giants than the St. Louis Cardinals. The prospect of facing Dizzy Dean, then battling Paul and then facing Dizzy again is not heartening. Aside from the playing angle, the Tigers realize that a series with New York would be much more profitable than one with the Cards, whose park cannot compare with the Polo Grounds.

The Detroit Baseball Co. announced today that, in an effort to prevent speculation, reserved seat tickets would be given only to those successful applicants who appear in person at the Navin Field box offices Monday and Tuesday.

If developments in the National League necessitate a change in arrangements, the club was prepared to announce new plans Sunday night.

The Woolfs won the first game of the series and will pitch Schnapp, last week's winning hurler, or Sturm. Launn will be behind the plate. Elliott or Bentley will hurl for the Kirns, with Wagner doing the receiving.

PITCHER McAFEE OF BROWNS TO MARRY

DETROIT, Sept. 29.—Plans for a world series honeymoon were completed today by Bill McAfee, 27, St. Louis Browns' pitcher.

McAfee, former baseball star at the University of Michigan, obtained a special legal dispensation to marry Miss Lillian Foote, 23, of 11066 Esmond av., Chicago, Monday.

Michigan law requires that five days must elapse between the marriage license application and the ceremony. Probate Judge Joseph Murphy, however, issued an order making an exception in McAfee's case.

The couple will spend their honeymoon here, so they can attend the world series.

GIANTS DROP TO SECOND PLACE AFTER LOSING TO DODGERS

was always in trouble, and he was hit safely in every inning but the eighth, allowing ten in all while fanning seven.

A rookie left hander, Al Smith, started the ninth after Parmelee gave way to a pinch hitter, but he was lifted after a walk to Koenecke and singles by Sam Leslie and Tony Cuccinello drove in one run and brought ancient Adolfo Luque to the rescue. Two passes forced Leslie home with the final score. The Dodgers got 12 hits, all singles.

Giants Have the Jitters.

For Brooklyn, it was a dramatic and soul-filling answer to Terry's slight of the winter, and for the vindictive it had an added edge because the Giants' manager himself was responsible for the Dodgers' third run in the seventh. Frey opened with his second single, was sacrificed along, and scored when Terry let Leslie's smash down the first base line go through him. It was scored as a hit.

A moment later, though it caused no damage, Bill tossed late to Parmelee for the putout at first on Danny Taylor's dribble, and again a hit was chalked up. But it was a clear picture of the perfect case of the jitters that held the entire team in its grasp.

"Tell Terry," he said, "we're still in the league. But we're by no means STILL."

world's series in history, 15 games being contested to decide the title.

It was a St. Louis club that set the record for world series gate receipts when the Cards defeated the Yankees of 1926, the seven games required to settle the argument drawing a gate of $1,207,864.

Of the five occasions when world series receipts have passed the million dollar mark, St. Louis clubs figured in two.

And, just by way of dulling the luster of their achievements, the pennant winning St. Louis team of 1928 was one of the three teams that have lost a world series in four consecutive games.

Give Us a Break, Boys.

DESPITE all these contributions to fame, headlines and money, there have been many cutting remarks passed about our good city by writers in other baseball centers. "They don't deserve to have a pennant in St. Louis," one scribe has just told the world, "because the city won't support the home team."

His argument is as weak as most of those urged against this city. Being from New York he neglected to mention that a Sunday doubleheader there last year, with the Cardinals showing against the Giants, who were in front, drew fewer than 15,000 persons. In a very recent game at home, with the Giants at their peak, the New York club drew only 5126 persons to the Polo Grounds. On one occasion in the last year the attendance wired out for one game was 750.

Cleveland has taken its fling at us, too—Cleveland, from which one major league team fled to St. Louis because the Forest City would not support it. Philadelphia has nagged us—Philly, which saw two of its world championship teams scrapped by their owner because of lack of patronage.

Even Milwaukee has toasted us—but then we may ignore the minor league gadflies. The point is that when times and teams were good, this city supported two clubs well—and will do it again.

Official World Series.

"WHEN did baseball teams first start playing world series?" a correspondent asks. That question is not new. The answer must be qualified.

If you refer to championship series between the two outstanding leagues of the country, world series contests began in 1884, when the American Association and the National League were operating. Providence of the National defeated the Metropolitan team of the Association for the first world title.

The following year saw Anson's Colts of Chicago play Comiskey's Browns and the series ended in a 3—3 tie. The Browns defeated the Anson's Colts, next year, in the celebrated winner-take-all series, 4 to 2, with one game a tie. The Browns in the succeeding two years again won Association pennants.

But the first step toward a thorough commercialization of the series developed in 1887 when the Detroit National team and the Browns agreed to play 15 games, barnstorming through the major cities of both circuits.

When the Browns and the New Yorks won the following year, they tried barnstorming again. The series was cut to 10 games, of which the New York team won six and the title. Shorter series were played in the next two years with New York beating Brooklyn in 1889 and Brooklyn defeating Louisville in 1890.

The Temple Cup Arrives.

THAT ended the preliminary world series period for the very good reason that there was only one league—the National. To lend a post-season interest to baseball, what was known as the Temple Cup series was devised. This provided that the first and second place teams participate in a series, first four victories to determine the winner.

This cup event lasted for four seasons—from 1894 to 1897 inclusive, with the famous rowdy Baltimore Orioles of John McGraw figuring in all four contests and winning two, while the equally rowdy and famous Cleveland Spiders (afterward moved to St. Louis in 1899) took part in two of them.

The Modern World Series.

IT WAS not until after the National Agreement had been signed in 1902 that an "official" world series was played. The first to be contested after the National Agreement was in 1903 when Boston nosed out the Pirates in a sensational series in which the Boston club won the last three games of an eight-game series, to gain the title, 5 to 3. That was the series in which Bill Dinneen, then famous Boston pitcher, now an umpire, fanned the mighty Honus Wagner to end the deciding game. During that contest Dinneen wore the skin off one of his pitching fingers.

But the first really official series, under commission rules was not played until 1905 when the Giants defeated the Athletics in five games, every one of which was won by a shutout!

"Bargain Club" Wins Title.

SINCE that time the games have been conducted under commission supervision with many brilliant and sometimes surprising results. In 1906 the powerhouse Chicago National League club team romped through to victory with an outfit that had been sold the year before—franchise, players and all—for total of $105,000, to Charles Taft and Charles Webb Murphy. But in the world series with the White Sox that followed, the misfit aggregation known as the "Hitless Wonders" surprised and pained the Cubs by winning the title.

In 1909 the Pittsburgh team gained the limelight and, meeting the three-time pennant-winning Detroit Tigers, gave baseball a huge surprise when Babe Adams, a rookie, won three games.

Mighty Matty Fades Away.

IN 1912 one of the greatest pitchers in the history of baseball met his Waterloo. And another great pitcher came into his own, for a short time at any rate. Christy Mathewson, pitching against the Boston Red Sox, American League title winners, hurled three world series games; but the best he could get was one tie and two defeats. That really marked the beginning of the end for a hurler who is now ranked No. 1 among pitchers, in the all time Hall of Fame, by many writers.

That same year saw Smoky Joe Wood, not heard of often today, although still a college baseball coach, pitch three games against the Giants and win them all. In the season preceding that world series Wood had won 35 games and lost five, equalling the American League record of 16 consecutive victories which exists today.

The First Miracle Man.

In 1914 came the most sensational of all world series up to that time. It marked the downfall of a team believed to be invincible, Connie Mack's Athletics. And the club which overthrew them had been picked to finish last in the National League—Boston.

George Stallings, manager of the Boston club, was the first "Miracle Man" of baseball. He had previously tried his hand at managing the New York Yankees. Not so hot. But while he was with the Braves, three inspired pitchers, Dick Rudolph, Bill James and Lefty Tyler starting from last place on July 14, pitched the club into a pennant and then into a world's championship, won in four successive games—the first time the feat had ever been accomplished.

Perhaps Stallings' "goat-getting" tactics upset the Athletics. Perhaps it was over-confidence. Perhaps it was just the superior ability of a team that was red-hot after its famous pennant drive.

At any rate the disaster was so great and the red ink for Connie Mack's season so heavy, that the great leader sold his stars one by one and wrecked a club which was not to come back again as a champion for fifteen years.

STALLING'S "miracle" was duplicated in 1915 by red-faced Pat Moran, pilot of the Phillies, who owned a lot of warmed-over misfits, plus Grover Cleveland Alexander and one or two fair pitchers. Pat and Grover put it over. And just to prove that putting it over was no accident for Pat, they sent him a couple of years later to mend the fragments of the Cincinnati team left over from Christy Mathewson's attempt at management.

Pat put the jig-saw misfits together and gave us a world champion Cincinnati team—and the Black Sox scandals.

Not that Pat had anything to do with the plot attributed to Arnold Rothstein and Abe Attell to sell the series. That originated certainly with the White Sox players. Pat's men at least gave their best.

And, not to forget St. Louis too long in this world series mention, it was a St. Louis boy who almost broke up the White Sox "series throwing" plot. That was Dickie Kerr, diminutive pitcher who was not in the deal to toss the games. Kerr pitched honestly and not even the machinations of his own teammates could prevent him from winning two victories.

But in the end the villains did their stuff—and Cincinnati won.

The Babe Ruth Era.

IN 1920 Judge Landis entered the picture and with it meticulous rules governing all series play. And also, along came Ruth—the biggest influence baseball has known. The home run and the sock-'em-Louis style of hitting came into vogue with Babe, and we must admit there also came the most exciting contests in history.

It was just about this time that St. Louis again began too insist on recognition. A great team of St. Louis Browns in 1922 should have won the flag. That they did not was due to a collapse of team spirit following what was called the "crucial series" here late in the season, with the Yanks and the Browns, struggling for leadership. Packed parks, stands sold out far in advance, chambers of commerce from every city in the Southwest demanding tickets in blocks for home games of the Browns, and wild enthusiasm prevailed in August and September.

A tense series, marked by an injury to a New York player (Whitey Witt) featured the "crucial" series. Also the Browns' management pulled a boner in one game and the Yanks won the series. The St. Louis players apparently thought that was the end of the world. They did not come out of their coma until the Washington club had beaten them. Then, too late, they spurted and finished only one game behind the Yanks.

IT REMAINED for the Cardinals to put St. Louis back in the world series running and how. No city in the circuit ever recorded such enthusiasm and even Detroit, blowing off steam at all points, can hardly hope to equal that 1926 demonstration which greeted the Cards on their return home from their journeys to New York. Incidentally, no series has furnished such a dramatic climax as happened when Old Pete, still shaky from his previous night's victory celebration, stalked out to fan Lazzeri and halt the Yankee rally.

And now again, here we are making more baseball history.

St. Louis has seldom been out of the pennant limelight of late years. And though Old Man Depression may have our gate receipts down a bit the city is still ready to pop off for a winning team again. And that may mean today.

The Browns of 1885, St. Louis' First Champions

BLUES WILL TRY OUT NEW PLAYS ON DES MOINES FOOTBALL TEAM

Advanced football as played by professionals of super ability and long experience will be seen this afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium when the St. Louis Blues meet the professionals from Des Moines, Ia., in the second exhibition game of the year.

If the field is in fair condition, Coach "Choppy" Rhodes of the Blues announced that he intends to use an open style of attack, featuring forward and lateral passes, quick kicks and deceptive running plays such as should be expected of players who stand out as stars and who are advanced in the game sufficiently to play professional ball in an organized league.

The Blues have been rehearsing these plays for three weeks and have developed a smooth attack and along with it have a sterling defense. Coach Rhodes is convinced he will need it, too, for the Des Moines team is advanced in training and has players who stand out in both the college and pro game. They will outweigh the Blues, too, and if the Blues can make headway in their attack against this outfit today, the coach will feel that he has a team prepared for the opening of the American League championship campaign which begins one week from today.

As this is a non-league game today, the Blues management is opening the gates free to all women and cutting the price of tickets to all others to 55 cents including tax. The Boy Scouts of St. Louis are again invited as guests of the club and so are the high school grid teams of the city and county. There will be one section of choice seats on each side of the field on sale at the park at the regulation prices of $1.10 including the tax. The game will start promptly at 3 o'clock.

Fans who saw the game week ago when the Blues romped over the Hominy Indians were impressed with the speed shown by some of the Blues' backfield men, especially Christ Mathis and George Grosvenor, quarterbacks and fast-stepping ball carriers, Buck Hansen, Tony Kaska, Vic O'Leary and John Breidenstein, powerful line plungers.

These same speedsters will be in the game today and along with them will be Dick Frahm, well known St. Louis pro player who signed with the Blues three days ago. The left side of the Blues' line has been greatly strengthened, too, since last Sunday by the addition of Sexton, guard; Sark and Steinback, tackles, and Wilkerson, end, all men obtained from the National League.

Outstanding players on the Des Moines team are Delmege, end, who played here two years with the Gunners; Roberts, University of Iowa All-American guard of 1929 who has played three years in the National League, and Schathrock, halfback, a star last year on Iowa State college of Ames.

Carl Hubbell Was Most Effective; Dizzy Dean And Walker Top Birds

By Herman Wecke.

No matter which club wins the National League pennant—the Cardinals or Giants—records for the season indicate that the Detroit club, title winner of the American League, will face plenty of pitching in the world series. Statistics for the campaign show that the hurlers of the Giants and Cardinals, as a lot, own better records than the men who helped Mickey Cochrane into the championship series.

The Giants' staff, as a whole, working in 1321 innings has stopped the enemy with but 548 runs, an average of but 3.78 a game. The hill artists of the Cardinals, pitching in one more inning, have yielded 65 more runs, which gives Frisch's mound staff, a record of having allowed the enemy to score 4.14 runs in each nine rounds. That, however, is a better figure than the one owned by Mickey Cochrane's troupe. The Detroiters, in 1312 rounds, have yielded 660 tallies, an average of 4½ runs a game, indicating that the club carried a real punch in giving the Motor City its first pennant in 25 years.

There are, however, plenty of honors for the Cardinals. Members of the Redbirds have pitched more complete games than either of their rivals—79; own more shutouts with a total of 14 and have struck out more rival batters, with 668 to their credit. Tiger hurlers have labored in 71 complete games and those of the Giants in but 63. The strikeouts for the Detroit staff total 497 and for those of the Giants 475. Bill Terry's men have exhibited the finest control, walking but 321 batters, whereas the Cardinal stars have walked 402 and those of the Tigers 439.

Dean and Dean on Top.

The records of the individuals of the three leading clubs in major league baseball in 1934 bring plenty of honors to the firm of Dean and Dean. These young men have done wonders for the Cardinal club.

Between them they have won a total of 48 games, while losing but 18. This is a better winning percentage than that of the two pacemakers of either of the other clubs. Hubbell and Schumacher of the Giants own a 44-21 record, whereas Rowe and Bridges of the Tigers have 45 victories and 19 defeats for their season's efforts. Dizzy Dean, who Friday shutout Cincinnati for his twenty-ninth victory, is sure to lead the majors in total victories, while his total of 187 strikeouts places him well ahead of all rivals in this department. He also owns six shutouts, giving him a tie with Vernon Gomez of the Yankees, for the honors in this department. In total victories, the Yankee duo of Gomez and Ruffing ranks second to the Deans, with a total of 46, Gomez gaining 26 and Ruffing 20 triumphs.

The Dean brothers have turned in a total of 39 complete games, the same number as Hubbell and Schumacher. Rowe and Bridges lead in this respect, having gone the route on 42 occasions.

That the Redbirds in the final drive in the National League flag race had a "big Three" to compare favorably with those of the Giants and Tigers, is further indicated by the records

The Deans and Bill Walker, working in 686 innings, have allowed 265 runs, an average of 3.51 tallies each nine rounds. Terry's trio made up of Hubbell, Fitzsimmons and Parmelee, laboring in 723 rounds, stopped the enemy with 286 tallies, or 3.15 a contest, while Rowe, Bridges and Crowder, the best of the Tigers, were found for 3.60 tallies a game, allowing 240 markers in 602 innings.

Giants' Big Three Pitchers Show a Better Efficiency Mark Than Rivals

Individually, Hubbell, the Giants' great lefthander, is the leader of the pack. The National League's "most valuable player of 1933," working in 313 innings, has stopped the enemy with but 98 runs, an average of but 2.79 a game. The southpaw has walked but 35 batters and in 15 complete games this season he has gone through without issuing a single pass. Hubbell has worked 25 complete games.

Next to Hubbell rank two Cardinal stars—Dizzy Dean and Walker. The elder Dean, pitching in 299 innings and 23 complete games, has held the opposing clubs to 110 runs, an average of 3.33 a game, while Walker's efficiency record is 3.42, with 59 runs in 154 innings. This figure is tied by Roy Parmelee of the Giants, who, like Walker, was out for quite a part of the season.

"Schoolboy" Rowe, who, during the season, set a record of winning 16 consecutive games, has been the most effective hurler for Cochrane, holding the enemy to 3.78 tallies each nine frames.

That Paul Dean stands out as one of the greatest first-year pitchers to enter the majors in some time, is indicated by the fact that in 233 innings he has stopped his opponents with 91 runs, an average of 3.78 a game; has pitched in 16 complete games and has five shutouts to his credit. Further honors go to the young man, in that he is the only pitcher in the majors this season who has hurled a no-hit game. That came on Sept. 21, when he set the Brooklyn batters down without a safety in a contest played at the Dodgers' park.

Paul Dean's Efficiency.

Paul Dean's efficiency mark ties him with such veterans of the pastime as Fred Fitzsimmons of the Giants and Tommy Bridges of the Tigers, rated by Babe Ruth as one of the best pitchers in the American League.

Tex Carleton, after a wonderful start, has slumped and has yielded 4.68 runs a game, while Bill Hallihan, the little southpaw, who is going through ont of the worst campaigns he has ever experienced has yielded 5.04. Dazzy Vance, on his work with the Cardinals alone, has allowed 3.96 runs a game; Jess Hains 4.41 and Jim Mooney 6.03.

Although Hal Schumacher is the biggest winner on the Giant staff, with 23 victories to his credit, he has been found for an average of 4.05 runs a game. The records of Terry's second stringers are as follows: Salveson, 3.78; Bell, 3.96; Bowman, 4.50; Luque, 4.59 and Smith, 5.04.

Crowder, who after he was taken from the Senators on waiver, won four out of five, pitching three complete games for Cochrane, one of them resulting in a shutout victory over the Yankees, the Tigers' closest rivals for the pennant.

Marberry, a world series hero with the Washington club in 1924 and 1925, although winning 15 and losing but five games, has been found for 5.67 runs a game. Eldon Auker, a youngster, has yielded 4.50, while the figures against the others are as follows: Fischer, 4.41; Sorrell, 5.40; Hogsett, 5.95 and Hamlin, 6.03.

If, as the late Addie Joss said, "pitching is 80 per cent of baseball," then there should be plenty of it in the world series, no matter which club gets the final nod to represent the National League.

England Defeats Wales at Soccer; 50,000 See Game

By the Associated Press.

CARDIFF, Wales, Sept. 29. — England today defeated Wales, 4-0, in the first international soccer battle of the season, played before a crowd of 50,000.

England scored 31 minutes after the start and led, 2-0, at half time. Wales constantly threatened through the match but their booting was erratic in scoring territory and the English afterguard played brilliantly to halt all scoring marches.

Mickey of the Tigers and a Couple of Aces He May Play Against Our Cards

Manager Mickey Cochrane has stated that Schoolboy Rowe will start the first game for the Tigers in the World Series and Tom Bridges will be sent to the mound in the second. Mickey also added that he will do the catching in every game. Rowe is on the left and Bridges on the right.

"Give Me a Few Runs and There Won't Be a Play-off," Dizzy Tells Team-Mates

By James M. Gould

They take things very matter-of-fact, these Cardinals. Yesterday saw them not officially "in" as pennant-winners in one of the most dramatic of all major-league races but so close to the championship that another sundown will bring them barring the accidents which don't happen in these baseball days, the National League title.

It might be assumed then, that after their 6 to 1 victory over the Reds and the knowledge that the Giants had been defeated, there would be wild scenes of joy in the clubhouse after the game. There was nothing of the sort. When Paul Dean, who won the crucial contest, walked in, many of the players shook hands with him and said, "Nice work, Paul." Manager Frish entered and went through exactly the same ceremony, even pronouncing the same words. Paul, in turn, thanked each of the men who congratulated him and said, "Nice work."

In one corner, Pop Haines expressed his satisfaction with repetition of the phrase "Whatta nine, whatta nine." In another, Pat Crawford took up the refrain. Pepper Martin said nothing at all, but his grin was face-wide as he prepared for his shower.

Dizzy Dean Optimistic.

Dazzy Vance began to tell how easy he thought the Giants would be. Dizzy Dean contented himself with patting brother Paul on the back and then opined confidently and audibly that if the Cards "gimme a couple or three runs, there ain't goin' to be any play-off."

Manager Frisch, much of the strain of the past few days gone now that his team had a clear lead, was very quiet. He cleared the clubhouse of all but the players and, in a few words, thanked everybody for their efforts.

There was no cheering, no jumping about, no horse-plays. There still remained another game before things were "sartain sure" and the boys were still serious. Not a mention was made of what the World Series might mean in money; every one was concentrated on the final game of the season.

It was rather surprising demonstration or, rather, lack of one.

Neither President Sam Breadon nor Vice-President Branch Rickey seemed unduly perturbed over the closeness of the race but, with each there was the indication of suppressed excitement. They didn't want to show this feeling but to the interested observer, both did and plainly too.

Of course, there was a financial angle to the whole thing. A tie and a play-off meant big gates and the Cardinals' treasury could stand a few. But, yesterday, the "game was the thing" and both club executives quite apparently were more interested in the sport than in the "gate."

President Breadon, asked how he felt about everything in general and the tight race in particular, said, "Well, I don't see anything to worry about. The Cardinal players aren't worried and I'm not, either. Of course, I think we're going to win out but we've got to take things as they come. We know we've put up a great fight and, if you can't win after such a fight, why the next best thing is to lose gracefully. But it don't look much like we'd have to be graceful, does it?"

Rickey said he didn't know just how to feel.

"The way the club has come through in the last two weeks is enough to make any one proud of them and, certainly, no one could be more proud than I. They surely deserve to win and it looks as though we'd get our deserts."

The financial angle had to make its appearance and President Breadon was asked if, the Cardinals winning out, the club's share of receipts would wipe out any deficit the club might have met with during the course of the regular season.

Breadon was quite frank about this point.

"Certainly it would" he said 'if we get in the series and it's good series that is one that goes six or seven games, we certainly wouldn't have any deficit when the series was over."

Demand for Series Tickets Booms as Cards Take Lead

There was a brisk increase in world series business at Sportsman's Park, yesterday, it was announced by Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals.

"Before Friday, business in the line of reservations was slow. However, after the Redbirds went into a tie for the lead there was a brisk increase and plenty of applications were received yesterday," Breadon declared.

The Cardinals' president announced that more of the early applications were from out of town fans than from local followers of the club.

There is one thing Breadon declared he wanted understood. And that was the fact that it would be first come, first served as far as seats for the world series are concerned, should the Redbirds be fortunate enough to get into the championship battle and play the Detroit Tigers for the honors.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Pittsburgh walked away with a 6-to-3 victory over the Cubs today, four passes off Jim Weaver in the eighth inning resulting in three runs and the victory margin. An eighth inning homer by Augie Galan kept the Chicagoans from being shut out by Red Lucas.

Luke Hart to Jim Hurley, put the ball on the Varsity 7-yard line and Hurley wiggled through for the score. On the try for extra point, the pass was bad and Hart picked the ball up to run over the line for the point.

Frosh Intercept Pass.

Later Bob Fuchs intercepted a Varsity pass near midfield and Drone passed to Hurley who ran 50 yards for a touchdown and Nisbet place-kicked for the extra point.

The Varsity went to work again in the fourth quarter, Kane running 40 yards for a touchdown and again counting on a run of about 20 yards. Bernsen place-kicked for the extra point on the final touchdown just as the gun barked ending the contest.

There probably will be another scrimmage Tuesday night between the Varsity and Freshmen as a last workout for the Illinois Wesleyan game.

Collins greeted the Webster Groves boy with a double to right and after a pass to De Lancey and Orsatti's single to left, filled the bases, Durocher flied to Comorosky, scoring Collins. The Reds bunched six of their 11 hits in three innings, but their only tally was a four-bagger by Jim Bottomley, who responded to a cheer from the crowd in the eighth inning by hitting to the pavilion roof.

Paul Strikes Out Six.

In the fifth inning Dean did his best work. Schulmerich opened with a single and after Comorosky was called out on strikes, Derringer singled to center. But Paul turned on the heat, struck out Kampouris and whipped over a called third strike on Slade.

Orsatti's two catches nullified two singles in the seventh inning and in the ninth, after Comorosky's infield out, McCormick's pop double to center and a pass to Adams filled the bases, Paul retired Slade on a pop fly to Durocher and Koenig on a fly to Medwick.

Paul struck out six men during the contest, and if he was weary with only two days' rest since his last pitching job, he didn't show it.

The pennant drive which carried the Cardinals from a seemingly hopeless second position, seven games behind the Giants, to the top rung of the National League ladder, began in Brooklyn. The Cardinals' hopes were forlorn after they dropped a Labor day doubleheader at Pittsburgh, but from there the team went to Brooklyn and won two games. Then the boys moved to Philadelphia and won four out of six, and followed with three victories in a four-game series with the Giants at the Polo Grounds—the real turning point in the championship struggle. From New York the trail led to Boston and two victories, Brooklyn and two more, an even split in two at Cincinnati and a victory in the play-off game at Chicago. Returning home the Cardinals broke even with the Pirates in two games and then took the measure of the Reds in the three contests.

And if Frankie Frisch's men can win again this afternoon, it will be the twentieth victory in the last 25 games, or a winning percentage of .800, which is traveling.

The Fans Begin to Warm Up

Crowd of 23,401 Sees Redbirds Take Lead; Paul Dean Gets Some Fancy Support; Rothrock and Collins Are Frisch's Iron Men.

By Herman Wecke.

For the first time the Cardinals got into the thick of the pennant fight, St. Louis fans turned out in goodly numbers, the attendance being announced at 23,401. There were 11,500 paid admissions, 8870 women and 2671 girls.

And did that crowd make the welkin ring during the afternoon, especially when the scoreboard showed the Giants had been defeated and again at the finish when Joe Medwick squeezed Mark Koenig's drive, putting the Redbirds in first place in the National League flag race.

In winning his nineteenth victory and bringing the Dean firm's record for the year to 48 victories and 18 defeats, Paul Dean was accorded some spectacular support, especially by Martin, Frisch, Durocher and Orsatti.

Pepper Martin rushed far in towards the grandstand to make a spectacular catch of Koenig's foul in the first. Pepper skidded in the mud and reached back with his gloved hand to make the capture.

The Fielders Skid a Bit.

Frisch skidded on the turf to reach Comorosky's grounder in the second and came up in time to make the play at first to retire the batter.

Frisch made another brilliant defensive play in the fourth, when he went behind second for Lombardi's roller and tossed him out.

Paul Dean was in his first difficult spot in the fifth, when Schulmerich and Derringer singled. However, the youngster put on extra speed and Kampouris and Slade struck out. Between the two singles, Comorosky was called out on strikes.

One of the press box visitors was Allan Sothoron, who managed Milwaukee this year and who, in 1926, pitched a three-hit victory over Pittsburgh which virtually won the Redbirds their first pennant.

A peculiar accident put Lombardi out of the game in the sixth. With De Lancey at bat, the Cardinal catcher, in swinging back after missing a pitch, hit the Red receiver behind the right ear and he was forced out of action. Clyde Manion, a one-time Brownie, replaced Lombardi.

Leo Durocher came up with a sparkling fielding play, when he went far to his right to grab Manion's bounder in the sixth and then tossed to Frisch to force Koenig, who had singled.

Some Cardinal Iron Men.

Johnny Rothrock, Cardinal right fielder, is playing with both his wrists taped up, due to recent accidents. However, he is continuing play in an effort to save his record of not having missed an inning this season. "Ripper" Collins is another member of the Birds who has gone through every round.

Harlan Pool narrowly escaped injury when he collided with the wall in chasing Frisch's triple in the sixth. After first aid treatment he remained in the battle.

AZUCAR RUNS SECOND BY A NOSE; WINNER REFUNDS $72

By the Associated Press.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 29.—Faireno, a 35 to 1 shot, won the $10,000 Havre de Grace handicap by a nose this afternoon when Discovery, conceded to be one of the two or three greatest thoroughbreds in training, had an off day and finished third.

Azucur, another outsider in the pari-mutuel betting, crossed the line in second place, a full length in front of the favorite.

The fact that Discovery was not up to his recent form in no way lessened the credit due Faireno. The five-year-old property of the Belair stud, returned to the tracks this year after a year in retirement, ran a brilliant race under a brilliant ride at the hands of Jockey Tommy Maloy.

Broke in Seventh Place.

Breaking seventh, he took first place at the half, lost it to Azucar as they went in the stretch and finally recovered it a few fractions of an inch before the two thundered under the wire. The time for the nine furlong was 1:50 4-5, a second under the track record for the distance set by Osculator in winning the same stake last year.

Discovery, holder of the world's record for a mile and three sixteenths and winner of the $10,000 Potomac Handicap at the opening of the meet here, broke in last place and was slow about moving up toward the front. Jockey Bejshak did not work on him with the whip and it seemed to some that the horse, pride of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's stable, was sullen. However, he picked up speed toward the end and was closing on the leaders as they crossed the line.

Faireno Pays $72.20.

Nine three-year-olds and older went to the post for the Handicap, feature of the last day of the "Graw's" fall season.

It had rained during the morning but the track was fairly fast and about 12,000 raincoated addicts braved the threatening skies. Somewhere in that crowd were the few long shot lovers who had put their money on Faireno to win. For every $2 they thus invested, the mutuels paid them $72.20 in return. His place tickets paid $29.50, his show slips $12.20. Azucar paid $12.30 and $4.20 to place and show respectively, while the wise pessimists who had put their money on Discovery to run third, got $2.70 back for every two spot they passed through the windows.

Table Tennis Finals.

into the stretch but it was all Hildur Prince in the last quarter. Lady Rockledge and Lady Trust were second and third, as the early leaders, Alamae, Principio and Primer weakened. It was Leyland's second victory of the day.

The sixth, a mile and 70 yards race, provided the crowd an unusual thrill at the start, right in front of the grandstand. As the horses broke from the gate, an assistant starter was knocked to his knees directly before the horse Transfix. He avoided being stepped on but before Jockey Rollins could get Transfix straightened out and in stride, the field was far away. Vin Noir ridden by Dyer, was the winner.

The last race was a wild west affair, run in semi-darkness. Lion Hearted was the winner, with Rollins up, and Kavalry Jack, beaten in the last eighth of a mile, second, and More Power third.

Jockeys Machado on Judge G. and Jorgensen, on Flitterlight, were both thrown from their saddles during the running of the last race, but neither was injured, thanks to the mud.

Fairmount Notes.

WEBSTER GROVES ELEVEN DEFEATS BEAUMONT, 6-0

An automobile accident almost prevented Webster Groves High School football team from scoring its 6—0 victory over Beaumont High of the city league yesterday, as the two teams, looking like mudmen, battled before 400 spectators at Webster.

The accident occurred to the machine in which Russell Hudler, end of the Statesmen, was riding to the game. Hudler reached the game late, and went into action in the second quarter. Immediately the Webster team spurted into action, and from being on the defensive as it was through all of the first period, took the offensive through the fine defensive work of Hudler and his excellent punting.

His punting was really the decisive factor in the game, as both teams were kicking the ball often in an attempt to force a "break" that might lead to a touchdown. Wilson Schwenk was doing the kicking for Beaumont and was getting better yardage than was Gale Keene in the first part of the game.

But with the insertion of Hudler in the game, Webster gained on each exchange of punts, and finally the Statesmen took the ball on Beaumont's 35-yard line. After a 5-yard penalty, Keene passed to Hudler who took the ball on the Beaumont 30-yard stripe and raced down the sidelines for the lone score of the game. The plunge for the extra point failed.

Hudler not only scored the only touchdown and kept Beaumont on the defensive by his punting, but he stopped every attempt to gain around his end, and broke up several passes. In the last quarter, when Beaumont attempted to pass, he grabbed the ball as it left the passers' hand and started for the goal line with a clear field ahead, but slipped and fell on the uncertain footing.

Beaumont's bright spot was the work of J. Huber, big right tackle, and the ball carrying of Herman Wagner, halfback. Wagner several times threatened to break away from Webster's secondary defense and go for a score. The slippery field, however, prevented him from dodging effectively, and his runs, as well as his returns of punts, were often stopped by falls.

Clayton Wins From Principia, 31 to 0.

The Clayton High School eleven defeated the Principia Academy team, 31 to 0, in a game at Taylor Field yesterday afternoon. In the opening half the County team took advantage of breaks to gain two touchdowns and came back to score three more due to some clever forward passing.

In the first quarter Clayton took possession of the ball on a fumble due to a bad pass by the Principia center. Bud Harvey, Clayton fullback, later hit the line for the first touchdown. In the second quarter Clayton secured the ball on a fumbled punt. Gus Elbring, quarterback, passed to Jack Hughes, left end, who crossed the line for the second score.

Early in the third quarter a Principia punt was partly blocked and a Clayton player fell on the ball four yards from the Academy goal line. On the second down Harvey plunged over for a score. Elbring threw a pass to Hughes for the extra point.

Late in the third quarter Clayton scored on a long forward pass from Elbring to Hughes who caught the ball just inside the boundary line. A pass for the extra point failed. The Principia team started an offensive in this period but failed to advance beyond the 25-yard line. The final Clayton score came on another long pass from Elbring to Hughes who ran eight yards to the Academy goal line. A pass for the extra point was too long.

By the Associated Press.

Out on the Pacific Coast the football lightning struck twice yesterday as the 1934 gridiron campaign got under way. Stanford, Pacific Coast Conference champion last year and hopeful of making it two in a row, found Santa Clara just as tough as had been expected and wound up in a 7-7 tie in a battle fought before a crowd of 45,000, largest of the day.

Stag's Team Surprises.

Even more stunning, however, was the "moral victory" which Alonzo Stagg's College of Pacific youngsters won by holding highly touted Southern California to a 6—0 score. Stagg's outfit stopped the Trojans without a score in the first half, yielded to the extent of one touchdown in the third period, and then obstinately refused to permit any more scoring.

Oregon's one-sided 26—3 triumph over U. C. L. A. came under the head of another Far Western surprise. Washington downed Idaho, 13—0, and Washington State won from Montana, 27—0, in other Coast Conference games.

In the East, Pitt rolled past Washington and Jefferson, 26—6; Temple swamped Virginia Poly, 34—0; Army overcame stubborn resistance from Washburn College, 19—0, and Navy trimmed William and Mary, 20—7, in the leading games. Brown, Cornell, Dartmouth, Carnegie, Holy Cross, Boston College and Villanova all won with more or less ease.

Duke Wins Easily.

Washington and Lee took advantage of a break in the closing minutes to top Kentucky, 7—0, in the South, while Duke, co-holder with South Carolina of the Southern Conference title a year ago, trounced Virginia Military, 46—0. South Carolina defeated Erskine, 25—0, Georgia uncovered real power in running over Stetson, 42—0. Vanderbilt whipped Mississippi State, 7—0, in a Southeastern Conference fray and all the other leading favorites won.

The Mid-Western program was topped by Northwestern's 21—12 decision over a fighting Marquette team. Nebraska scored almost at will in beating Wyoming, 50—0, but Kansas got no better than a scoreless draw with another Rocky Mountain Conference invader, Colorado University. Minnesota, touted as a possible Big Ten champion, rolled up a 56—12 count on North Dakota State.

Louisiana State invaded the Southwest and was held to a 9—9 draw by Rice, while Texas A. and M. was surprisingly tied by Texas A. and I, 14—14.

DE MOLAY FOOTBALL LEAGUE OPENS TODAY; TWO GAMES SCHEDULED

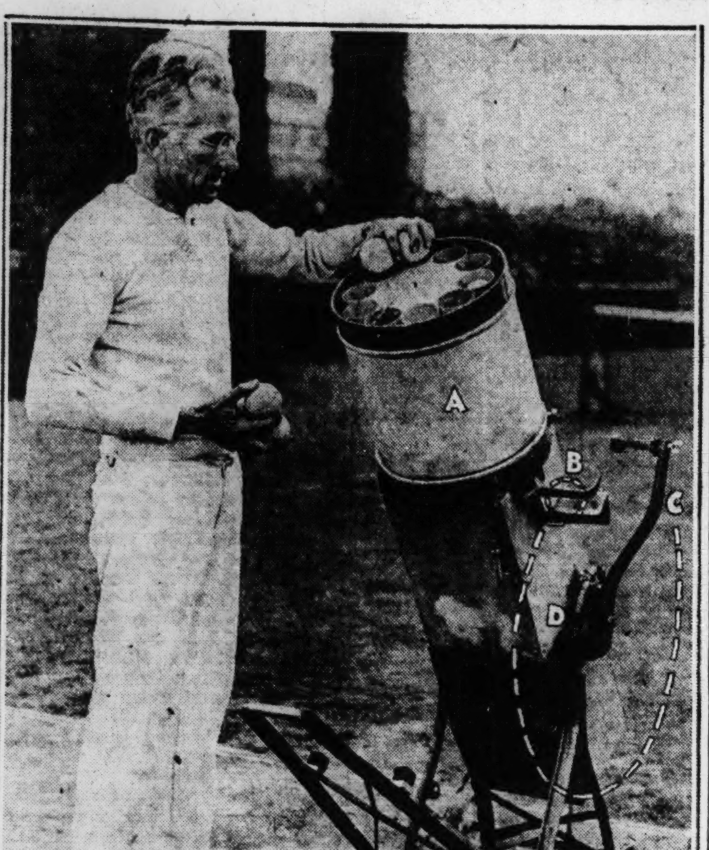
U. and Ed Huffington and Tony Sokol, both of the South Side Bar Bell Club. The meet will be good preparation for contestants for the coming W. A. A. U. district championships, which will be held Saturday, Oct. 27, at the Downtown Y. M. C. A.

St. Louisans' Tennis Robot Has All the Spins of a Bill Tilden



ABOVE the Tennis Robot is shown being loaded for action. Mr. Serrano, its inventor, is placing the balls in cylinder (A). From the cylinder the balls come through to receptacle (B), where they are held in position for Lever (C), which swings through the receptacle and produces the impact that sends the ball on its way across the court. The Spin Box (D) holds the mechanism that is regulated to put the cut or spin on the ball according to the particular shot desired.

The "tennis robot." That's what it's called. And, what originally started out as a gadget to help his son "Spud" to learn to play tennis now promises to play an important part in the development of future stars of the courts.

Six years ago Edmund H. Serrano, 6128 Pershing, decided that it was not too early to have his son start learning how to hit a tennis ball. He took him out on the courts at every opportunity and began showing him the fundamentals necessary for the development of a sound game. And Serrano has the background and experience to give a few pointers on tennis. Former Missouri State champion and a veteran of many tournaments, he not only played a strong game but knew how to teach it.

A Machine Is Built.

However, Serrano had his business to tend to. He could not devote as much time on the courts with his son as he would have liked and being of an inventive mind it appeared to him that if he could build some kind of an outfit that would shoot the balls over the net and give Spud a chance to hit all kinds of shots it would not only save him a great deal of time but would also do much to develop his son's game. The result was the first tennis robot.

A machine was built. There was nothing elaborate about it, but it worked and was tried out satisfactorily. However, Spud did not take to tennis as his dad had expected. Baseball and football seemed to be more on his mind and so the machine was soon stored in the basement and practically forgotten. Now, six years later, this original gadget has won the most enthusiastic praise and interest of the leading tennis players and coaches in the country.

Of course, the new machine is a far cry from that originally built to shoot balls at Spud. However, the mechanism is practically the same. Improvements have been made and other features perfected until now the tennis robot can do practically anything a tennis player can do except return the balls.

Holds Sixty Balls.

In design, the machine is mounted on an iron frame on wheels. At the top is a large cylindrical container which gives the appearance of an anti-aircraft gun. The cylinder has 10 cones which hold 60 tennis balls. The machine operates electrically and when the player is ready to go into action the balls drop out of the cylinders into a small receptacle, an arm swings through the receptacle and a tennis ball shoots out at the impact. The shots can come over slowly or at a terrific speed by setting the machine accordingly.

The robot allows a wide latitude of strokes. If a player is weak on top spin drives and desires to practice on this shot the machine is set for that shot and the balls shoot across the net with a top spin. If it is a chop stroke, or a lob or a flat drive that is desired the robot is set for that particular shot and so on for practically every stroke in the game. If a variety of shots are wanted the robot still does its job and the balls come over at different speeds making different bounces to keep the player on his toes because of the deceptive placements.

Among the players who was particularly pleased with the operation of the robot is Bill Tilden who tried it out on his tour here this summer. Mr. Serrano is now in the East and during the recent national singles championship at Forest Hills the outstanding players voiced their approval of the machine. And not only were the players impressed but tennis coaches of some of the leading universities have stated that it will prove of unlimited assistance to them in teaching college players.

Won Title in 1905.

Mr. Serrano is a veteran St. Louis tennis player and his Missouri State championship goes back to 1905. He also teamed with Ted Drewes to win the doubles, and city, district and central states championships have been many. He has played in Europe in several major tournaments and just recently competed in the veteran's championship at Forest Hills. One look at his trophy case would convince the most skeptical as to his ability.

The tennis robot is just one of Mr. Serrano's inventions. He has also patented a road and rail trailer and he designed most of his automobiles. He was the builder of the Hawk which was the fastest cruiser on the Mississippi when it won the St. Louis speed championship in 1925. He built his own radio and victrola. There is an attachment on the robot which renovates tennis balls by renapping them. He designs homes and he has ability as an artist. His workshop is in the basement of his home and his plans and prints are outlined on his drawing board which he drags into the living room. The baby grand piano is a convenient receptacle. Mrs. Serrano does not like that.

MARYLAND HEIGHTS AND CREVE COEUR NINE TO PLAY FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

It has been reported that the game will virtually decide the county championship, as the Maryland Heights nine are winners in the Florissant Valley League, while the Creve Coeur team has just recently won the Olive Street Road League championship.

The probable batteries are: Hackman, Schmidt and Stook for the Creve Coeur team, while Massa and Pohl will work for the Maryland Heights team.

25-LAP EVENT TO FEATURE RAMONA RACES NEXT SUNDAY

The complete program for the next automobile racing card at the Ramona Speedway, Oct. 7, was announced last night.

It will feature a 25-lap grind around the half mile oval, restricted to the three money winners in each of the three 10-lap preliminaries and the first man in the 10-lap consolation for pilots failing to finish in the money in the preliminaries. There also will be a four-lap match race between the two cars registering fastest time in the forenoon qualifying trials.

Entry blanks have been sent to 68 drivers and car owners and the management feels this wide circularization should attract more than 30 entries as only 33 entry forms were sent out for last Sunday's card, which attracted 22 speed pilots.

GUNNER SQUAD TO SCRIMMAGE IN DRILL TODAY

Feeling confident that this season's St. Louis Gunners form a more powerful football aggregation than the Gunner eleven of last year, Coach Charles "Chile" Walsh today will start putting the finishing touches on his team in preparation for their opening contest of the campaign next Sunday afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium.

The Oklahoma City Chiefs, composed of graduates of Oklahoma City U., Oklahoma U. and Oklahoma A. and M., will be the Gunners' first opponents. The Chiefs sent word here that they will be stronger than the team which tied the Gunners, 0-0, and lost to them, 19 to 0, in 1933. The previous year the Gunners bowed to the Chiefs, 3 to 0.

Two of the newcomers on the Oklahoman's team are Orvill Cory, 235-pound tackle, a regular with Oklahoma U. last season, and Haskell Holt, the big back who starred for Oklahoma City U. last year.

A scrimmage, starting at 11 o'clock this morning at the National Park, with Pete Colombo's Trojans furnishing the opposition, will start the Gunners' week of intensive training.

The Gunners, who are looking forward to their major assignments later in the campaign against National League representatives, have several good men battling for each position. Blake Workman, quarterback; Chester "Swede" Johnson, fullback, and Benny LaPresta and Manuel "Fat" Rapp, halfbacks, at present from the first-string backfield.

The Gunners, who have been practicing at the West Side Park, will hold their remaining workouts on the drill grounds in Forest Park after today.

OUTDOORS

A Warning From the Warden.

NIGHT hunters and quail hunters may work their dogs now preparatory to the opening of the fall and winter seasons but they will be held liable for any wild life killed illegally by their animals, Joe Green, chief of wardens for the Missouri Game and Fish Department, warned this week.

"There's no law prohibiting sportsmen from working their dogs, as is customary at this time of the year," Green said, "but they must see to it that the animals do not kill any wild life. Night hunters may tree a racoon or opossum but they must call off their dogs and permit the wild creatures to be secure in their refuges."

With the quail season to open Nov. 10 and the season on furbearers to open Nov. 15 many dog owners take their animals to field and woods during the first cool days of fall to work them in likely game country. Bird dogs are permitted to range over good quail territory so that the owners may learn to judge which animals will be best suited for field work when the season opens. Many sportsmen also check up on quail density while working their dogs and make mental notes of best stocked areas for reference when hunting is permitted.

Quail Hunting Outlook Good.

Although the quail density for the State has suffered from the drouth those who have been afield say that in the areas where food and cover and water have been plentiful this summer there is a normal number of birds.

Regardless of the various reports regarding quail which have been appearing from time to time, it is believed that this year, as usual, the quail hunting activities will be rivaled only by rabbit hunting in importance to Missouri sportsmen.

Fox hunters have had their packs at work for several weeks and some have hunted nearly all summer. Chief of Warden Green's admonishment hardly could be taken to include fox hunters, however, the devotees of Reynard's chase in Missouri say, because the fox hunters of this section usually zealously protect the fox from any harm in or out of the fur season.

It is the pre-season fur hunter and the racoon hunter who, when working his dogs, cannot resist the opportunity to see a good fight, who usually causes the Game and Fish Department the most concern at this time of year. Muskrat trappers, too, cause the game wardens much extra work as the annual take of rats before the season officially opens usually is high compared to other kinds of pelts.

Because of the deforestation in Missouri, especially the destruction of dead trees in farm wood lots, the reduction of hollow trees has a serious effect upon the supply of "coons," the last of the bear family in Missouri. Racoon are said to have suffered more than any other fur-bearing animals in recent years and several proposals to regulate the annual take of these wild life creatures have been made.

Trout Fishing Fair.

Trout fishing at Roaring River, Bennett Spring and Montauk State parks will continue until Nov. 1, when the season will close until next March. Spawning of trout for propagation will be started soon after Nov. 1.

Those who have fished at the parks this year have been fairly successful as the streams have been stocked with several hundred thousand legal-size rainbows.

BOWLING NOTES

Otto Friendly, veteran St. Louis bowler, has taken over the management of the New Royale Bowling alleys, located at 3937 Olive street, and will be assisted by Gus Lang. A junior major scratch league, to bowl on Thursdays, is being organized and any team or bowlers desiring to join the league are asked to get in touch with Friendly or Lang at FRanklin 7249.

Various Station Calls. On the Short Waves.

THE national broadcasting systems of the world have almost as many different "station break" signals as they have accents. The characteristic chimes heard over American networks and stations are matched abroad by everything from bells, gongs, trumpet calls, nightingale and cuckoo calls to tinkly tunes on musical boxes, xylophones and hammers striking anvils.

Calling attention to the use of tonal characteristics and names of some of the foreign stations often heard in the United States, the U. S. Department of Commerce's new log of short wave radiophone stations contains the following list of aids for listeners:

German stations play a repeated score, using bells and musical boxes.

FYA, France, plays the "Marseillaise," and its announcers call out: "Hello, hello, ici Paris, Radio Coloniale."

RV59, Moscow, plays the "Internationale" and midnight chimes at 5 p. m., Eastern Standard time; it also calls out in English: 'Hello, hello, here is Moscow."

PHI, Netherlands, calls: "This is Huizen."

I2RO, Italy, is "Radio Roma-Napoli."

SRI, Poland, calls out: "Hello, hello, Polski Radjo-Poznan."

VK2ME, Australia, broadcasts the Kookaburra bird call.

T14NRH, Guatemala, carries bugle calls.

YV11BMO, Venezuela, calls: "La-Vox de Lago."

EUNICE HOWARD

RECENTLY said by Alla Nazimova to be the outstanding radio actress whom she had heard on the air. Miss Howard will resume her role as Linda in the Red Davis sketches.

"High Fidelity" Radio Tests Soon.

By MARTIN CODEL.

UPON the newly opened broadcasting band between 1500 and 1600 kilocycles, which represents a widening beyond its present upper limit of the normal 550-1500 kilocycle band, may fall the burden of proving whether so-called "high fidelity" transmission and reception are practicable and feasible. By high fidelity is meant obtaining the full tonal range of music as faithfully as it is renderd in music hall or broadcast studio. Probably 50 per cent of today's radio sets and virtually all sets manufactured in the last two years, can tune to 1600 kilocycles.

Engineers are divided as to the practicability of the 1530, 1550 and 1570 kilocycle channels, some holding that the higher waves are less suitable for broadcasting than the lower because they cannot be heard over a very wide radius. The commission, anxious to learn the potentialities of those waves, has required only that applicants be technically and financially qualified and that they show definite programs of research and development. Then they may be issued six-month experimental licenses, and must take their chances on later license renewals and capitalization of their efforts.

All sounds have two fundamental qualities, viz., pitch or frequency, and intensity or volume. Audible pitch extends from about 16 to 16,000 cycles, a total of 10 octaves. Modern radios cover about 5½ to six octaves. The latest phonographs (acetate recordings) and sound-on-film cover about eight octaves.

"If radio is to hold its own, our present six octave service must be brought up to a least eight octaves, or from 30 to 8000 cycles and preferably more. In other words, the base drum and the high notes must be heard equally well," explains John V. L. Hogan, noted radio engineer, who seeks one of the new licenses. "Of at least equal importance is the volume range in reproduction. In Nature, the ratio is over one million times. Ratios of 1000 are common in orchestral music. The best radios are limited to a range of about 30 to 1000 times and transmitters to about 100 times. The latest phonographs and sound-on-film have a range of about 300 times, and radio should do as well."

FAILS TO QUASH DISBARMENT

Ben F. Carpenter Jr. Loses Motion to Set Aside Order.

A motion by Ben F. Carpenter Jr., an attorney, to set aside a court order removing him from the practice of law in Missouri was overruled yesterday by Circuit Judge Hamilton. The order was entered by Judge Hamilton last October 19 on petition of the St. Louis Bar Association, which charged that Carpenter failed to account for $4300 belonging to several minor heirs for whom he was guardian.

The judgment was entered by default, Carpenter not appearing at the trial. In his motion to set aside the judgment he stated he was not personally served with the disbarment action filed by the association and had no knowledge the case was set for trial. He further stated he had a good and meritorious defense.

BOY SCOUTS TO HOLD RALLIES SATURDAY

Gatherings for North, South and Central Districts Are Scheduled.

Annual rallies of North and South Districts and the annual Moot of Central District, all scheduled for next Saturday, will provide contests and entertainment for Boy Scouts of those districts.

South District's rally, to be held on Camp Grounds 1 and 2 in Tower Grove Park, will begin with flag raising and inspection at 8 a. m. Field and cookcraft projects will continue until retreat at 4:30 p. m., after which friends and parents will join the boys in a picnic. The district flag and streamers will be awarded as prizes in the competition.

The North District rally will be held on the old tennis grounds in O'Fallon Park, opening at 1 p. m. Contests in scout projects will occupy the afternoon, and the evening meal will be followed by scout stunts, games and songs.

Lambert-St. Louis Municipal Airport will be the scene of the Central District Moot, similar to the rallies of North and South Districts. Scouts will assemble for inspection at 1 p. m., followed by events at the scout headquarters at the southwest corner of the field. Exhibitions and stunt flying will provide thrills for the boys, and parents are invited to the campfire at 7:30 p. m.

A greater amount of responsibility than formerly will be placed on older scouts in connection with this year's Merit Badge show to be held Oct. 8, 9 and 10 at the Arena, according to Willard Cox, chairman of the Show Committee.

Each scoutmaster has been instructed to designate one of his older scouts to take complete charge of ticket sales for the troop, relieving the scoutmaster of that responsibility.

Scoutmasters of all participating troops will meet at a dinner at the Forest Park Hotel tomorrow night to make plans for participation. The committee has increased the number of subjects to be presented to 126.

Every troop in the city has been asked to submit its ideas for entertainment features at the show to the Prizes and Awards Committee, and the Little Theater Committee.

A poll of those present at a recent frolic of West District at Country Day School, showed that seven and one-half years is the average length of scouting service of scouters of that district. Of the 87 present, four had been connected with the movement since its beginning in St. Louis 24 years ago.

These were L. M. (Dad) Hall, scoutmaster of Troop 46; William Kroeger, troop committeeman of Troop 2; Harry Lewis, chairman of the committee of Troop 135, and Charles Milles, activities director of headquarters' staff.

South District has changed its form of organization to facilitate its winter activities and to conform more closely to the setup of other districts of the council.

Under the new arrangement, John H. Meyer continues as district commissioner, with E. F. Richards commissioner of Division I, H. F. Walz of District II, A. W. Lantz of Division III, and W. H. Hammer of Division IV.

All Clayton troops participated in a campfire held Friday in Scout Park. W. Scott Smith, troop committeeman of Clayton Troop 2, was in charge of events and activities, and an address was delivered by Mayor Charles Shaw.

Troop Notes.

At a Court of Honor held recently by Troop 133 of Rock Church 11 merit badges were awarded. Gregg J. Puster, recently appointed scoutmaster of the troop, has announced the appointment of Ray Moore Jr., as junior assistant scoutmaster and John Tierney, senior patrol leader.

Eagle rank will be conferred on three scouts of Troop 196 at a Court of Honor Thursday night at St. John's Episcopal Church. Recipients of the honors will be Howard Barkey, Rudolph Schlatter Jr., and Richard Wheatcroft.

At a recent Court of Honor held by Troop 98 of St. Rochs' Church a silver palm award was made to Edwin Kalbfleish, Jr., and eagle to Henry G. Keeler, Jr. Life badges were presented to four scouts, star to nine, and merit badges to 43. Nine scouts were advanced in rank.

A play, "The Last Call," was presented by scouts of Troop 13, St. John's Methodist Church, following a Court of Honor Friday night. Two star scout and eight merit badge awards were made.

An eagle award was made to Albert Kaltwasser, Jr., at a Court of Honor held by Troop 41, Delmar Howard School, Thursday. One life and seven star awards were made, and 67 merit badges were presented to 16 scouts.

At a Court of Honor held Thursday by Troop 90, Temple Shaare Emeth, a star award was made to one scout and merit badges to 14.

TWO JURORS' AFFIDAVITS PUT IN APPEAL ON MOVIE CASE

They Tell of Voting to Convict Glenn Condon, Although They Didn't Believe Film Indecent.

Affidavits by two jurors that they did not believe Glenn Condon, former manager of the New Grand Central Theater, guilty of "publishing an indecent picture," and that they did not believe the film, "Elysia," to be indecent, although they voted to convict Condon, were attached to a motion for a new trial filed by Condon's attorney in the Court of Criminal Correction yesterday.

Condon was found guilty last Tuesday and punishment fixed at a $50 fine. The film, which purported to picture life in a nudist colony, was seized in a raid of the theater after its first showing last May.

One juror, Russell Albrecht, said in his affidavit that he "at no time believed the picture was indecent or the defendant was guilty of a violation of the law."

The other juror, John Hamilton, said he was the last to hold out for acquittal. He voted guilty, he said, because he believed the jury would be locked up until it reached a unanimous verdict.

HOME FINANCING PROGRAM DISCUSSED IN BROADCAST

Chairman Fahey of Federal Board Says Aim Is to Start Flow of Local Credit.

Every step taken by the Government in its home financing program has been aimed toward the re-establishment of a flow of local credit, Chairman John H. Fahey of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said in a nation-wide broadcast last night.

"The opportunity and responsibility of raising the present standard of American housing rests with the community financial institutions," he said. "Both of the major activities with which the Federal Home Loan Bank Board is concerned, the Federal Home Loan System, and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, have done their part in supplying funds so that local institutions may go ahead with their normal functions."

Morton Bodfish of Chicago, member of the original board in 1932 and executive vice-president of the United States Building and Loan League, speaking on the same program, indicated a similarity in the objectives of President Roosevelt's program and the objectives of building and loan associations, savings and loan associations, and co-operative banks. These objectives, he said, are suitable homes, security of livelihood and security against the hazards and vicissitudes of life.

They will continue to conduct a general real estate agency specializing in sales and trades of property in all sections of St. Louis and vicinity and including loans and insurance.

GOVERNMENT DAY LABOR OPERATIONS TO BE FOUGHT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—A campaign for support of a demand that the Government cease its day labor operations, viewed as direct competition with private contractors, will be brought out in the open at the annual meeting of the Associated General Contractors of America in Chicago next month.

At the meeting, according to a spokesman for the body, it will be charged that the Federal Government deliberately and unfairly has encouraged day labor competition through the issuance of an executive order permitting governmental agencies to receive preferential discounts up to 15 per cent below posted minimum posted code prices in the direct purchase of materials. This order, contractors charge, undermines the contract system.

Evidence will be presented at the meeting for the purpose of showing that in the three months since issuance of the order thousands of dollars' worth of construction work which ordinarily would be offered to general contractors for comparatively bids has been diverted to the day labor system on the pretense that the governmental agencies could, with preferential purchasing power, do the work more cheaply with their own forces.

HOUSING LOANS FOR BUILT-IN RADIOS AND REFRIGERATORS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29. — All built-in units, including furniture, radios, refrigerators, electric fans, and safes, are included in a new list of articles on which Federal Housing Administration Modernization Loans are applicable.

Originally, all equipment for which loans could be secured had to be definitely built-in or non-detachable, but new rulings liberalize conditions and give lending institutions wide latitude in determining what is eligible.

Automatic stoking and ash removal equipment, originally eligible only if permanently attached to the heating unit, is now eligible merely if permanently installed. In addition to awnings, other sun protections for windows and porches are now eligible. Among items now eligible practically without qualification are domestic water heating systems and equipment; all types of oil burners, with oil storage equipment and thermostatic controls; air conditioning equipment, except single-unit conditioners; gas ranges and water heaters; electric ranges, if permanently attached to the wiring system, and linoleum and other floor coverings, except rugs, carpets and matting.

GAIN IN HOME BUILDING EXPECTED NEXT YEAR

Authorities Resigned to Stagnation in Industry for Rest of 1934.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Greater stimulation in the field of residential building for next year is expected by some building authorities, resigned to continued stagnation of their industry during the rest of 1934.

Complete reports for August reaching the Government indicate a nominal increase in total contracts, credited to an upturn in activity in publicly financed work. Such contracts amounted to $69,000,000 during the month, as compared to $52,000,000 in July, while private construction declined to $51,000,000 from $67,000,000 the preceding month.

Residential building seemed to lag most, the August decline representing the fourth successive month in which losses were noted as compared with last year. For instance, such contracts in August amounted to only $18,000,000 as compared with slightly less than $20,000,000 the month before, and with $22,000,000 in August, 1933. Many builders think the 1934 total for residential contracts will fall below that of last year.

August showed a sharp drop in non-residential building, from $60,000,000 to $51,000,000, all chargeable to a slump in factory buildings, which declined from $25,000,000 in July to $10,000,000 in August.

Public works contracts increased to $42,000,000 during the month from $31,000,000 in July, and $32,000,000 in August of last year.

TIRES AT LESS THAN 1/2 PRICE

Why take chances with old worn tires on wet, slippery streets when you can Nu-Tred them at these low prices?

An absolutely new and different patented process that reconstructs a new heavy safety non-skid tread with all new rubber, which makes your smooth tires wear and look like new.

CORN-HOG SIGNERS PERMITTED TO INCREASE WHEAT FOR USE

Ruling Designed to Expand Crops Consumed on Farm, Not for Wheat Contract Signers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Conditional permission for signers of corn-hog adjustment contracts to increase their wheat plantings for harvest next year was announced today by the Farm Administration.

The ruling, designed to encourage production of crops for use on the farm early in 1935, does not apply to signers of wheat adjustment contracts, the announcement said.

It was explained a corn-hog contract signer in either emergency or secondary drouth areas, if his farm has a "wheat base" of less than 15 acres, may plant as much as 15 acres of wheat this year for harvest as grain in 1935. This privilege also was extended to producers having no wheat base.

Grain from the acreage in excess of the base must not be sold, but must be fed to livestock or otherwise used on the farm.

The areas in which the new interpretation is effective include all of the states of North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Iowa, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada and, in addition, Eastern Montana, Southern Idaho, Eastern Oregon, Southern and Northeastern California, the southwestern half of Arizona, practically all of Texas, Northwestern Louisiana, practically all of Arkansas, Illinois, Missouri, Wisconsin, Southern Minnesota, Southern Michigan and Northwestern Indiana.

AMATEUR ACTOR TO GO TO TRIAL IN GIRL'S DEATH

State to Ask Death Penalty for Pennsylvania Youth Charged With Murder.

By the Associated Press.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Sept. 29.—Robert Allen Edwards, 21-year-old surveyor's helper, and amateur actor, accused of slaying his fiancee so he might wed another, today went over details of testimony he will give before a jury next week. His trial begins Monday.

District Attorney Thomas M. Lewis said he will demand the electric chair, and is prepared to show Edwards kept company for six years with Freda McKetchnie, telephone operator, and meanwhile courted Margaret Crain of East Aurora, N. Y., whom he met at Mansfield Teachers' College. Lewis says he will prove Edwards deliberately plotted to rid himself of the McKechnie girl after promising to marry Miss Crain, that he invited Freda to accompany him on a midnight swim July 30 and beat her with a blackjack.

The defense will point to the Coroner's report that Freda would have become a mother about Christmas time and that in her delicate condition her plunge into chilly waters was more than her heart could withstand. Edwards has taken part in many church entertainments and amateur theatricals.

ROOSEVELT AND FRANK VYING FOR GARRISON

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-5 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Despite pressure brought to bear by President Roosevelt and officials high in his administration, Chairman Lloyd Garrison of the National Labor Relations Board now plans to leave on Oct. 19 to resume his teaching position at the University of Wisconsin.

Although President Roosevelt has not yet given up hope that he may keep Garrison in his present job, the chairman of the Labor Relations Board, which has made such a conspicuous record in its brief life, has decided that he must live up to the terms of his contract with the University. Back of this decision is a more or less open contest between President Roosevelt and President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin that has gone on for some weeks.

President Frank on his side has the weight of a contract with Garrison. President Roosevelt has argued that Garrison must stay in order that there shall be no break in the policy of the National Labor Relations Board, a policy which Garrison has sought to shape around a literal interpretation of the controversial section 7 (A) of the National Recovery Act. At least one of Garrison's decisions, that in the Houde case, concerning majority representation for collective bargaining, was contrary to one of President Roosevelt's own rulings.

Garrison's Remarkable Record.

This is an indication of the remarkable record which Garrison has made in the three months that he has been in Washington. He came to the Capitol from Madison, Wis., on July 9 to be chairman of the newly formed National Labor Relations Board which succeeded the old labor board headed by Senator Wagner of New York. Very little was known about this 37-year-old addition to the administration's so-called brain trust. He was not even listed in Who's Who.

Without delay but with a scrupulous consideration of all the interests involved, Garrison proceeded to dispose of one important case after another. Many of these cases had been pending for months, subject to postponement or evasion by one board or committee or group after another.

However, the courts may eventually rule on the opinions of Garrison's board, observers here agree that he has tried throughout to follow the letter of the laws applying to labor under the National Recovery Act, quite apart from the fierce controversy that has raged around these labor sections. It goes without saying that his task has been a difficult one. Neither have personalities seemed to play any part in his rulings or in his conduct of the innumerable hearings that he has held in the brief time he has been in Washington. In the judicial quality of his mind he is singularly detached from the play of personalities that is so much a part of official life here.

Attitude Toward Johnson.

As an example, friends tell of his relationship with Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recently retired as Administrator of NRA. In the Donovan case Garrison decided against Johnson, holding that the General and his aids had themselves violated the collective bargaining sections of NRA in dismissing a union employe. Gen. Johnson telephoned Garrison and for five minutes denounced him in the most fiery language. Also he wrote a letter to Garrison which was almost equally denunciatory. Some days later a meeting was arranged between the two. Garrison met Johnson on equable terms and said afterward that he had rarely met anyone with so much personal charm. He disagreed with Johnson's point of view and his approach to life but he could nevertheless pay him that tribute.

It is Garrison's opinion, privately expressed, that Glenn Frank is entirely in his right in requiring him to return to Wisconsin as Dean of the Law School there. The school was without a dean for two years before Garrison took it over. He has served only one year on his contract and he says that Frank's point that the school would suffer if it again was without head is a just one. Incidentally Wisconsin is probably more strongly represented in the Government than any other university, certainly than any other middle-western university.

While Garrison may return now to his academic post, it would seem probable that his public service is not ended. His capacities are such as to find an outlet beyond the requirements of teaching.

Hungarian Day Celebration.

The annual Hungarian day celebration will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Hungarian Home, 1921 South Ninth street. Coloman Kaldor, editor of the St. Louis es Videke, a Hungarian newspaper, will be master of ceremonies. Speakers will include Nickolas Labanics, president of the American-Hungarian Democratic Club; the Rev. John Gyarmathy, pastor of the Hungarian Catholic Church, and the Rev. P. N. Hamory, pastor of the Evangelical Reform Church.

Dr. Jay T. Stocking Explains Church Council's Challenge To Competitive Profit System

BY CARLOS F. HURD,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

"A GENUINELY co-operative social economy, democratically planned."

The Rev. Dr. Jay T. Stocking, Moderator of the National Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, and St. Louis pastor, takes this phrase as expressing the spirit of the much-discussed resolutions adopted by the National Council at the meeting in Oberlin, O., at which he was chosen to the chief office in the denomination.

The resolutions, as first presented to the Council, proposed that the churches should set themselves to work toward "abolition of the profit system, elimination of its incentives and habits, the legal forms by which it supports, and the moral ideas by which it justifies itself."

This was re-worded, and the resolutions, as adopted, call for a change in the "present competitive profit-seeking economy," and inauguration of the co-operative social economy before mentioned, "to adjust production to consumption requirements, modify or eliminate private ownership of the means of production or distribution wherever such ownership interferes with the social good."

'Wild Men' at Oberlin.

Even in their modified form, the resolutions aroused objections, and the new moderator's mail, received from points far and near at his Union boulevard study and forwarded to his summer home, contained a few threats of secession from the church and of withdrawal of financial support. Indignant and conservative writers repudiated the social doctrines to which, they said, the "wild men" at Oberlin had committed the denomination. Others asked what would become of the endowments of colleges and mission boards, consisting largely of the stocks and bonds of the present profit-seeking, and profit-making, economy.

But there were also letters which expressed a renewed interest in the church, as the result of the attempt made at Oberlin to set forth and deal with social problems. Some wrote that they had lost interest in the church because they felt that it had not devoted itself sufficiently to the social needs of mankind, but that they would be glad to attend and support a church with such a platform as that of the Congregational-Christian group.

Letter writers, both those who denounce and those who commend, have a way of cooling off, and Dr. Stocking does not expect great numerical gains or losses in his own congregation, or those of affiliated churches, as the result of the Council's action. Those who know the Congregational church's form of organization, he says, are aware that individual members are free to think as they please on social topics, regardless of what the National Council says, that pastors are answerable only to their own congregations, and that it has been the historic temper of the churches to give them great liberty in the interest of truth.

New Church Agency.

The Council at Oberlin established a new church agency, the Council for Social Action. Dr. Stocking believes that this was much more important than the resolutions, which were passed on the last day, with about one-fifth of the delegates present. However, he is not apologizing for the resolutions.

"They contain certain details with which I am not completely in accord," he said, "but I am in sympathy with their aim and spirit, which is to promote a more democratic economic order."

Dr. Stocking, who was a college classmate of the late Calvin Coolidge, expressed in his sermon last Sunday the belief that changes in the social order must come, and that the church should help men to visualize, and to build, a just and brotherly society. He gave a further exposition of the resolutions, and of his own views, in an interview.

"The spirit of the resolutions," he said, "is in line with the Christian ideal, which is the subjugation of the profit motive, and which emphasizes the motive of social unselfishness. They do not mean that men should be reduced to one dead level, or that special abilities and services should not have recognition.

Definition of Profit.

"Our present economy is based on private ownership and management of the means of production. Its prevailing motive has been the seeking of the greatest possible profits for those who own and operate. Profit has been defined as the earnings of management. The Council challenged this definition as not meeting the needs of today.

"People with very different ideas about how the economic system should be altered have felt that there should be better distribution of profits. William B. Dickson, former head of the Midvale Steel Co., who began as a colliery boy, has written a booklet advocating a different distribution of profits, in the interest of labor.

"As to practical and concrete measures, I am not prophet enough to see what system is going to be our way out. I am skeptical of the value and wisdom of pronouncements in favor of any system.

"The Council could not be charged with subscribing to Socialism, Communism or any other ism. There are ministers and laymen in the Congregational churches who are Socialists. I do not know of any who are Communists or Fascists, though among a million members there may be such.

"The Council's resolutions certainly were not Communist or Fascist in tone, for the co-operative social economy which they advocate is to be 'democratically planned.' Neither Communism nor Fascism, as they exist in the world today, is democratically planned.

"I should call the resolutions an expression of belief in thorough-going democracy, which would apply to economic as well as to political life.

Not a Socialist.

"Personally, I am not a Socialist. Classical Socialism has seemed to me a Utopian dream, with its slogan, 'From every man according to his ability, to every man according to his needs.' That represents a distant ideal, which can be fulfilled only as the spirit of man is developed to the point where he can be depended upon to be a thorough-going servant of the public welfare.

"Political Socialism has seemed to me to advocate a regimentation which has not been in accord with our national ideals, and does not well accord with our passion for freedom.

"There are two great objectives that we should seek to attain in our economic life, security and liberty. We must work for both. If I had to make a choice between security and freedom, I would choose freedom. But I do not desire, for myself or others, freedom to exploit our fellow men.

"There are advocates of a thorough-going totalitarian regime, in which each person would cheerfully take assignments in the public service. Personally, I don't wish an order in which I must take assignments, nor did the Council action envisage such an

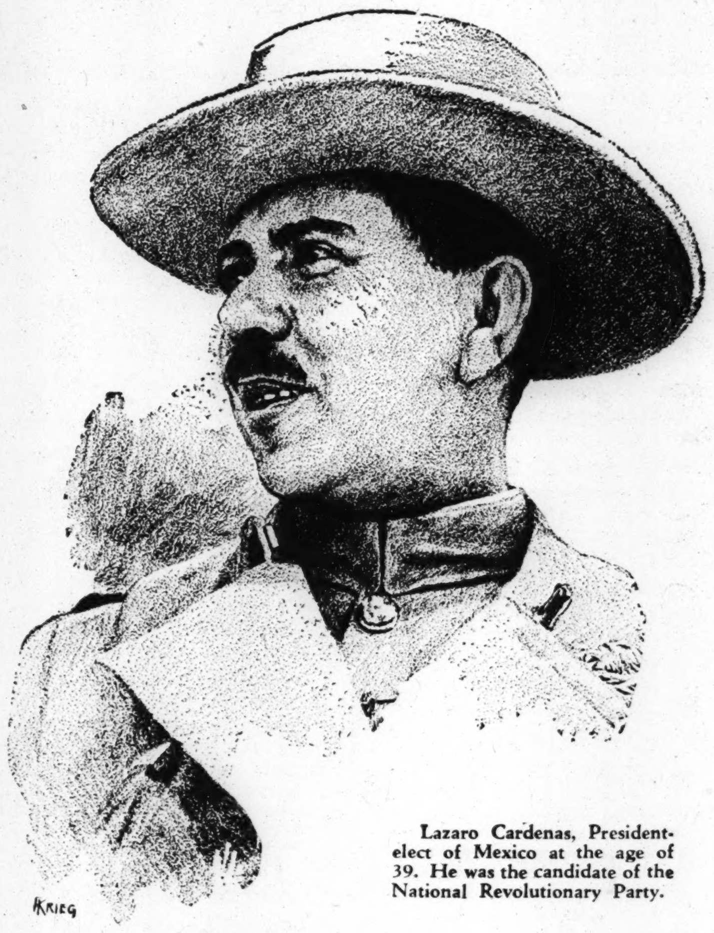
Mexico's Progress in Its Own "New Deal" For Its Once Severely Oppressed Masses

Several Million Farmers Now Have Use of Land for Their Own Profit; Rural Schools for the Masses Employ Progressive Educational Ideas; Labor Has Won Many Advantages.



Lazaro Cardenas, President-elect of Mexico at the age of 39. He was the candidate of the National Revolutionary Party.

BY THOMAS B. SHERMAN,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

MEXICO, D. F., Sept. 25.

THE impending change in government in the United States of Mexico—a change that will take place when General Lazaro Cardenas becomes President during the first week in December—inevitably brings the Mexican Revolution to a new phase. A shakeup in the personnel of the various ministries is regarded as highly probable both by members of the Revolutionary Party and by outside observers. But replacements in the Government, whether many or few, will serve to give the Revolution a new emotional impulse rather than to provide the instrument for any radical change of policy.

This view, which is the one generally held by responsible revolutionary leaders, rests on the assumption that the directional lines of the revolution have already been laid out. The aspirations of the Mexican people have been articulated, an economic system adapted to their peculiar needs and their peculiar genius has been outlined, a program has been drawn up. The success of the incoming administration, then, will depend on the extent to which this program is realized rather than on the formulation of new ideas. The Revolution already has its ideology. Even the complete "socialization of education," which General Cardenas recently promised, is implicit in Article 3 of the 1917 Constitution.

In so expressing themselves the revolutionary leaders reveal frankly their belief that "the Revolution has just begun." But at the same time they feel that material progress has already been made and that, despite many incidental failures, the Revolution has already justified itself in the eyes of its own people and the civilized world.

The Mexican Government's own story of its main accomplishments since the inauguration of the revolutionary area is the one that will be told herein. It is derived from information and interpretive analyses furnished by Luis Leon, Minister of Agriculture under President Calles, now Director General of "El Nacional," the Revolutionary Party newspaper; from Ramon Beteta, Chief of Statistics of the Government; Ernesto Martinez de Alva, Chief of Credits in the Bank of Agriculture; Salvador Novo, Chief of Public Relations; Roberto Cordoba, a Mexican member of the Claims Commission set up during the administration of President Obregon, and from the answers to an extensive questionnaire submitted to the Departments of Agriculture, Communications and Public Works, Education and the Treasury Department.

There is also much evidence plainly visible even to a roving eye. Farmers can be seen working the ejidos or communal lands, the rural schools are functioning in plain view and new hard surfaced roads often run side by side with or criss-cross the primitive trails that they supplanted. The operations of the labor and sanitary reforms instituted by Presidents Obregon and Calles and carried on by their successors are not so obvious. But the agrarian program and the rural schools constitute the heart of the revolution. They form the most immediate and most direct response to the bitter cry of a disinherited people and supply the basis for what Mexican leaders believe will be an enduring political and economic system.

New Era Began With President Madero

The present revolutionary era began with the election of Francisco Madero to the presidency. At that time the population of Mexico was estimated at 15,160,000. It had to be an estimate because the systematic compilation of national statistics did not begin until the first census of Mexico was taken in 1930. Of that number more than 70 per cent were on the land. Aside from the inhabitants of the disappearing "free villages," who worked what remained of the communal lands—a survival of pre-conquest days—and the land owners themselves with their overseers, armed guards and hangers-on, this whole rural population was virtually a community of slaves. Or, more strictly, rural Mexico was a series of medieval fiefs, each with its overlord, standing army and established church. If there is any injustice in this comparison, it is not against the Mexican hacendado, for he acknowledged no obligation other than the one discharged by the payment of 25 or 50 centavos a day.

Since the peon received wages he was theoretically free to take himself and his services wherever he wished. Actually he was bound to the hacienda, hand and foot, body and soul for the reason that his wages, which were generally paid in the form of credit at a Mexican equivalent of the company store, were never sufficient to clear him of his debt to his patron. And even when he did earn enough the hacienda bookkeeper did not hesitate to falsify the accounts in order to keep him in debt.

If he attempted to escape he could be—and was—hunted down by the hacienda guards or by the rurales, the soldiers of the central government presided over by Don Porfirio Diaz. In general he accepted his lot even though he could be punished in any way that struck the fancy of his overseer and for any offense, however trivial, and even though his women were subject to the droit du seigneur in all its variations.

Madero a Rich Man and Real Reformer

Naturally there were exceptional hacendados. Some of the owners actually lived on their lands and a smaller number tried to ameliorate the condition of their subjects by providing them with decent living quarters. But in general the picture, by all reputable accounts, was one of unrelieved degradation.

Such a system not only debased nearly three-quarters of the population, involving the greater part of the nation's basic racial stock, but had no justification from an economic viewpoint. The haciendas, in general, employed primitive agricultural methods and made no attempt to work all of the potentially cultivable lands. There was no thought of the place each unit occupied in the national economy. The only object was to roll up a profit that would enable the owners, sojourning for the most part in Mexico City or Europe, to live in a sufficient style.

But, to repeat, there were exceptional hacendados. Madero was one of them. When he was elected to the Presidency he possessed what, among Mexican politics of that period, was the almost unique virtue of being disinterested. A rich man, he had no empty pockets to line; a humane and a sensitive man, he had no raging conscience to satisfy.

Francisco Madero, however, was a Wilsonian liberal at a time when he might, just as effectively, have been a Transcendentalist or a Swedenborgian. He was aware of his country's plight and was genuinely moved by it but he thought that, given free suffrage, honest elections, civil liberties and popular education, all the problems of the nation would solve themselves. He wanted to forgive his enemies and forget. He was not a realist, and he paid for it with his life.

Influence of Zapata and His Land Rebellion

Land reform never moved out of the political stage with Madero. It was Emiliano Zapata—bandit to some and flaming patriot to others—who moved the question directly into the sphere of practical economics by seizing most of the large estates in the State of Morelos and turning them over to his followers. In the Cortez Palace at Cuernavaca, Diego Rivera has painted Zapata standing with a machete which drips blood instead of sugar cane juice. This was the Zapata who prosecuted his land rebellion so successfully in Morelos and parts of Guerrero and Hidalgo that he virtually forced the Carranza decree of 1915. By this decree all the communal lands which had been alienated by the hacendados from the villages through force or guile were restored. It also provided that the villages which could prove no title to lands would be given lands anyhow.

This decree became a part of the organic law of the nation with the adoption of the Constitution of 1917. It was confirmed by the now famous Article 27 which describes the ownership of lands and waters. This article provided first of all that the "ownership of land and waters within the limits of the national territory is vested originally in the nation, which has had and has the right to transmit title thereof to private persons, thereby constituting private property."

Farther on it provided:

"Settlements, hamlets situated on private property and communes which lack lands or water, or do not possess them in sufficient quantities for their needs, shall have the right to be provided with them from the adjoining properties, always having due regard for small landed holdings. Wherefore, all grants of land made up to the present time under the decree of January 6, 1915, are confirmed."

Still farther on this same article provided for the indemnification of land owners whose property had been expropriated.

In short, lands which had belonged to the villages from time immemorial and which had been swallowed up by the big estates through one ruse or another, were to be restored to the villages without compensation to the so-called owners. But lands which were expropriated as an act of public necessity were to be paid for with twenty-year, five per cent bonds.

Agrarian Reforms Not Realized at First

Even with this definite guarantee of lands for the people written into the Constitution, the Agrarian Reforms still remained largely on paper. Present day students of the situation feel that Article 27, so far as Carranza was concerned, was nothing more than a device to bring the Zapatistas into camp. In any case, Carranza did practically nothing about it and his failure in this respect was conceded to be one of the reasons for his downfall. But even with Obregon—a confirmed Agrarian—the land reforms made very slow progress. The distribution was slow, attempts at co-operative working of whole ejidos were unsuccessful, the peons had no way of buying farm implements or sustaining themselves while the crops matured, and finally the whole program was interrupted by the de la Huerta revolution, which was an anti-agrarian move.

Under Calles the enabling legislation was clarified and the program moved forward again. It was restimulated by Portes Gil, languished somewhat under Rubio, picked up again under Rodriguez and now awaits the coming of General Cardenas for what may be its most important phase.

Up to the present time some 5,000,000 men, women and children have been affected by the restitution of the ejidos to the free villages. That is to say they have been moved out of the hacienda villages and are now enjoying or are about to enjoy all the fruits of the lands that they work.

The only exact figures available are those of Dec. 31, 1933. At that time 5639 ejidos had been cut off in equal parts from the hacienda lands and allotted to the villages, and 8440 ejidos were in the process of being allotted. The term ejido applies to the total amount of land belonging to each village. The total amount of land involved was 11,000,000

Mussolini Replies to Charge Of Militarism in Regimentation Of All Italians From 8 to 55

BY BENITO MUSSOLINI,

ROME, Sept. 29.

THE address I delivered at the end of the grand maneuvers—an address which is now called "the Tank," because my rostrum was a fast tank—and dedicated to Lieut. Chiesa of the Trentino regions, who was shot by the Austrians during the war, marked the beginning of a new and most important phase in the Fascist revolution.

I said then that Italy must be continually more military, militarist, warlike. I explained the reasons for that supreme necessity. At the last meeting of the Cabinet I decided upon a series of measures which will stamp this character upon the Italian people in a brief space of time. The fundamental point is that the citizen and the soldier form one unit, from 8 to 55 years of age.

There are no precedents for this, either in the contemporary world or in that of the past. It is a new event in history and there is a great probability that it cannot be imitated because in no nation of the world exist the historical, political and moral conditions which render this gigantic regimentation of millions and millions of men for 47 years of their lives possible, except in Italy alone.

In Fascism's 13th Year.

I have not the slightest doubt of its success for the present and for the future. It comes after 16 years of Fascism and 12 years of the Fascist regime. It will begin to live in all its fullness on Oct. 29, this first day being the beginning of the thirteenth year of Fascism.

Certainty comes from the fact that the Italian people are the most disciplined in the world and today, after war and revolution, have become a strong and hardy people, resistent and tenacious, profoundly conscious that an unarmed nation is sure neither of its existence nor its future.

The usual professional pacifists—who are the most dangerous enemies of real peace—are not lacking in denouncing Italian "militarism." The accusation leaves us indifferent. We admit fully the foundation of the accusation but reject as ridiculous and anti-historic any blame whatsoever. None of it is destined to disturb peace, but instead to reinforce it.

This militarization of the Italian people is in perfect relation with the postulates of our doctrine, just as I illustrated them under "Fascism" in the "Grande Enciclopedia Italiana."

War Always With Us.

In that essay I defined precisely our point of view on the subject of war, which I considered eternally bound to the fate of the human race. To bear arms is for Fascism the supreme privilege, the highest honor, the most acceptable of duties. The Fascist considers life as battle and spurns the "easy life."

The Fascist loves risk and does not fear death. The Fascist believes that the people which lives for bread alone will finish by losing even that.

Our mental position is the irreconcilable antithesis of all the hedonistic conceptions of liberalism. A people too civilized, too refined, too inclined to "comfort" will finish by softening itself and by decaying, and won't know how to resist another people which has remained foreign to that way of living.

Causes of Rome's Fall.

Many were the causes of the fall of the Roman empire, and perhaps they could all be reduced to this: the more an empire gains in area, the more it loses in consistency and depth. The vastness of the empire provoked constantly infiltrations from the Orient; luxury came and easy life with it, mercenaries and finally new races less civilized but more vigorous stood at the weakened frontiers of the empire. They initiated a new period of history.

Today the military character, impressed as a fundamental factor on the life of man, is the most useful even in times of peace and even in daily doings.

On the subject of militarism no nation can cast the first stone. Let us look at Russia and Japan and the world at large. Although these two nations have two diametrically opposed economic and social systems, their military spirits are identical. The Soviets proceed toward a militant social philosophy, while Japan concentrates all her energies on a greater empire. It little matters what animating forces are behind this imperialist spirit; it is sufficient for the progress of a nation that this spirit reside in the mind of the masses in a way that they will act and move as one organism.

Britain and America.

There are other imperialistic nations but their eagerness is mitigated by their riches and philosophy. The great British empire is showing some fissures as a result of a declining birthrate. The United States, a giant, where only a few are called to the colors, is also showing a similar tendency, though it is still inflamed with the fighting spirit of the pioneers.

The sublimest act of faith a man can achieve is that of sacrificing his own life for the sake of national collectivity. In the present clash of ideals, shall we subject those we nurse in our souls to those we consider wrong or inferior, and only because this impels us to resort to arms?

The people without a fighting spirit is doomed.

In the relations between states it is war which ultimately decides. I defined war as "the supreme court of a people." It is that indeed, because victory and defeat are factors which determine the hierarchies of states. Its judgment is final. An appeal can be but another war.

The victory of one state over another is not solely an event of a military character. The results of victory are felt in all fields. It was on account of this invincibility that the ancient Roman legionary used to say proudly: "Civis Romanus sum" (I am a Roman citizen).

HOUDON BUST OF JEFFERSON BOUGHT BY BOSTON MUSEUM

Marble Carved by Famous Frenchman Jean Antoine Was in Destutt de Tracy Family for Century.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Sept. 29. — A marble portrait bust by Jean Antoine Houdon of Thomas Jefferson has been purchased by the Boston Museum of Fine Arts from the Destutt de Tracy family of France.

It has been in the family of the De Tracys and its branches more than 100 years.

A family tradition says that the bust was presented by Jefferson to his friend, the philosopher, Antoine Louise Destutt de Tracy.

There is also evidence, according to Edwin J. Hipkiss, curator of decorative arts at the museum, that the bust was made for Lafayette, a close friend of both Destutt and of Jefferson. Lafayette's daughter married into the Destutt de Tracy family, and it is believed that through inheritance from her father she may have brought the bust into the Destutt collection.

Houdon exhibited a plaster bust of Jefferson in the Paris salon of 1789 and the marble probably was cut soon after as it is signed "Houdon, 1789" under the right shoulder.

The Jefferson bust has been well preserved and the bloom of the old marble is practically undisturbed.

On the Toboggan.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WE are on the toboggan, have been for some time, but the evidence increases.

Came repeal of the prohibition amendment. Sentiment for this downward step was created by those who favored indulgence at the price of social security. The price we pay increases constantly.

Death list mounts daily, from highway and street accidents. "Careless driving," of course, but drink has always made drivers careless. When Gov. Park called for a safety observance month, he would have got surprising results if he could have closed every legal and illegal place where beer and stronger liquors are sold.

Brewers back in politics—or were they ever out? Recent liberal contributions to the party that opened their breweries. Their representatives on our Board of Aldermen prevent needed tax legislation.

Our city overrun with illegal joints and "taverns"—the old and much more euphonious word was saloon. Repealists promised that all this would end with repeal. It has not, and will not. As long as alcohol can be manufactured for 50 cents a gallon, the bootlegger will be with us.

Then, in the midst of our ethical depression, the "reform" Mayor of New York City favors a bill making the lottery legal in that city. One thing leads to another. License liquor for revenue; license gambling for revenue. Our ethically depressed St. Louis Aldermen seem to be falling for the idea.

Also, the election crooks are with us again, redolent of the days when Butler and his Indians ran the city.

Two or three years of the present drift and another Joe Folk will be required to clean up the situation. W. G. J.

Grand Opera Prices.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WITHIN a few days, some eight performances of grand opera will be given in St. Louis, and no doubt those who go to the Municipal Auditorium will reap both benefit and pleasure from what they will hear.

But the fly in the ointment is that prices are out of reach of the poor and the near-poor, and there are a few hundred thousand of them. Out of more than 3100 seats in the auditorium, about 170 are priced at $1. They were all sold more than two weeks before the opening night. All the other seats are from $2 to $5, which most of us cannot afford for a single performance. The result is—as usual—that those who need musical education most will again go without it. D.

Mr. Rosecan and the Nudist Film.

IT was my privilege to hear Prosecuting Attorney Rosecan's brilliant, searching plea to the jury in the noted "Elysia" nudist film case. I have been about the country, in and out of courtrooms considerably, and Mr. Rosecan made one of the most eloquent pleas I ever heard made before a jury. I am not surprised that the verdict was "guilty."

That verdict is a glorious blow to indecency on the screen. All self-respecting persons should be aware that they have won a victory en masse. Our women, especially mothers, should glory in the fact that they have such a relentless fighter against obscenity as their Prosecuting Attorney. DECENCY.

Comparison.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE present precarious condition of Germany and Hitler's dictatorship may be compared to the case of a dangerously-ill man who, after consulting a number of specialists without getting much benefit, decided to employ a quack who promised to cure him completely, quickly and pleasantly. At first, the quack used the well-known quack remedies, but failing to give even temporary relief, took a heavy club and beat him into insensibility. These stunning blows brought the patient to silence at last. With a triumphant mien and much exultation, the quack exclaimed to the distracted family: "You see, he is cured; he does not even moan now!"

World's Fair Finances.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MR. SUMMERSBY'S letter about world's fair finances is diverting to those who remember the old-time expositions, which fiscally were great sinkholes into which the United States Government siphoned money. The last remittance sent from Washington to the St. Louis fair proved to be more than was required and, instead of returning the money to the Treasury, the Francis-Thompson management and its congressional agents got the Government to leave the balance here. The Jefferson Memorial was built with this money. The St. Louis fair, and others which helped themselves to the national funds in like manner, gave the spectator more for his 50-cent admission fee than the present Chicago fair, which had to get along without Government aid. Manager Lohr is correct, however, in stating that the Chicago exposition is the first to close "in the black." H.

A GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

President Roosevelt thus far has adopted a tone of airy—at times almost contemptuous—dismissal in dealing with the growing insistence that he end the uncertainty over the future trend of the administration's major policies. It seems to be the attitude of the President, if we may judge from his Green Bay speech and from news reports of his recent White House press conferences, that the uneasiness which retards recovery exists solely in the minds of the larger industrialists and that if they would shake off their "inhibitions," recovery would go speedily forward. It was in this spirit, apparently, that the President at one of his conferences with the newspaper men, when asked to comment on business reactions, remarked with a smile, as the Associated Press reported, "that he didn't have as many reactions as many business men, nor as many inhibitions either."

The lightheartedness of the President is proverbial, and at times it has been an admirable and a useful trait. But we submit that the tone he has taken toward requests for a chart of his intentions is ill suited to the present situation. There can be no real recovery until business is freed of its apprehensions, until the investment funds lying idle in the banks are put to work in private enterprise, and until, as a result of those two happy circumstances, men are restored to their jobs in sufficient numbers to create a purchasing power that does not depend, as it now largely depends, on the outpouring of borrowed Government money.

It does not answer the needs of the situation for the President to say, as he said in effect in his Green Bay speech, that confidence has returned to all save a few ultra-conservatives. The fact is that the current uneasiness permeates the whole business structure; it is felt by the little business men as well as the big—and there are many more little business men than big. This uneasiness cannot be allayed, it can only be increased, by denial of its existence or by saying that it amounts merely to a case of jitters for which there is no warrant in the facts.

In commenting on the President's Green Bay speech, we said that the occasion was not one on which the President could reasonably be expected to give a detailed statement of his intentions, but that the time was close at hand when he should deal specifically with a number of questions—such paramount questions as the future status of the dollar, the future of the crop-reduction policies of the AAA, the administration's plans with respect to further public works expenditures, the administration's present attitude toward budget balancing.

That time, we believe, is now at hand. The country needs a more definite chart than it has had. It may be argued that the demand for reassurance to business has been sufficiently met by such speeches as that the other day by Secretary of Commerce Roper, who reminded us that most of the recovery measures of the administration were passed as emergency, not permanent, legislation, and took pains to disavow any intention on the part of the New Deal to substitute a new social order for that founded on private profit.

The Secretary's speech served only partly its manifest purpose of reassuring business—only partly, because of speeches by other administration spokesmen which have seemed to many business men to look in another direction. Something more is needed if the confidence that is essential to a sound business advance is to be restored.

Only the President can fill this need. He cannot fill it by cavalier disparagement of those who are asking for information. A great opportunity awaits him in the radio speech he is to deliver to the country tonight.

CHANNEL CROSSINGS.

The English Channel once was a formidable body of water, before which the venturesome quailed and whose crossing was on occasion a matter of historical moment, as in 1066 A. D., when William of Normandy did it. Passage by boat still has its terrors of mal de mer, but that mode of journey is no longer a necessary hardship, since airplanes now carry thousands of passengers across the strait in ease and comfort, in just a few minutes longer than a jiffy. The first aviator to fly across, Bleriot, in 1909, won renown by the feat, but it is now a commonplace.

It is much the same with the channel swimmers. The first recorded swim was in 1875, and Capt. Webb held the lone distinction for 36 years. Beginning a dozen years ago, the channel has been a virtual water carnival. Men, women and children have stroked and kicked their way across, and not alone professional swimmers, but a mattress maker, two bakers, an insurance clerk, two woman typists and a nursemaid.

Crossings by sailboat, motorboat and rowboat rouse no furor. One German traveler even walked across, by means of floats attached to his feet. The latest crossing was perhaps the greatest affront to the channel's former terrors. A Frenchman worked his way over in, or on, a device known as a hydrosphere, which is a ball a foot in diameter, through which a double paddle is passed. Next thing we know, election-bet losers from the Continent will show how little they think of England's formerly reliable water hazard by pushing wager winners across in wheelbarrows.

HONOR FOR JAMES WELDON JOHNSON.

The appointment of Dr. James Weldon Johnson as visiting professor of education at New York University gives him the distinction of being the first Negro named to the faculty of one of New York City's large institutions of learning. It is an honor well deserved. Both as a creative writer and as an interpreter of his race's literature, he has earned for himself a high place in American letters. His first book, a novel, "The Autobiography of an Ex-Colored Man," goes back almost a quarter-century. As the years have passed, his writings have received more and more notice, until "God's Trombones" and "Along This Way" achieved places among the more notable publications of 1927 and 1933, respectively. The latter, a report of its author's varied life—he has been a high school principal, a lawyer and an American Consul in Venezuela and Nicaragua—was received by critics with an enthusiasm accorded to few American autobiographies. Thanks chiefly to his presence, a movement for the collection, preservation and interpretation of Negro folklore has taken firm root at Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., where he has been professor of creative literature since 1930. James Weldon Johnson's lectureship at the country's largest university—in the number of students enrolled—should call attention as never before to the cultural contributions of the Negro to American life.

"CHILDREN IN ARMS": A NEW MEANING.

Some observers of the European situation have expressed hopes that the peoples now governed by dictatorships will in time throw off their despotic masters. These expressions usually are qualified, however, when the observers consider the energetic campaigns to convert the minds of youth to the Fascist and militarist philosophy.

Mussolini's recent decree providing compulsory military training and service for all Italian males between the ages of 8 and 55 is a case in point. "The functions of a citizen and of a soldier are not divided in the Fascist state," said the Council of Ministers in announcing the decree. Mere children are to be prepared "spiritually, physically and militarily" by the two organizations, Balilla and Youths of Combat.

This action comes but a few weeks after Mussolini had ordered Italy to become "more military, militarist, warlike." With this objective, his motive in drafting youngsters from the nation's sandpiles and playgrounds is obvious. It will not take them long to embrace the tenet Mussolini reiterates in his article in today's Post-Dispatch: "To bear arms for Fascism is the supreme privilege, the highest honor, the most acceptable of duties." He is frank in his preachments of arming the people, but the world has not forgotten the verdict of Gen. Bliss, that the World War was caused by "too many men running around Europe with guns in their hands."

In Germany, a similar conquest of youth is in progress. Youths whose fathers are in concentration camps for holding liberal or pacifist ideals, whose mothers may be in exile, have undergone a swift conversion into thorough Nazis, abhorring their parents' conscientious beliefs. The Hitler Youth, with its various branches, includes a million or more youngsters, officially from age 10, but many in its ranks appear even younger. They are assiduously trained in military tactics, in Nazi slogans, in the prevalent philosophy of force and intolerance.

One phase of the movement was described as follows by Kenneth Roberts, writing in the Saturday Evening Post last June:

> The Hitler Youths are entranced with the uniforms, the marching, the shrill orders, the flags, the fifes and drums, the hand-grenade throwing, the colored whistle cords, the little daggers that hang from the front of their belts. These daggers must be bought by every Hitler Youth. The idea was originated by a clever Nazi who saw in the daggers bait for catching Hitler Youth and also a device for helping the Solingen steel industry.

So the Fascist dictators are rearing a generation of youths bred in militarism, their receptive young minds saturated with a creed of repression. Unless rebellion by their elders comes soon and swiftly, Fascism seems likely to build for itself a stable bulwark of regimented citizens. The process is a shocking one to peoples with a tradition of liberty and tolerance. It gives a new and sinister meaning to the phrase, "children in arms."

ABUSE OF THE PAROLE POWER.

In commenting upon an application for parole made on behalf of George M. Hunter, who had just been sentenced to two years in prison, Federal Judge Faris said:

> You may file, but I won't promise to grant a parole. The notion seems to be abroad that all defendants in these courts have the right of parole. I guess that is largely due to the fact that the Government Parole Board seems to be taking them out of one end of the institution as fast as the courts put them in the other.

Recently, at the American Bar Association convention at Milwaukee, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Division of Investigation of the Department of Justice, was speaking of the abuse of the parole power by which many desperate criminals are turned loose on society. Mr. Hoover had an excellent suggestion for curbing this abuse. He said:

> I believe that possibly the best solution of this problem is widespread publicity. Anything bearing upon the matter of pardon and parole should be widely publicized, particularly the identity of those representing the criminals seeking the extension of clemency.

It is a notorious and unsavory fact that many paroles granted are at the instance of powerful politicians who "front" for criminals, secure in the knowledge that their intercession will be kept secret. Senators, Representatives and party leaders would think twice before pleading for hardened criminals if they knew the fact would become public.

We suggested to Mr. Hoover at the time of his statement that the reform he seeks should begin at home, namely, at the Department of Justice, which has pursued the policy of denying to the press information about parole applications. Vainly has the press sought this information from the department of which Mr. Hoover is a member. We repeat now that the way for the Department of Justice to aid in curbing the parole evil is to turn on the light.

ERRANDS OF MERCY AT SEA.

William A. Robinson, writer and explorer, was stricken with appendicitis last May while on a small boat in the Galapagos Islands, off the Panama coast. In response to a radio appeal for help, two navy planes carrying physicians flew more than 1000 miles to his relief and a destroyer conveyed him to the Canal Zone. Immediately the question was asked: If a plain citizen, poor and without prestige, were ill far from home, would the navy give assistance?

Navy officials replied that the service drew no lines in errands of mercy, and three recent incidents bear them out. A coast guard plane took a Philadelphia surgeon 250 miles to sea to treat a seaman who was reported dangerously ill, but whose ailment proved to be a cinder in the eye. The airplane carrier Ranger went 300 miles off its course in South American waters to save the life of a freighter's cook, suffering from hemorrhage. Two naval planes flew 100 miles with pneumonia serum for a 13-year-old Haitian girl.

It is one of the finest things about the rigid code of the sea that such efforts to relieve distress and save lives are undertaken wherever possible, regardless of distance or inconvenience. Some of the disclosures about the crew's behavior in the Morro Castle disaster are all the more shocking because of the apparent disregard of that admirable code.

JOHN G. NEIHARDT

Remarkable First Novel

NOW IN NOVEMBER. By Josephine Johnson. (Simon & Schuster, New York City.)

THIS very remarkable first novel tells the story of one year in the life of a farming family struggling without hope against a four-fold curse—the incubus of debt, the tragic absurdity of the present economic situation, the drouth and a fatally morbid strain in the father that fills the household with "worry and fear like a gray fog," becomes madness in one of the daughters and colors all the seeing of another who tells the pitiful story.

The Haldmarnes, evidently victims of the economic breakdown, had moved to the farm 10 years before the story opens, and it is against the background of that decade of fruitless struggle that the tale develops. "Now in November" of the climactic year (call it 1933 if the calendar seems to matter), Marget Haldmarne recalls the atmosphere of dread that clung about them that day in March when they first looked upon the long-abandoned farm that was to be their home.

Mother was hopeful that the old apple trees would yield a good harvest. "No market even if they bear," said Father, already whipped before the fight began; "it's mortgaged land."

"Nobody answered, and the wagon went on groaning and squeaking in the ruts. Merle and I watched the jays, blue-flickering through the branches, and heard their screams. The elms were thick with buds and brown-webbed across the sky. It was beautiful and barren in the pastures, and the walnuts made a kind of lavender-colored shadow, very clean.

"Things were strange and unrelated and made no pattern that a person could trace easily. Here was the land and the spring air full of snow melting, and yet the beginning of fear already—this mortgage, and Father consumed in himself with sour irritation and the future dread. But Mother sat there very quiet. He had not told her the place was mortgaged, and the land at least, she had thought, was unencumbered, and sanctuary though everything else was gone. But even in the moment when she saw that this, too, was uncertain and shifting ground, something she always had — something I didn't know then and may never know— let her take it quietly. A sort of inner well of peace. Faith, I guess it was.

"She stood a great deal, and put up with much, but all without doubt or bitterness; and that she was there, believing and not shaken, or not seeming so, at least, was all that we needed then to know. We could forget for the time this sense of impermanence and doubt which had come up from his words.

"Merle was 10 then and I was 14, and it seemed to us that some great adventure had begun. But Father looked only at the old, year-rotted barns."

There you have Father and Mother clearly characterized at the outset and representing the two opposing strains in the family. Of the three daughters, Merle alone has inherited something of the patient earth-wisdom of the mother, seeming older than her years and perhaps a trifle stolid in her uncomplaining acceptance of the brutal facts of life. Kerrin, the oldest, is her father's daughter, lacking the dogged sense of duty that drives him, endlessly complaining, to a hopeless task. Her morbid self-regard is so enormously developed that there is no room in her cosmos for anything but that.

Marget, who tells the tale, is apparently a combination, with much of the father's morbidity and realistic sense of things as they are, modified by some maternal gift of seeing beyond the surface of appearance where beauty and wonder lurk. One feels that there is a touch of genius in Marget, but that her essentially fine and discerning spirit has been so warped by her experiences that she may never be able to see the large, impersonal truth about the world; that this side of death she can hardly hope to escape the conviction that life is somehow a trap, not only for herself, but for all men.

Such a story as this one is cannot be sketched; but, granting the premises, as one must, it is none the less a dramatic tale of pity and terror convincingly told. "Our lives went on," says Marget, "without much event, and the things that happened rise up in the mind out of all proportion because of the sameness that lay around them." This is true; and it is one proof of the author's extraordinary skill that she induces in the mind of the reader the mood in which such events may be accepted with the full force of their impact on the family life. The incident of the birthday dinner and the family row, essentially ridiculous in itself, is felt with something of the force of a Greek tragedy—the "feel" of doom preparing.

Into this atmosphere of despair and growing dread comes the hired man, Grant, a stalwart, wholesome fellow; and for Marget, he is like a glimpse of an unattainable heaven to the damned. She loves him secretly and without hope, while Merle, whom he seems to favor, goes her stolid way unmoved. The economic situation, the curse of man, renders of little value what is left by drouth, the curse of God, and all the while Kerrin, hopelessly eccentric from childhood, is drifting rapidly into madness.

There is a milk strike, but nothing comes of it. A devastating fire is heaped on for full measure. Kerrin, insane, commits suicide. Grant goes away The mother dies, patient to the last And now Marget can see her father on the verge of doddering old age.

"Love and the old faith are gone," says Marget in conclusion. "Faith gone with Mother. Grant gone. But there is the need and the desire left, and out of these hills they may come again. I cannot believe this is the end. Nor can I believe that death is more than the blindness of those living. And if this is only the consolation of a heart in its necessity, or that easy faith born of despair, it does not matter since it gives us courage somehow to face the mornings. Which is as much as the heart can ask at times."

Perhaps, after all, Marget may escape, this side of death, the trap that she conceives her life and that of all men to be; that is to say, perhaps she may escape the darkness of her own shadow. For surely not all of the tragedy of this tale, true as it certainly is under the special circumstances assumed, not all is objective in origin. Without discredit to the book, it may be said with truth that a different and no less brilliant consciousness could have produced a less morbid and equally convincing story of a farming family's struggle against debt, drouth and economic injustice all in the same year and on a neighboring farm.

"I do not see, in our lives," Marget remarks, toward the end of the book, "any great ebb and flow or rhythm of earth. There is nothing majestic in our living. The earth turns in great movements, but we jerk about on its surface like gnats, our days absorbed and overwhelmed by a mass of little things—that confusion which is our living and which prevents us from being really alive."

Nevertheless, the fundamental truth about man's normal relation to the earth is to be found in the earlier novel to which the author, through Marget, evidently refers. It is the truth that has been all but forgotten temporarily, and will be learned again. The onus of the story, then, as a work of art and a criticism of life, bears upon the present abnormality of society and upon the exceptional character of the family chosen as protagonist—and not upon human destiny.

Aside from the author's dramatic power, she is distinguished by a remarkable gift for swift, illuminating sentences and phrases that penetrate well below surfaces and are pure poetry.

THIS one is all about a moving picture company operating in that region of Africa where Tarzan of the Apes ("trademark registered") still flourishes. THE MUTINY OF MADAME YES. By Dale Collins. (Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

THERE seems to be no very good reason why those who occasionally enjoy a cleverly rowdy book, that makes whoopee from start to finish, should not have what they want. It will not hurt them any more, if at all, than could their own habitual thoughts; and they may well be made saner and stronger by the Rabelaisian laughter evoked.

Here is such a book, and undeniably it is funny. Madame Yes, who is so named not without reason, is introduced into a ship's crew by the captain, and everything happens on a voyage to the Orient. Dale Collins has a story to tell, and an extraordinary gift for telling a story.

Frankly, the present writer couldn't get through the whole yarn, being, perhaps, too greatly interested in matters of a different nature. Nevertheless, he lays no claim to having kept a sober face during the tasting process.

Challenge to Profit System Explained by Dr. Stocking

order. The council was seeking greater economic security for the individual, the security which can be attained, only if greedy seeking of profits is supplanted by a spirit which seeks the welfare of all involved in industry, as well as the consuming public.

"As to private ownership, the resolutions propose to modify or eliminate it 'wherever it interferes with the social good.' That leaves room for private ownership. But what public-minded person would hesitate to say that ownership should be subject to public welfare? To say anything else would mean that the right to exploit the community is paramount to the interest of the community.

"The council did not seek to go on record in favor of any political or economic system. The emphasis was on the spirit and the end, rather than the means.

"Such an economic order as is to be will be the result of trial and search. I am one who believes that the economic order of the future will be a gradual evolution. I believe with Mr. George Soule, in his 'Coming American Revolution,' that we are in a period of change which is so great as to be little less than revolutionary.

"The resolutions were passed with full recognition of the fact that the churches of our country have great economic interests at stake. Implicit in them is the expression of the desire that the church should be the first to suffer any loss to which endowments in general would be subject.

Social Welfare.

"Behind the resolutions was also the conviction that there must be a recognition of social welfare, in order that Christian men who take the principles of Jesus seriously may find greater freedom and happiness in business life. The Council had in mind the unhappy situation of management and ownership, as well as that of the operatives. There should be changes in their interest, as well as in the interest of the lowest paid laborers.

"I can think of no system in which sordidness and greed may not have great play. A system may give greater economic security, but give much less of the freedom which true democracy and true living demand. If we attack the abuses with sufficient vigor and persistence, we shall thereby be changing the system. What we want is justice, not any particular system."

The united Congregational and Christian churches have a membership of 1,040,000 in the United States. The Christian churches, which federated with the Congregational body a few years ago, are not those of the denomination officially named the Disciples of Christ, and locally called Christian. The Christian body which united with the Congregationalists had its chief strength in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and had no congregation in St. Louis at the time of merger.

Methodist Attitude.

The Congregational - Christian body is not the only one which has made pronouncement on social problems. The much larger Methodist Episcopal Church, popularly known as Northern Methodist, has made several ventures into the same field. The M. E. General Conference in 1932 declared that "the present industrial order is unchristian, unethical and anti-social, because it is largely based on the profit motive, which is a direct appeal to selfishness; and selfishness is never morally right, never Christian, and eventually never benefits anybody."

The Wisconsin Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, meeting at Appleton the first week of September, received from its Social Service Commission a report which declared:

"No Christian can deny the sharp cleavage between the Jesus way of life and the present social-economic organization of society. The philosophy underlying the present experiments in social change still moves in the grooves of the profit system. The attempted reforms, while forward-looking in some respects, seek only modification of detail, and do not abolish the basic profit structure. The capitalistic system with its class cleavage, its planlessness, its drive toward, private monopoly, its imperialism, its denial of real collective bargaining, its inherent warfare and its foundation in the profit motive, is 'unchristian, unethical and anti-social.' Social reconstruction based on Christian principles must reach as far as the social ownership and the democratic management of the principal means of production and distribution."

TVA Idea Approved.

The report went on to approve some of the New Deal objectives, particularly the Tennessee Valley Government-owned power enterprise, and to declare a planned economy to be "both essential and possible." It approved "the social regimentation which is now taking place," but declared it did not go far enough. It indorsed the co-operative movement and urged support of the program for public-ownership of utilities and natural resources. It approved the principle of the strike as a means of giving labor its rights, but deprecated violence. It indorsed peaceful picketing, and approved the National Labor Board's action in declaring that the majority of workers in any industry have the right to bargain for all the workers.

Opposition to the Social Service Commission's proposals arose at the Wisconsin Conference meeting, and a leading layman, Frank J. Schneller of Neenah, said the report was the work of a "known Communist sympathizer," who he said was Harry F. Ward, national secretary of Methodist Social Service. This was denied by Ward's office in New York, and by the president of the Wisconsin Conference's Social Service Commission, Herbert C. Snyder of Stevens Point. The state commission prepared its own report, Snyder said.

The Wisconsin conference adopted the report in condensed form, after the opposition had brought about two modifications. The reference to the New Deal was made less specific, and the section referring to labor conditions and indorsing strikes was changed to an extent which, Snyder said, rendered it meaningless. As adopted, the labor section stated that strikes would be unnecessary in a Christian world.

When the triennial general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church meets in Atlantic City next week, it is likely that the question of economic pronouncements will come up. The Bishops of the church, in their pastoral letter to the 1931 convention, said that "acquisitive society" was bewildered by a crisis which seemed to have been precipitated by "the competitive, profit-seeking principles on which it has been hitherto assumed that general prosperity is based." They said the profit-seeking motive must give way to one of service, and that "until business is converted and is conducted as in the sight of God, who is the Father of all men, no change in technique will be of permanent value."

The Presbyterian General Assembly, at Cleveland last May, adopted resolutions which stated that new motives besides those of money-making and self-interest must be developed in business, and that an attempt must be made to secure "rational planning in our economic life." The right of collective bargaining for both employes and employers was affirmed. The resolutions contained a cautionary statement that "men must exist before they can live, and any system which would lower the economic status of the whole community would be disastrous in the end to our higher moral aims."

TEXT OF RESOLUTIONS THAT HAVE CAUSED EXTENSIVE DISCUSSION

THE National Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, at its meeting at Oberlin, O., in June, adopted these resolutions:

It depends for its existence upon exploitation of one group by another, creates industrial and civic strife and international war, precipitates periods of unemployment, perpetuates insecurity and all its attendant miseries, and progressively curtails the cultural and educational opportunities of our people, thus destroying human values, moral and spiritual.

These flagrant social evils exist side by side with potential natural abundance, which the present economy is unable to utilize and distribute, however much good it may have done in the past, and however honest and idealistic individuals dependent upon the system may be.

We set ourselves to work toward:

The abolition of the system responsible for these destructive elements in our common life, by eliminating the system's habits, the legal forms which sustain it and the moral ideals which justify it.

The inauguration of a genuinely co-operative social economy democratically planned to adjust production to consumption requirements, to modify or eliminate private ownership of the means of production or distribution wherever such ownership interferes with the social good.

We encourage the study in our local churches of these and related economic problems for their social and moral implication.

Mexico's Progress in Its Own "New Deal"

hectares or about 27,000,000 acres of land of all kinds, and the number of men receiving the land—heads of families—was about 900,000. As the average Mexican family number five, this meant about 4,500,000 people affected at that time.

Land Is the Farmer's as Long as He Uses It.

Although the present figures indicate that the land program is only about 50 per cent realized, since 1,000,000 peons are still in need of land, a set-up has already been provided for the working out of a traditionally Mexican way-of-life on the soil and for a scientific treatment of agricultural problems.

Under the ejido system the relationship of the peasant to the land reverts to old Aztec law. The worker does not own the land. The State owns it. But he has possession of it for life and—it is anticipated—can pass it on to his children or next of kin so long as he keeps it productive. If he fails to work his share of the ejido it is taken away from him and reallotted.

The Agrarian Commission representing the Federal Government passes on all village claims for ejidos, and the village agrarian authorities, acting under the sanction of the Governor of the State, determines what share of the ejido shall be allotted to each individual or head of a family. Average lots run from two to nine hectares, depending on the nature of the land, its natural fruitfulness and the needs of each ejidatario. None exceeds the value of 1000 pesos.

Chief among the difficulties encountered during the first years of land distribution were the inability of the peasants to work their lands through lack of facilities and their unexpected paralysis of will in the face of the minor problem of marketing their crops. This had always been the function of the boss. The solution of both difficulties was sought through the establishment of a system of Federal farm credits.

Financing the Peon With Government Funds.

The Agricultural Bank advanced sufficient funds for the purchase of farming tools and to sustain the ejidatario until his crops could be sold. As an instrument for collecting this loan and for selling the produce from the ejidos, the bank organized a series of co-operative societies in the villages. As it finally worked out, the ejidatario would garner his crop, take from it enough produce to supply his own needs for the off-season, and turn the remainder over to the co-operative. This surplus was stored and sold by the bank whenever the price seemed favorable. From the amount thus realized, the bank deducted the amount of each loan and turned the remainder back to the farmer.

The Agricultural Bank also performs a social service in that its agents are now carrying on an intensive campaign of education in the effort to make the ejidatarios farm their lands as efficiently as possible. It is through the co-operative and to some extent through the rural school that the central government will attempt to persuade the farmer that corn is not always the most economical crop to plant.

All of the ejidos have not yet been organized into co-operatives. The State of Yucatan has the smallest number, due to local political conditions. But since the bank controls credit and can withhold it from the ejidos if they refuse to organize co-operatives, the ejidatario has a strong incentive to come in, aside from the fact that the co-operative offers him the possibility of more money for his crops.

Other difficulties were raised by the fact that an early attempt to work each ejido as one communal property did not satisfy the individual ejidatario and gave him rise to considerable petty grafting on the part of petty local officials, and by the tendency of minor politicos to play politics with the situation. These were expected. In a country where self-seeking and venality had been one of the major professions for 300 years it was not likely that all trace could be stamped out in one decade. The bitter opposition of the haciendados was also expected.

Ironical Joke on Some Land Owners.

In fact this opposition has not been as formidable as the Revolutionary leaders expected. Many of the former land owners have been practically ruined. Others have been scarcely touched, but they await the future with considerable anxiety.

Most of those whose land had been expropriated refused, at first, to accept the bonds offered in payment. They considered the valuation put on the land much too small. The answer to that was obvious, though slightly ironical. The price offered was 10 per cent higher than the valuation for tax purposes.

"But your bonds are no good," cried the land owners. "No sinking fund has been created for their retirement; no taxes have been levied to pay the interest."

"True," replied the Government. "But they constitute a charge against the State and we will retire them when the condition of the national treasury permits."

The American land owners attempted to put themselves in a different category. They were referred to that section of Article 27 which provided:

"Only Mexicans by birth or naturalization and Mexican companies have the right to acquire ownership in lands. . . . The nation may grant the same right to foreigners provided they agree before the Department of Foreign Affairs to be considered Mexicans in respect to such property, and accordingly not to invoke the protection of their governments in respect to the same under penalty, in case of breach, of forfeiture to the nation of property so acquired."

In other words, those Americans who had not agreed to be treated as Mexicans had no standing at all as property owners, while those who had so agreed were compelled, by their own actions, to accept the normal operations of the agrarian legislation.

How Americans Have Fared in New Deal.

The Americans contended that their rights as American citizens transcended any agreements they might or might not make; that such rights could not be sworn away.

Most of their claims are still in dispute—and they involve about $70,000,000 worth of land. For a while the Americans sought to have these claims made a subject of consideration by the General and Special Claims Commissions which were set up at the time the United States recognized the Obregon Government. The Mexican Government stubbornly resisted this plea, but any danger of trouble from that source was removed when a protocol was signed between the two governments this year by which the land claims were relegated to the sphere of diplomatic discussing.

Such is the land situation to date. When Luis Leon predicted that 80 per cent of the agrarian project would be completed by the end of the Calles regime, he was a bit optimistic. But with 5,000,000 of the 10 or 11 million tillers of the soil now making their own living on their own ejidos, the Government and the Revolutionary Party believe that the major obstacles are behind them.

The land program, to most thoughtful and liberal Mexicans, was a vindication of basic rights and fundamental needs in a predominantly agricultural society. Equally imperative, they thought, was an adequate educational system. And like the land program, the building up of the schools through the Mexican hinterland has followed a peculiarly Mexican course.

Providing the Right Kind of Education.

During the Obregon regime Dr. Manuel Gamio, a young anthropologist, made an exhaustive survey in the valley of Teotihuacan which included a study of all the contemporary folk ways in relationship to their history and environment. As a result Dr. Gamio reached definite conclusions about the ideal kind of education for rural Mexico. When Gen. Calles became President, he made Gamio Sub-Secretary of Education under Dr. J. M. Puig Causarano. President Calles subsequently removed him to promote harmony in the department, but he left a valuable heritage to his country in the shape of an idea which, though modified somewhat by his successor, still retains much of its original shape and color. It was expressed in two words—"Integral education." This phrase comprehended a type of training which would embrace every activity of rural life and in many cases would subordinate the three "R's" to the more immediate need for better hygiene, better diet and a better general understanding of the functions of the body.

The rural school—or "Casa de Pueblo" as it is sometimes called—is both an agency for mental training and a social center. Among the questions submitted by the Post-Dispatch to the Ministry of Education were the following:

"How much of the work done at the rural schools is vocational and how much generally educational? What is the general theory behind the system of rural education?"

The answers supplied a fairly complete view of the function that the Educational Department hopes the school to perform.

Avoiding Traditional Modes in Instruction.

"The rural school," it said, "is the center of multiple activities. In conformity with the concept which the Department of Education holds of it and which has been communicated to all schoolmasters who collaborate with the department, the rural school will not limit itself to the transmission of knowledge to children along traditional lines. This would be a negligible and a poor piece of work. The school is not only to instruct the pupil by giving him ideas more or less useful or more or less practical; it must prepare him to win for himself in his adult years a life as a farmer which will be superior to the one he has lived. For this reason it is recommended to the schoolmaster that the school activities be derived from environmental conditions in each district and that practical exercises be determined upon which have a direct relationship to the local agriculture and industry and the occupations of the inhabitants. Additions to the school are not built in accordance with caprice, but in response to concrete social needs in order that they may contribute to the improvement of the processes of cultivation and production.

"Aside from this fruitful mission it has another great value. The rural school has been instituted to be a powerful agent of social service and to have as its field of action the same community. Its program in this direction is vast: the health of the inhabitants, the wholesomeness of the home and the town, the strengthening of the race through recreational and hygienic practices, the campaign against vice and alcoholism, the dignifying of women and the family in general, the adequate employment of leisure, the cultivation of the artistic faculties, the improvement of the technics of production, manufacture and fabrication, the promotion of material advancement, the formation of co-operatives for the purpose of demonstrating the value of collective effort and—in a word—all which tends to elevate the moral and material standards of living communities.

"Through this program, which as it is better understood will have a more effective realization, the rural school will help to transform our backward but susceptible racial groups, so that they may share in the higher forms of culture with the more advanced groups which are taking part in the progress of our country. And if the rural school is not a panacea for social injustice it will be at least one of the factors contributing to its elimination.

"For these reasons the rural school is beloved by all the country people and by outside peoples who know of it."

Rural education throughout the regime of Porfirio was practically non-existent. In fact no school of the type described above—no true "casa de pueblo"—was founded until 1923. There are now 7662 such institutions and, the number grows every year and the Six Year Plan, drawn up by General Calles which President-elect Cardenas hopes to execute in full during his administration, calls for the construction of additional schools to the amount of 12,000 by the year 1940. Only then will the system be adequate to the ambitious plan of child and adult education which is contemplated. As matters stand now some 435,000 children attend the schools during the day and 110,000 adults at night, the elders often studying from the same books as their children.

It is too early, say Government officials, to estimate the value of these schools in terms of concrete effects. But some evidence of what they have meant to the people may be found in the intense loyalty which they have evoked from the communities where they are already established and from the eagerness with which they are sought where they have not yet been built. Nor is this a matter of merely wanting something for nothing. The central government actually provides a very small sum for the pay of the teachers—some two or three pesos a day—and for maintenance. The rest has to be supplied by the village including the site, the building materials and the labor.

In some cases the schools have not yet begun to carry out the full intention of the rural educational program. In villages where the communal water supply is drawn from an algae-covered pool the school master 's still preoccupied exclusively with academic subjects. The officials of the Education Department contend however that the schools at Actopan and Tetotihuacan—which are splendid examples of diversified activities as well as of hygienic organization—are more nearly the rule than the exceptions.

The figures on illiteracy have no direct connection with the picture presented by the rural schools. Moreover they are still conceded to be appallingly high. But the graph moves downward, it is pointed out and the decrease is greatest among the younger generations. In 1910 the percentage of illiteracy was estimated at 69.73, in 1921 it was 66.17 and in 1930, 59.26. But when the 1930 figures were split up among the age groups the following results were obtained: For the ages of 10 to 14 the percentage of illiteracy was 47.65 or about 12 per cent lower than the general average; from 15 to 29 it was 58.44 and from 30 upward it was 63.67.

And additional statistical charts compiled by Dr. Ramon Beteta showed that the decrease in illiteracy had been accompanied by a decrease in the mortality rate.

Third among the achievements claimed by the Revolution is the improved status of the industrial worker, although some Mexican leaders feel that the new automobile roads started during the Calles regime and still being built as well as the irrigation projects which provide new cultivable lands, are more important both socially and economically. The labor provisions of the 1917 Constitution are cited as among the most liberal ever written into the organic law of a nation. Article 123 called for an eight-hour day, a seven-hour night, a six-day week, equality of wages for both sexes and all social and national groups, special concessions for women, double pay for overtime, employer's liability for accidents, recognition of the workman's right to strike, penalties for the employer who discharged a workman because of labor affiliations, limitations on child labor and a Board of Conciliation for the settlement of disputes.

Position of Labor and Growth of Unions.

Thus encouraged the labor unions organized successfully for the first time in Mexican history and grew strong. In fact the chief complaint against the labor laws is that they have worked too well and that the unions have frequently hamstrung production by their excessive demands.

In any case the laborer is now "more secure," works under more sanitary and safer conditions and has pushed up his average earnings from about 50 centavos a day to about one and a half pesos.

Another achievement cited comes from the Treasury Department. It has maintained a balanced budget in a period when other nations have found themselves sinking deeper and deeper into debt with the end not yet in sight. This, it is declared, is not merely a fiscal triumph but the reflection of a certain economic and social integrity. The standard of life for the great mass of the people is low but at least the nation has passed through a great world economic crisis without violent disruption of its characteristic ways of life. Unemployment figures since November, 1933, are not available. At that time the number of unemployed was given as 234,953, or less than 2 per cent of the population. Government officials believe that there has been a steady decrease since then and that the land and irrigation projects will soon absorb all idle workers.

Finally—say the Protagonists of the "revolution that has just begun"—this revolution has evolved a definite economic system and a body of ideas which may conceivably grow stronger than any man or set of men. To many Mexicans this is its real triumph.

"To understand its significance," they say, "one must realize that people of Mexico have been almost continuously betrayed and despoiled by men with no thought in their heads but their own aggrandizement. Office grabbing with its concomitant graft and waste and vain display has been the country's chief profession since the coming of the Spaniard. In such an atmosphere social thinking was merely a personal eccentricity. The few genuine patriots such as Hidalgo, Morelos and Juarez who exercised a momentary effectiveness were negligible forces in the face of a continuously predatory ruling class.

"Now by a series of fortunate circumstances a few men who are both principled and strong have managed to make the beginnings of a state founded on a clear set of principles and expressive of the true genius of its people. Now we see a genuine bulwark being raised against the self-seeking politics who are not all dead, or converted by any means. With that in mind we can comfort ourselves when we realize that peonage is not really abolished because men are still working for 25 and 50 centavos a day. For we have a system in process now—and it has the power to save us."

DR. CADMAN TO SPEAK AT Y. M. C. A. CELEBRATION

Noted Minister to Talk at Program Marking Organization's 90th Anniversary.

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman of Brooklyn, N. Y., noted lecturer and minister, will be the principal speaker at the celebration of the ninetieth anniversary of the founding of the Y. M. C. A. movement to be held Oct. 16 at the Municipal Auditorium Opera House. His subject will be "Youth in the Next Decade."

As part of the Oct. 16 celebration, a dinner meeting at 6:30 p. m. of 1600 campaign workers will be held in four assembly halls of the auditorium.

The first Y. M. C. A. was organized by Sir George Williams in London in 1844.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 30, 1934.

Little Theater Plans Season Of Repertory

WITH more than 200 new aspirants trying out during the past week for parts in the Little Theater's coming repertory season and 50 of the company's veterans ready for work again, F. Cowles Strickland, director, appears to have ample material to carry out his ambitious program for the winter.

Departing from its policy in the past, the Little Theater this winter will present five plays in repertory. The first two are "The Late Christopher Bean" and "Yellow Jack," both by Sidney Howard. The premiere of the first play is tentatively scheduled for Monday, Nov. 19, and the two productions will each run three nights a week for a month.

The second month of repertory will begin in January. "Tom Jones," a dramatization of the Henry Fielding classic by Robert Wallsten, winner of the Little Theater drama prize last year, and Shakespeare's "Richard II" will be presented. The fifth play on the list for Little Theater subscribers will be announced later. Efforts are being made to secure something from the list of current Broadway productions.

THE aim of the repertory plan, according to Strickland, will be to enable actors "to keep their hands in and develop their art to the point of professionalism."

"We are striving to make the St. Louis Little Theater one of the finest acting companies in the United States," Strickland said. "For this reason we are inaugurating the repertory plan, the original production practice of the American theater. By repertory, I mean the production of two or more plays simultaneously. We will be able to create a 'library of plays' that are constantly available to the theater-loving public."

"The Late Christopher Bean," which is an adaptation by Sidney Howard from the French of Brieux, was a vehicle for Pauline Lord, in the role of Abbie, when the play was on Broadway. It was afterward adapted for the late Marie Dressler in the motion pictures.

Golschmann on Return.

Vladimir Golschmann, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, will sail from Havre, France, on Tuesday on his way back to St. Louis after having spent the summer in the international music colony on the French Riviera. He will come from New York by automobile, to begin immediate activities for the orchestra season, which opens Nov. 2, at the Municipal Auditorium Opera House.

Two Puccini Works And Bizet's 'Carmen' In First Opera Week

GETTING under way a week from tomorrow night, the fall season of the St. Louis Grand Opera Company will offer two Puccini operas and the old Bizet favorite, "Carmen," in its opening week.

"La Rondine," the opening night's production, has never before been given in St. Louis and for its four principal characters Guy Golterman has engaged a quartet that proved popular during an eight-night run of the Puccini piece at Chicago's Ravinia Park summer opera. These are Lucrezia Bori, Mario Chamlee, Marek Windheim and Florence Macbeth. Bori and Chamlee were here in Golterman's revival season last spring, but Windheim and Miss Macbeth will be making their initial appearances in St. Louis.

Coe Glade, in the title role of "Carmen" on Oct. 10, is also new to St. Louis. Giovanni Martinelli will have the Don Jose role and Alfredo Gandolfi the Escamillo. Hizi Koyke, Japanese soprano, is being brought back for the title role in "Madame Butterfly" by Puccini on Oct. 13. In the cast also are Chamlee, Gandolfi and Ada Paggi.

Children's Guild Comedy.

The first production of the Children's Theatre Guild of St. Louis, scheduled for next Saturday afternoon at the Municipal Auditorium, will feature a two-act comedy, "Tom Piper and the Pig," by Alice C. D. Riley, children's playwright. The setting is an old English village, with the story based on familiar Mother Goose rhymes.

THE WEEK'S NEW FILMS

By Colvin McPherson

IT is a genuine pleasure to add one voice to the swelling chorus in praise of Grace Moore's picture, "One Night of Love," which opened last Tuesday evening at the Fox Theater and continues into this week.

Before reaching St. Louis, the show has made considerable history. It opened with pomp in New York, with Miss Moore, former Metropolitan Opera star, present. Occupants of the Golden Horseshoe turned out for the Radio City Music Hall premiere as they might for the Metropolitan itself. Promotion had already been attended by nine kinds of dignity so that the best people accepted a movie as good entertainment and the industry is already showing a bent toward social-climbing.

And why all the excitement? Simply that all the enjoyment values of opera and motion pictures are here in one personality and a story has been found that blends the best of this and the best of that. Anyone can be delighted by "One Night of Love."

Miss Moore herself (one of the Jellico, Tenn., Moores) is a genuine actress, lovely appearing and has a voice that requires every resource of sound apparatus to do it justice. Her program of songs are several more or less familiar arias from "Carmen," "Madame Butterfly," "La Traviata," "Martha" and "Lucia," the Italian folksong "Ciribiribin" and "One Night of Love" (Hollywood).

A singer, of course, is the main character, a girl who goes to Italy for a musical education and finds success and romance. Tullio Carminati is the teacher-lover.

The Scarlet Empress.

SETTING aside comparisons, "The Scarlet Empress," which is Josef von Sternberg's idea of how Catherine II of Russia would have looked as Marlene Dietrich, does what it sets out to do and is more than average entertainment. It lays a heavy emphasis on spectacle, plainly seeks to create an authentic medieval atmosphere and presents Dietrich's anatomical charms whenever the camera is in the same room with her. The star's acting, quite incidental, is in two phases. In the first, she is a startled little German girl, with eyes wide and her mouth open for longer than would be hospitable to the tonsils in a climate so rigorous. In the second type, she is Mae West in cold storage. Louise Dresser, as the Empress Elizabeth, takes firm hold of a rasping character that is new to her; Sam Jaffe, as the idiot Grand Duke, plays it with a mad cunning that only Harpo Marx could excel. Enjoyable also are the uncouth habits of the royal hostelry, the stirring musical sequence, the grotesque pageantry and the von Sternberg humor. "Desirable," on the same bill at the Orpheum, presents Jean Muir as the daughter of an actress who is brought up to be a lady and marry a wealthy boy when his family decides they cannot accept her because she is not eligible for the D. A. R. The poor, hurt thing just naturally turns to George Brent, who has been a kind of mutual background for herself and her mother all along.

The Crime Doctor.

OTTO KRUGER is at the Ambassador with a picture practically to himself, instead of just a bit. As a great detective retiring at the peak of his career to consider "the perfect crime," he holds an overworked idea within bounds. A variation is that the audience is taken into confidence on the crime, to see how Kruger builds up the case against an innocent man and how near he comes to being discovered. The Mills Brothers, who appear as a single stage act, bring back a clatter of applause to the theater. It has a strange sound after all these months.

The Fountain.

ANOTHER attempt to put philosophy on the screen fumbles at the Shubert this week, even with a notable cast. We are at war with Germany, but the players this time are on the sidelines in Holland, where the English wife (Ann Harding), of a German officer (Paul Lukas) has time to fall in love with an interned Englishman (Brian Aherne). Ann, who again is too good to be true, uses many metaphors about heaven, sky, prisons and US. When Paul comes back all shot to pieces, she weeps and sacrifices. But Paul sees and allows himself to die. "Friends of Mr. Sweeney," on the same bill, is a low grade of humor and fact. A short subject, "La Cucaracha" is more than 50 per cent of the program. Produced by Kenneth McGowan and presenting a new and amazing color process may well be a maker of movie history.

Death on the Diamond.

THE Cardinals will win the pennant, with Robert Young pitching. Robert will marry Madge Evans, secretary of the club, and David Landau won't lose the franchise because of the mortgage. It's all in the show at Loew's, along with thousands of St. Louis baseball fans who won't be able to recognize themselves and will be lucky to pick out any real Cardinal. Scenes were taken here last Tuberculosis day. Orsatti, the one discernible St. Louis player, is sacrificed between bases, but is dragged away before the camera can identify the body. Anybody who knows baseball from ping pong, however, will get hearty amusement out of Nat Pendleton, as catcher, and Ted Healy as umpire. The solution of the murder is just a little worse than usual for a mystery movie.

All Men Are Enemies.

HE (HUGH WILLIAMS) was from England, she (Helen Twelvetrees) was from Austria, they met in Capri and loved. War separated them, letters were intercepted, Mona Barrie told Helen a lie. . . . Dear, dear, what can the matter be that we have this sort of thing again and again? The same program, at the Missouri, offers Mae West, for her third week in the city. "Belle of the Nineties" is still the title.

Why Authors Leave Home

The easy money of Hollywood is making it hard for stage producers and publishers to get any copy to work with—Hugh Walpole, Sidney Kingsley, John Paddy Carstairs and Mordaunt Shairp among latest recruits.

By H. H. NIEMEYER.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 29.

IT MAY be that what is more or less affectionately referred to as the legit stage is in for a big boom this coming winter but if it is Hollywood will have to return some well-known playwrights to New York. The same thing goes for the book publishers who are already burning up the wires begging for copy from California. Cinemas have snared, with the easy money to be made out here, a large, actually, percentage of the writers, both playwrights and novelists. Even the national magazines are suffering and unless a new crop comes along pretty fast there will be no one left to write the prose songs of the nation except by way of the screens. And when the new crop is harvested the best ones, on their first hits, will be summoned to Flickerville—and will listen to the summons, too.

There is no exaggeration in the statement that the cinemas have gathered in the pick of the writers. Not all of them, of course, but a large percentage, nevertheless. Rachel Crothers, long an established play fashioner whose latest comedy, "Her Master's Voice" was one of the few hits turned out on the New York stage in the last season or so, is the latest arrival. Getting here at about the same moment was Dr. Mordaunt Shairp, author of another successful drama, "The Green Bay Tree." Sidney Kingsley, who wrote the great hit, "Men in White," last season's Pulitzer prize play, is in Hollywood to write for the movies as are Hugh Walpole, celebrated English author; Clements Ripley, whose stories have long run in The Saturday Evening Post; Maurine Watkins, writer of the old play "Chicago;" John Paddy Carstairs, another well-known English dramatist; John Balderson, London playwright and novelist; John Dos Passos, Tiffany Thayer, Dudley Nichols, Dashiel Hammett, Irving Cobb and Donald Ogden Stuart.

THOSE are just a few of the better known ones. The list could run on for a column or more. Dorothy Parker, famous wit who came out here several years ago and poked a lot of fun at the films, is back again and Louis Bromfield is starting Westward pretty soon. Even Alexander Woollcott, one of the foremost men in American letters, is wavering in New York—for the offers are tempting and will probably fall within the next month or so. Maj. Herbert Yardley, whose business it was, during the war, to decode German messages and who, after the struggle, wrote "The Blond Countess" and "The Black Chamber" is now a regular film author and among the others who appear lost to literature and the stage, just to mention a few, are Frank R. Adams, J. P. McEvoy, Paterson McNutt, Kenyon Nicholson, Adela Rogers St. Johns, Sam Hellman, William Slavins McNutt, John Colton, Oliver H. P. Garrett, Oscar Hammerstein II, Bartlett Cormack, Vicki Baum and Robert Benchley.

These names are not given in any order as to their importance as playwrights or authors. They are all successful and have just been picked, more or less at random, from the lists of studio contributors. It is probable that a good many of them have approached the cinema game with tongues in cheeks expecting to garner the easy money and then go back to their own trades.

But most of them won't. The cinema money IS easy, the California climate is all that they say for it out here and the life of a screen playwright is, actually, a soft one. A thousand dollars or so coming in regularly every Saturday night may not be in the traditions of the Bohemia wherein authors are supposed to dwell but this is a commercial age and certain money, certain big money, is pretty sweet.

OF course the writer of a successful play or a successful book is sure of a large sum for the movie rights to his brain child without any more exertion than simply 'phoning his literary agent to accept the offer. But his play, or his book, has to be good, or at least look good to some producer or publisher, before it sees the light of day. It's different with the films. All the author has to have is an idea for a picture play. He writes that out, in very short story form and the studio does the rest with its caged dramatists. If the original author is tremendously ambitious and wants to write the dialogue himself he can try his hand at it—and get more money. But, as a rule, he finds turning out the idea, at a big price, sufficient labor. Putting a story into movie form is a real task, and art, more or less, which has to be learned and few attempt it, or attempt it more than once.

What do they get for their very short stories and their ideas? That depends, of course, upon the reputation which the author brings to Hollywood. An original, brief synopsis will bring a well-known writer $5000. In these days a book, which may take a year to write, has to be pretty good to give the author that much money. Writers, kept on the regular payrolls of the studios to turn these ideas into screen plays, draw down from $500 to $1500 a week. There are, also hack writers on hand who supply minor dialogue for as little as $50 a week and college youths being tried out at half that sum but a thousand a week is about what the average confined writer pulls down.

Sidney Kingsley, whose "Men in White," when sold to the cinema factory brought $75,000 after its New York hit, is here with a four-weeks' contract from MGM to do a little writing—fixing up some material already on hand and a few things like that. He gets $1250 a week for the job and if he likes it—and he probably will—he will stay on and get a raise.

The record, incidentally, paid for the movie rights to a drama, is the $105,000 the same studio gave up for "Dinner at Eight." Edna Ferber and George Kauffman, the authors shared, with the stage producers in that huge sum. Miss Ferber and Kauffman are two writers who prefer to stick to the stage and literature but they both are able to write legit plays with one hand and sign the movie contracts with the other.

Walter Hampden At American Theater Oct. 22

WALTER HAMPDEN, in a repertory of Shakespearian plays and Bulwer-Lytton's "Richelieu," will be the opening attraction of the American Theater season, on Oct. 22, unless a hurry-up booking in the next two weeks puts something else into St. Louis' last legitimate house ahead of him.

Hampden, whose company is now rehearsing in New York, will give four performances here, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Wednesday matinee. The Shakespeare plays, in all probability, will be "Hamlet," "Macbeth" and "Richard III." The version of "Richelieu," which Hampden uses, and which was in his repertory here last January, is by Arthur Goodrich.

Another actor, who, it is announced, will essay Shakespeare this winter is Walter Huston, whose last season's success, "Dodsworth," was reopened after the summer and is still drawing some of the best houses on Broadway. Huston plans to undertake "Othello" after "Dodsworth" and his wife, Nan Sunderland, is set to have the role of Desdemona.

THAT "Dodsworth" is able to hold its head above many new openings on Broadway, is of course, a tribute to a sterling performer and an excellent adaptation of a novel with some substance. But it also points out the dearth of outstanding shows in the prolific total that has come to Broadway in the last six weeks.

The Shubert revue, "Life Begins at 8:40" and the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, with a Gilbert and Sullivan repertory, are the only undoubted financial successes of the new season, although "The Great Waltz," Elmer Rice's "Judgment Day," and "Saluta," a travesty on grand opera, are showing signs of making the grade.

Only the D'Oyly Carte Company brought forth critical ecstasies. The Shubert revue was praised highly, however, for its beauty of scenery and for the antics of Bert Lahr.

"THE GREAT WALTZ," a pretentious operetta based on the lives of the famous Viennese composers, the Johann Strausses, father and son, did not prove to be the sensation that it was expected to be when it opened a week ago last night at the 3800-seat Center Theater in Rockefeller Center, which was transformed from a movie to a legitimate house at an expense of $150,000 for this one show.

GUY ROBERTSON and Marion Claire, both formerly of Municipal Opera in St. Louis, have the leading roles. Staged by Max Gordon, "The Great Waltz" is presented on three revolving stages, with a chorus of 100, a ballet of 40, a cast of 42 principals, an orchestra of 52 and a stage crew of 90. It employes more than 500 persons altogether. Reviewers, admitting it was the greatest spectacle in years, were chary with commendation for its entertainment values.

"Judgment Day," in which Rice deals with Nazi Germany in an anonymous fashion, has become the subject of considerable critical controversy, which has not been confined to differences between newspaper reviewers of different papers but even brought forth conflicting opinions between columnists in the same paper in several instances.

One of the newer arrivals is "The Distaff Side," a light comedy by John Van Druten, who wrote "Young Woodley" and "There's Always Juliet." The piece is chiefly notable in bringing back to this country, after 25 years, Dame Sybil Thorndike. The writing, placing a heavy emphasis on characterization, is concerned with the choice a young girl has to make between the man she loved too well and the eligible bachelor who can supply money, position and everything she wants save romance. Dame Sybil takes the part of a widowed mother, from whose problems and their solution comes much of the play.

Arnold as Louis XIII.

New Songs in "Sweet Adeline."

Arrangements have been made with Jerome Kern, composer, to write two new song numbers for the forthcoming screen edition of his famous musical comedy, "Sweet Adeline," in which Irene Dunne will be starred. The picture is to be directed by Mervyn LeRoy.

"Call of the Wild" to Alaska.

"The Call of the Wild," screen adaptation of the Jack London novel, will be filmed largely at the actual locale of the story, in Alaska. Fredric March has been assigned to the stellar part. Gene Fowler and Leonard Praskins will do the script.

Saleswork

PERMANENT POSITIONS NEW, COMPLETE LINE

Promotions and additional new lines made openings which we will fill with intelligent, sincere, neat appearing men over 25.

Several serious-minded men able to supply character references can establish themselves in a permanent, profitable, dignified business so broad and complete that it is not affected by seasonal changes. Protected customer contact, not one-call sales, built our business. Liberal basis of compensation ranging from $150 per month up, depending on the man, his sincerity and his desire and ability to follow a definite successful program. No investment now or later.

A car and sales experience desirable, but not essential, as we prefer to give the men selected the same intensive merchandising training which has made our St. Louis organization the national leader.

SALESMEN WANTED

ATTENTION—MEN WHO ARE UNEMPLOYED!

In and around St. Louis are men that are complaining about work being very hard to find. Some of these men actually want work, others are not looking for work, or want something that is easy to do for a mere existence. To the men looking for a chance to prove their ability with possibilities of earning a good consistent living for themselves and their families we can present a splendid opportunity.

In our previous announcements, we have repeatedly made the statement that we are not interested in men who are merely concerned with the limitations of a small income. However, we will go a long way in helping men to a lucrative and permanent future if that man is big enough and willing enough to realize that he must pay the price and prove his work to us by actual and conscientious hard work.

In order to assure that no man will remain in a rut because of a stipulated income used as a harness over him, we pay our men on a profit-sharing basis, giving them a chance to receive in dollars and cents what they actually earn.

This business is both modern and mutual. No investment is required from any men qualifying. We finance everything.

Our requirements are: Good references and neat appearance. To you who are reading this ad, is your future worth two hours' interview with our factory representative? Where he can outline what we consider a real opportunity to you?

This ad gives no honest, industrious man an excuse for being out of work. We are not intreested in ad seekers or floaters. Apply in person, Monday morning, between 9 and 1, at 512 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th & Olive Sts. This is a special interview and may mean the turning point of your life regardless of your present occupation.

SPECIALTY SALESMEN.

An unusual opportunity for a few unusual specialty salesmen is offered by a leading manufacturer; the men selected must be proven producers and be capable of selling high-priced specialty units to retail merchants.

Our company is highly rated and reliable, we have merchandise of merit, liberal terms, advertise nationally and have numerous leads ready to be worked. Our district salesmanager will be in St. Louis, Coronado Hotel, Monday. Phone or write for appointments. Territory in Illinois and Missouri also available. Ask for Mr. C. C. Helm.

10 Ex-Queens To Be at Ball of Veiled Prophet

Escorts to the Maids of Honor at Queen's Supper to Wear Insignia of Rank—1300 Guests Expected.

AT least ten former Queens of Love and Beauty are planning to occupy the box especially prepared for them at the Veiled Prophet's ball Wednesday night at the Coliseum. Those who have definitely signified their intention of attending are: Mrs. Gustave Henry Boehmer Jr., formerly Miss Myrtle McGrew Lambert, who married after her abdication last October; Miss Jane Perry Francis, Mrs. O. P. J. Falk, who was Miss Marian Franciscus; Mrs. William E. Glogau, formerly Miss Mary Virginia Collins; Mrs. Lindell Gordon Jr., who was Miss Maude Miller Streett when she wore her crown; Mrs. Joseph Sanford Harris, the former Miss Ann Chittenden Ferriss; Mrs. Royal D. Kercheval, who was Miss Jane Shapleigh; Mrs. Philip Wahmann Ness, formerly Miss Anne Farrar Semple, of Maryland; Mrs. Edward C. Simmons II, formerly Miss Jean Ford, and Mrs. Charles Hunt Zeibig, formerly Miss Adaline Capen. As a special mark of attention to former queens, a custom was established last year of asking the maids of honor to bow to them as the procession passed their box.

Escorts for the maids of honor at the Queen's supper at the Jefferson Hotel following the ball, will be signally honored this year. As they arrive at the hote: they will be assigned to a special room where insignia, denoting their rank, will be given them.

In addition to these escorts, each invited by one of the maids, the Veiled Prophet's emissary has announced that there will be several dance committeemen. These committeemen were chosen by a group of last year's debutantes from a list of 500 men. After the entrance of the Queen and her special maids of honor, they will have the responsibility of entertaining the maids of honor, and will be permitted to introduce themselves to their dance partners.

About 1300 guests are expected to attend the supper. Innovations in the decorations include the prophet's emblem "V. P." in gold and silver, over the queen's table, and urns of purple and gold chrysanthemums at each side of the royal dais. The debutantes' tables will be decorated with gold candelabra.

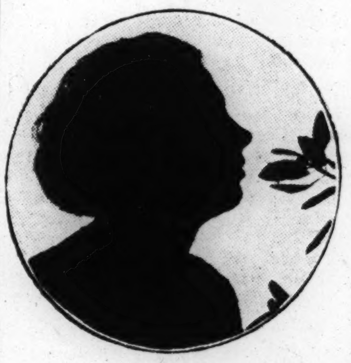
DEBUTANTE SILHOUETTES



Mary Marshall Metcalfe

NINETEEN years ago when a baby girl arrived to be a permanent guest in the home of Mr. and Mrs. David D. Metcalfe, her fifteen-months-old sister toddled to the crib and lisped, "Chichi!" That was her nearest approach at saying "sister." The baby was Mary Marshall Metcalfe, and the name given her by her sister, Jane, stuck. She is "Chichi," to her family and "Chich," to her school friends.

She is tall and slender and has laughing hazel eyes. Her light brown hair is cut in a smart short bob that is curled in a semi-wind-blown effect. She has the general appearance of an out-of-door girl, who is not afraid of the wind or the sun. At Mary Institute, where she was an outstanding member of her class, her vivacity and loyalty attracted many friends. After her graduation at Mary Institute with the class of 1933, she spent a year at Smith College.

She plays a splendid game of golf and tennis and is an expert swimmer. She likes to wear sport things but is also attractive in evening clothes, which her lovely ball gown will denote.

BARBARA HAMILTON BRODHEAD is the youngest of all the season's debutantes. She celebrated her eighteenth birthday last May, and a few weeks later was graduated from Villa Duchesne.

"Bobs," as many of her close friends call her, is making an elaborate illustrated scrap book of the season's activities, giving each debutante a special place for her picture and the newspaper clippings of her parties. The compiling of the book is interesting to Barbara, for she spends much time drawing and reading.

While she is not the athletic type, she plays golf and tennis and likes to swim. She is tall and could be described as willowy, and has blue eyes and gold blond hair cut short and curled. She is an ideal model for very feminine clothes, and prefers all shades of blue for evening. For daytime wear she likes sports things in tones of brown. For several generations in St. Louis the debutante's family has been known for its gracious hospitality, so quite naturally she is looking forward to the Veiled Prophet ball, at which she will be a maid of honor, and to all the parties planned for this season.

Barbara is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Brodhead, and a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton Farish.

Social Notes From The Capital

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.

NEXT week Washington receives a group of interesting visitors. From Oct. 6 to 11, the thirty-fourth Congress of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale will meet in the Capital, and with the delegates from many parts of the world will come a group of women who will take part in many of the events arranged for their husbands.

Capital society is looking forward to meeting one of the interesting women of Europe, Princess Martha Bibesco, well known as the author of numerous books which have been translated into English. Princess Bibesco will come to Washington with her husband, Prince Georges Bibesco, president of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale of Rumania. Princess Martha's best known book is "Izor, the Country of the Willows," a book of folklore of the Near East.

Prince Georges, an aviation enthusiast, is not to be confused with his cousin, Prince Antoine Bibesco, former Rumanian Minister in Washington, whose wife Princess Elizabeth Bibesco, daughter of the late Earl of Oxford and Asquith and the Margo Asquith, also has gathered some literary laurels of her own. Princess Elizabeth has several volumes of short stories to her credit and Prince Antoine has written several plays which have produced in this country.

The Minister of Rumania, Charles A. Davil, who arrived in this country yesterday from Europe and will come immediately to Washington, undoubtedly will provide for entertainment for the visitors.

From Turkey will come Lieutenant-Colonel Chukru Bey with Mme. Chukru Bey, and France is sending Louis Bleriot, who flew the English Channel when aviation was in its infancy. The opera season will open in St. Louis on Oct. 8. News reels have made engagements to photograph the first-night crowd and the arriving stars.

Many of the founders and season patrons will entertain guests at the first performance. Out-of-town guests will include Harold McCormick of Chicago. Maria Jeritza, soprano, who will sing the title role of Tosca, and who in private life is Baroness von Popper of Vienna, will be accompanied to St. Louis by her husband.

Entertainment Planned For Visiting Horsemen

EQUESTRIAN followers are preparing to spend two weeks in entertaining horsemen coming here for the St. Louis National Horse Show of Oct. 8 to 13 at the Arena.

In addition to the usual three and five gaited, junior, jumper and hunter stakes, the show will include heavy harness, harness pony, roadster and Shetland pony stakes. Most of the $15,300 in prize money will be given to the victors in the championship stakes.

George J. Peak, of Winchester, Ill., who has driven in Madison Square Garden in New York, Boston, Louisville, Omaha, Denver, Chicago and Los Angeles during the past few years, is due in early this week with his string of driving horses. He has Sun Cloud, roadster entrant; Cynthia, harness pony, and May Fair and Wood Sport, heavy harness horses, in his consignment.

The Heyl pony farm, in Washington, Ill., is sending Glentham Marvel and La La Success to compete in the harness pony stake and Field Adjutant and Potentilla to participate in the heavy harness stake. Mrs. A. C. Thompson of Chicago will exhibit Reo Saxon and Pride of Onway, heavy harness horses and High Explosion and Mitzi, ponies.

George Brandies of Omaha, Neb., R. C. Flannery of Kansas, Ill., and the Milky Way farm, of Pulaski, Tenn., are some of the other leading exhibitors entered in the roadster stake, and E. W. Beghtol, of Industry, Ill.; Harry Gorham, of Morris, Ill., and Eugene Kennedy, of Taylorville, Ill., also are expected to figure in the running in the Shetland pony stake.

It is believed that a new entry record has been set in the five-gaited stake in the 27 entries that have been received. Some of the top-notchers are Night Alarm, owned by Miss Amy Novich, San Antonio, Tex.; Sun Beau and Joanne Jean, owned by Glad Acres farm, Dallas, Tex.; Sunny McDare, owned by John Bostick Jr., Fort Worth, Tex.; Center Colonel, owned by Miss Mary Ballard, Dayton, O.; Cheerful Dawn, owned by B. S. D'Antoni, New Orleans, La.; Lady K., owned by Miss Mary Klein, Moberly, Mo., Seminole, owned by William Taylor, Memphis, Tenn., and Dixiana Queen, owned by Dixiana farm, Lexington, Ky. Harry J. Burkart and Mr. Kerckhoff are the only local exhibitors represented in this stake.

About the same exhibitors, with John M. Olin, of Alton, Ill., and some Eastern horse fanciers, have entered 17 horses in the three-gaited stake. Roxie Highland, owned by Spindletop stables, Beaumont, Tex., is among those entered. Miss America and Royal Irish, owned by Dixiana farms in Lexington, also are threats for the cash awards.

The junior five-gaited stake has attracted a dozen ranking young horses. Mrs. Paul E. Winter, of St. Louis, has entered Barrymore's Rhapsody, a four-year-old black gelding which promises to make an impressive showing against a field which includes King Cane, owned by Milky Way farm, Pulaski, Tenn.; Elizabeth Arden, owned by Fair Oaks farm, Chicago, and Sporting Chance, owned by Mrs. Frank Hoke of Indianapolis, Ind.

Miss Ethel Kendall Weil of Chicago is the best known of the out-of-town exhibitors in the Hunter stake. Harry Gorham of Morris, Ill., leads the visiting owners in the Jumper stake.

FATHER DEMPSEY COMMITTEE CONTINUES FUND CAMPAIGN

Chairman Says Contributions Obtained Since Sept. 12 Are Far Short of $100,000 Goal.

The committee in charge of a campaign to raise $100,000 for support of the charities of Father Timothy Dempsey, will continue its efforts this week.

Samuel W. Fordyce, chairman of the committee, which began work Sept. 12, said funds obtained fell far short of the amount needed for the year. He asked that contributions be sent to headquarters of the Father Dempsey Committee, Room 914, 1218 Olive street, or to the treasurer of the Father Dempsey Fund, 621 Locust street.

"Father Dempsey's institutions cannot be dispensed with," Fordyce said. "Indications are that there will be a greater need this winter than ever before for this type of relief work. The cost of operation will be considerably higher than last year because of increased prices."

WITH the Prince of Wales back in London and Prince George and his fiancee, Princess Marina, visiting the fashionable restaurants, London's little season is now in full swing.

Prince George and Princess Marina are finding the crowds of women embarrassing. They had hoped to do their pre-wedding shopping in peace but the chance of glimpsing the royal couple brings women of all ages trailing in their wake.

Extra police have been requisitioned to keep clear the thoroughfares surrounding Claridge's Hotel, where Marina is staying.

A newcomer to the American colony in London is the infant son of Ernald and W. A. Richardson, whose home is in Regent's Park. Mrs. Richardson was formerly Evelyn Weil, daughter of the late Dr. Richard Weil of New York. She is a niece of Jesse Strauss, United States Ambassador to France.

MOTION FOR RECEIVERSHIP IN TRUTH CENTER DISPUTE

The Rev. Emil C. Hartmann, defendant in a suit filed by the St. Louis Truth Center, Inc., asking for an injunction to prevent his continuing in possession of its church property at 4030 Lindell boulevard, filed a motion in Circuit Judge Ryan's court yesterday for the appointment of a receiver in the case.

He avers that the three trustees, consisting of himself, his brother, the Rev. Charles H. Hartmann, and sister, Miss Catherine Hartmann, are in disagreement, as a result of which the bank where the church funds are deposited will not honor checks without the signatures of all the trustees and bills are not paid. The motion states some creditors are threatening to file suits.

According to the motion, the Rev. E. C. Hartmann is receiving the collections, but he is not willing to continue handling them, preferring that a receiver take charge pending adjustment of the litigation. The injunction petition also asked that he be required to render an accounting. He contends he is rightfully in charge of the property.

F. H. Schwartz, C. E. Becker and Edwin Meyer are named as codefendants in the suit.

MISSOURI SOCIAL HYGIENE GROUP TO EXTEND PROGRAM

Family Consultation Service Included in New Projects of Association.

Plans for expanding the program of activities of the Missouri Social Hygiene Association, 2221 Locust street, for the coming year were announced yesterday by Dr. Harriet S. Cory, executive secretary. Five committees and four survey groups were appointed to direct the new projects.

The new program includes the creation of a family consultation service which will be conducted by individual workers from the various social agencies. The plan calls for direct consultation service with individuals whose problems arise from psychological or sex maladjustments. It is also planned for the association to serve as a clearing house for medical, legal, recreational and educational activities of the various agencies. Later, plans for a campaign against vice will be formulated.

In addition, a survey group has been appointed to determine available resources for the control of social diseases, and to consider the possibility of securing Federal aid in the fight on the diseases.

THERE is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleaming white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER—just naturally cleans best.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

Dentists everywhere recommend Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, because—teeth simply cannot remain dull and film coated when it is used. Dr. Lyon's cleans off all stains, and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter.

Free from all grit or pumice, Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder cannot possibly scratch, or injure the softest enamel.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean—firm, healthy gums and the least possible tooth decay. Powder leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed, and your breath so sweet and pure.

Once you use powder you will never go back to tooth paste. People by the thousands are changing daily.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is not only doubly efficient, but it costs only half as much to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

The program will include conversational lectures for adults on the various museum collections, talks on modern, medieval and oriental art, special exhibitions, studies of prints and children story hours.

Miss Mary Powell, supervisor of education at the museum, will present a series of talks during October on Tuesday mornings at 11 o'clock and Friday mornings at 10 o'clock. The program for October will be: Tuesday and Friday of this week, the annual exhibition of paintings by American artists; Oct. 9 and 12, exhibition of American artists, second part; Oct. 16 and 19, the meaning of color; Oct. 23 and 26, modern European painting, and Oct. 30, A Maker of Fountains.

Talks on Prints.

Miss Powell will also give talks on prints on Wednesday afternoons at 2:30 o'clock during October, in which are processes will be studied with illustrations from the museum's print collection. Subjects are: Wednesday, the first printed pictures; Oct. 10, dexterities of graver work; Oct. 17, processes with acid; Oct. 24, the dry point, and Oct. 31, working on stone.

Miss Jessie Chamberlain, assistant supervisor of education at the museum, will give a series of talks on prints and drawings on Thursday afternoons at 2:30 o'clock from October to March. In October she will discuss painters as print makers. Her program will be: Thursday, an introduction to prints; Oct. 11, Albrecht Duerer; Oct. 18, Rembrandt, and Oct. 25, Lucas Cranach.

Saturday afternoon gallery talks will be given by Miss Chamberlain at 3:30 o'clock for those unable to attend other series talks, and once a month she will speak on the current special exhibition. The schedule for gallery talks in October is: Saturday and Oct. 13, the exhibition of American artists, Oct. 20, introduction to an art museum, and Oct. 27, history in the art museum.

Children's Story Hour.

The children's story hour will be held each Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from October to May. Legends and stories from the history and literature of various countries, illustrated with selected museum objects, will be told each week by Miss Powell. Half-hour periods of drawing and games, directed by Jaquelin Ambler and Eliza Atwood, assistants, will precede the story hour.

Demonstrations and motion pictures of the processes of art will be held each month as part of the story hour program. The program for October is: Saturday, Indian lore; Oct. 13, Colonial Days; Oct. 20, an American hero; Oct. 27, motion pictures.

PREDICTING WEATHER by a NEW METHOD Combined With the Old

And Just Why the St. Louis Forecaster, Studying His 'Highs' and 'Lows,' Knew That a Certain Week-end Outing Would Come to Grief Before It Had Ever Begun.

The week-end of the Grandolive family as charted by an artist, and, above, the official weather map from which the experts forecast its lamentable outcome. Over Chicago and Milwaukee is shown an area of low atmospheric pressure drawing warm air from the southwest over St. Louis. Following it is a high pressure area over the Dakotas forcing cold winds down from the North to bring a 41-degree temperature drop between noon and midnight.

"LOWS" over the Yellowstone and South Dakota and a "high" over Alberta wouldn't have meant a thing to Jimmy Grandolive, headed for a week-end in the country on the first bright, warm day of spring. At least he wouldn't have believed they meant anything to him, even if Forecaster Roscoe Nunn—who had officially warned "much colder"—had told him in person just what that combination of pressure areas would do to his day in the country, to his best girl's spring clothes, to Papa Adolf Grandolive's trout fishing, to the appropriateness of the Sunday dessert Mama Grandolive had planned, which was home-made ice cream.

Jimmy probably was one of the many St. Louisans who greeted with a blank stare the recent Weather Bureau announcement that the "traditional methods" of forecasting are being supplemented with "so-called air mass analysis." That departure might seem revolutionary, if only one had the faintest grasp of the term "air mass analysis." And what, by the way, were the "traditional" methods? Only last month, says Forecaster Nunn, the basis of the new method was demonstrated in the breaking up of the record hot spell by the action of "air masses." For a perfect example of the old, he turned back to last St. Patrick's day, when a deceptive breath of spring lured thousands out of doors.

The "traditional methods" had much to do with the Grandolives' disastrous week-end — much to do with those "highs", and "lows" that enabled Forecaster Nunn to know precisely the outcome of St. Patrick's day.

These mythical St. Louisans would have done better to heed his warning—even to Jimmy's kid sister, Edythe, who thought life at the country shack too, too crude. She stayed in town to show off a filmy new evening dress and a flimsy new wrap at a St. Patrick's party, and she never had more goose-flesh on her poor, bare arms, a redder nose or a more wretched time.

Each of the Grandolives, like thousands of others, had some project that seemed ample reason to disregard the printed forecast. Papa Adolph had grown a little more restless every day since the trout season opened March 1.

Jimmy, who'd bought the two acres in the Ozarks only last year, hadn't been out for months, and was eager to set the cabin in order for the summer. Nora, the best girl, had a flock of predated sport clothes and knew she'd have a chance to wear some of them Saturday evening at the hotel a mile from the cabin. And Mama Grandolive just went along.

Friday, the day before St. Patrick's, was the first day that really seemed like spring. There was just enough wind, Adolph noted with satisfaction, to ripple the water and hide his image from the fish. Jimmy, who hoped to drive the 112 miles from St. Louis to his shack in much less than three hours in his new sport convertible, began to wonder if the summery weather wouldn't draw out more week-end traffic than he cared to see. But, when the forecast came out in the first edition of Friday's paper, he thought it would discourage many "Sunday drivers."

"Probably some rain tonight or Saturday, changing to snow," it threatened. "Much colder Saturday or Saturday night and Sunday. Lowest temperature tonight about 45." And the forecast for the state said, "Much colder." Mrs. Grandolive fretted. Jimmy and Papa scoffed. They didn't know about the "lows" and the "highs," and, if they had, wouldn't have known what they meant. They did not know that Forecaster Nunn for St. Louis—and for the state forecast, another expert at Chicago—had studied the weather map independently and arrived at the same conclusion—that a "low" and the "high" following it were headed this way, that the "low," or "storm center" should bring "falling weather" and rising temperature, that the "high" would bring clearing skies and colder, and that a severe change was indicated by the closeness with which the "high" followed the "low" and the sharpness of the contrast in barometric pressure.

But, when Jimmy went to work on St. Patrick's morning, it was warmer than at mid-afternoon Friday. It was a little cloudy, and that looked good to the trout fisherman. A little flurry of rain fell, but by 11 o'clock the mercury was up to a spring-like 71. When Jimmy loaded Papa, Mama, Nora and 17 miscellaneous bags and bundles into the machine a few minutes after his holiday began at noon, it was so warm that he devoted 10 minutes to tossing sweaters and coats back in the house and putting the top down.

Mama Grandolive protested, and pointed to the afternoon paper: "Probably some rain this afternoon and light snow tonight; Sunday fair. Cold wave; lowest temperature tonight about 18, continued cold Sunday." Beneath it the state forecast repeated, "Cold wave tonight; 10 to 20 above in north portion, 20 to 25 in south portion."

Already that morning Forecaster Nunn and his associate in the district office up in Chicago, separately studying the weather map made up from observations taken simultaneously at 7 a. m. by 200 observers from Key West to Calgary, had found their worst expectations confirmed. The two "lows" had formed a merger, and, as a single wave of low atmospheric pressure, had moved along a normal eastward path to a center between Chicago and Milwaukee. In the counter-clockwise spiral along which winds converge toward a low pressure center, the augmented "low" was drawing warm air from the southwest over St. Louis.

Rain was falling over Northwest Missouri. The high pressure center had descended from Alberta to South Dakota. The winds which radiate in a clockwise spiral away from a high pressure center were carrying cold polar currents southward over the Great Plains.

In Kansas, the rain had already changed to snow, and the 10-degree isotherm—or temperature line—marking the advance of the high pressure wave, reached as far south and east as Central Nebraska.

But the Grandolives, six hours after Forecaster Nunn observed all this, were speeding out Highway No. 66 in summery weather. They hardly noticed when the wind began to freshen. At Gray's Summit Mama Grandolive wanted to stop in the Shaw's Garden Arboretum and see the new orchids. When they stopped in the lee of the orchid house at 1:15, the air seemed almost close, and they peeled off what light wraps they had worn. When they came out, 50 minutes later, it was 16 degrees cooler. Mama wanted to turn back—"and have a nice picnic supper out of the baskets, in comfort, on our own table"—but the others hooted at the idea.

With all the available wraps out and on, the top up, Nora driving, Adolph beside her, Mama and Jimmy shivering outside in the rumble, they proceeded. It was nearly 4 o'clock when they reached Cuba, Missouri. And another 12 degrees cooler.

They were more than 80 miles from home, too far to turn back. Mama wedged her bulk into the front seat between Papa and Nora, and Jimmy shivered alone in a blast that reddened his ears and nipped at his nose until, for the first time taking his masculine glance from the road, he doubled up on the rumble seat, with knees under his chin and a blanket pulled up to his eyes.

When they got to the cabin, at 5 o'clock, the mercury stood eight degrees above freezing. Before a fire had begun to soften the chill interior, a drizzle had begun. It turned to sleet within an hour. By midnight the temperature had fallen 41 degrees, to 30 above zero; it had been 71 at 1 p. m. It kept right on falling; sleet changed to snow. Adolph's trout fishing, Jimmy's house-cleaning, Mama's home-made ice cream, Nora's one-girl fashion show—all were forgotten in the grim and not entirely successful business of keeping warm.

By daylight Sunday the skies were clearing, and the Grandolives waited only for the sun to bring a little warmth for the trip home. Instead it grew steadily colder. Saturday, despite the 41-degree drop, had averaged 6 degrees warmer than normal, but Sunday was subnormal by 20 degrees. In mid-afternoon the Grandolives' cabriolet slithered down the slippery hill-side with Jimmy at the wheel and all the others somehow jammed in beside him. Home again, out of the wreckage of the week-end, they had the consolation of being in touch with steam heat and eiderdowns, for the mercury fell to 20 that night, to 18 by morning, and remained below freezing until Monday noon.

Mama Grandolive probably said, "I told you so." For all I know, Papa Adolph was so disgusted with his first outing of the trout season that he gave up fishing and went back to work, Jimmy sold his Ozark shack and traded his convertible for a parcheesi set, Nora may never have spoken to him again—but certainly that week-end, for this fictitious family and for many thousands of real-life Jimmies and Noras and Adolphs in St. Louis, was spoiled by the unseen combination of "lows" swooping down from the Yellowstone and South Dakota, and a "high" following close on their heels from Alberta.

Rarely, says Forecaster Nunn, are the signs so clean-cut as they were on that St. Patrick's day, but from such successions of "highs" and "lows" we get all our weather, and from such signs, as recorded on the daily weather map, he arrives at his forecasts.

This, the "traditional" method, began with the telegraph. Now the radio contributes, for even ships at sea transmit their observations. Each forecaster designates the key stations from which he requires data for gauging weather "futures" in his own territory.

At 7 a. m., for the forecast which appears, for instance, in that day's Post-Dispatch, Forecaster Nunn and his staff rapidly, carefully, note the readings of their instruments on top of the Railway Exchange Building. Atmospheric pressure, temperature, for the moment, and highest and lowest of 24 hours, humidity, degree of cloudiness, wind speed and direction and other data are put on the wire for the district office at Chicago and every other forecast station where "futures" are affected by conditions here.

In the same moment, similar data are coming into the St Louis office in a greatly compressed telegraph code and are being sketched, as they come, in a weather map. Arrows show wind direction. Circles designating each station are half black for partly cloudy, black for cloudy; enclose an R for rain or an S for snow. Precipitation of a hundredth of an inch or more in 24 hours is further indicated by shading the area it covered.

A dotted temperature line, called an isotherm, is drawn through points of equal temperature for every variation of 10 degrees.

A pressure line, called an isobar, is drawn through points of equal barometric pressure. Another isobar is drawn for every one-tenth inch variation of the barometer, and so, on the map, one isobar will encircle an area of highest pressure and another the area of lowest pressure, while the intermediate lines between them irregularly follow the curves of one or the other of the extremes.

As the data arrive, one employe of the bureau marks them on a chalk plate preparatory to running off, on the office stereotype and printing outfit, the daily map which goes to the newspapers and to hundreds of other subscribers who desire more data than the condensed forecast.

Even before all the observations are received, Forecaster Nunn is studying them, noting the changes from yesterday's map, to arrive at the probable changes here in the next 36 hours. Sometimes the whole task—only one of many for these stations—is completed in little more than two hours after the continent-wide observations have begun.

It was Benjamin Franklin who demonstrated that weather travels—that, in effect, Southwestern Iowa's one day may be St. Louis' the next. Like the succession of waves at sea, a succession of high and low pressure areas marches down across the St. Louis area from west to east and toward the equator. Often, as in the "high" that froze out the Grandolives' week-end last March, they are sighted first over Alberta. Sometimes they swing off above the Great Lakes and pass out to sea over the St. Lawrence. The forecaster has to judge, from his experience and from their courses as shown on successive days, whether they are headed near enough to St. Louis to affect the weather here.

Plainly, the forecaster's job is one that cannot be reduced to formula. Pressure areas which seem aimed at St. Louis may not only swing off toward odd points of the compass, but they may all at once stand still, fade out, or develop other behavior peculiar and unpredictable. The fact is—it should shame the Grandolives' lack of faith—that the Weather Bureau, by actual record, rings the bull's-eye for a score of 80 to 85 out of a possible 100. But, as Forecaster Nunn says, interpretation of the facts shown on a weather map is largely a matter of experience, skill, familiarity with the quirks and oddities of the local climate, so that "all that enters into the making of a forecast cannot be exactly described, any more than a physician can exactly describe all that goes into a diagnosis and his estimate of the course of the illness."

In general, as might be expected, winds are drawn into a low pressure area. They do not enter it head-on, but in an irregular spiral, opposite to the movement of the hands of a clock. It follows that the winds southeast of a "low" come generally from the south, and, as the area passes eastward, change to the southwest, west or northwest.

When a "high" from the northwest succeeds the "low" the winds may be expected to shift on around to the north. That is because winds are forced out from a center of high pressure, and follow a spiral in the direction of the hands of a clock.

When the Grandolives planned their week-end last St. Patrick's day, it was the warm air drawn in by the "low" that encouraged them, and, as they scurried glumly home again, it was the advent of the "high" that had made their holiday a freezeout. The severity of that cold wave was plain in advance to Forecaster Nunn because the "high" was right on the heels of the "low," for the violence of weather phenomena varies with the abruptness of the clash between contrasting pressure "waves."

No "air mass analysis" was required in forecasting that cold wave, and it is not likely to enter the routine of local forecasts for some time. The special committee of the Science Advisory Board, which recommended to the Weather Bureau that "air mass analysis unquestionably makes short-range forecasts more reliable," also spoke for caution in working it in with the "traditional" method. It suggested that one district station begin the study of the new method and the training of personnel under the "most competent man" available, and that five years be devoted to extending it from the five

The Creators of the 'Society Circus' Move Their Act to the Divorce Court

Though William and Cobina Wright's $10,000 Entertainments Went Out As the Depression Came In, They Continue to Hold the Spotlight With Their Domestic Tribulations.

Cobina Wright.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

THE old saying that "habit is stronger than love" is receiving some support these days in the exhibition being provided by socially prominent Bill and Cobina Wright, whose somersaults on the marital trapeze are upholding a reputation they established as society's foremost entertainers.

The society circuses, lavish entertainments which the Wrights originated and which made them famous New York hosts, are being replaced now by an exhibition in the courts as original in its way as the bizarre and colorful entertainments they used to stage together in their swanky Sutton place duplex.

The crash and consequent depression consumed the Wright fortune. There was no more money with which to stage their celebrated specialty which used to cost them between ten and fifteen thousand dollars for a single evening's amusement. Creditors even dispossessed them of the elaborate apartment which was the scene of their extravagant exhibitions. But the habit of providing entertainment for their friends was strongly ingrained, and though the partners in the enterprise parted, they have contrived to keep faith with the showman's motto that the show must go on.

Bill and Cobina separated. Cobina went to live in a hotel with their daughter and Bill went to live in Greenwich Village. Cobina and her lawyer say they called at Bill's apartment one evening and found him there with someone else's daughter. She filed suit for divorce.

Bill Wright proved something of a contortionist in successfully evading service and skipping off to New Mexico, and while his wife's suit was still pending, himself obtained a divorce from her there on the ground of incompatibility.

With his New Mexico divorce decree under his arm and the other woman in his mind, Bill returned East and located at Bar Harbor, Maine. And there, a few weeks ago, he married the young artist's model who had been named as co-respondent in Cobina's suit. But a New Mexico divorce has practically no standing in a New York court, where officially Bill Wright is still Cobina Wright's husband. So Cobina is going right ahead with her suit, and is thus divorcing a husband who has already divorced her elsewhere and taken unto himself a second wife. It isn't quite as elegant an entertainment as they used to put on together, but their friends are amused, and grateful. Even in depression Bill and Cobina contrive to entertain.

William May Wright was just a wealthy and socially prominent New York broker, with comparatively little entertainment value, when he married Cobina in 1920. She, on the other hand, had experience as a professional entertainer behind her. Member of a wealthy Boston family and said to have descended from Governor Bradford, she spent her youth traveling and studying music abroad, and at the age of 18 appeared in opera in Germany. During the war she was one of the first women to sing to the soldiers in the trenches, often riding up to the front lines on a motorcycle, for which she received high praises from French, British and American war lords. There was a short-lived marriage with Owen Johnson, the novelist, the failure of which Cobina herself later generously attributed to "my own immaturity."

Then, after the war, she met and married to Bill Wright. The marriage was to all appearances a great success, though a profound observer might have detected seeds of future discord in the frequency and conspicuousness with which Cobina graced the public prints. But that was probably regarded as necessary in view of the fact that she continued her career as a singer. She gave recitals in New York and elsewhere, and apparently so successfully combined the functions of wife, mother, careerist and hostess that she was regularly consulted by newspaper interviewers for authoritative statements on each of these aspects of her busy life.

Mrs. Wright as she appeared at a Beaux Arts ball.

Some of her statements today have an ironic sound, particularly one of her much-publicized remarks on love and marriage. "Divorce," she declared, "should be granted to anyone who wants it, but the desire to separate can usually be avoided by tolerance. If my husband fell in love with another woman I should give him a divorce without his even having to ask for it and wish her all the luck in the world."

There is no evidence that Cobina has sent felicitations to the wife her husband took unto himself a few weeks ago, but no doubt she was quite sincere when she made the above statement.

It was in those lush days preceding 1929 that Cobina inaugurated her famous "society circus" as a means of introducing novelty into the social routine. The invitations, which were eagerly sought after, described the function as "Bill and Cobina Wright's Combined Circus — The World's Greatest," though everyone knew that the inspired brain that conceived the entertainment was Cobina's. These annual shindigs of Cobina's usually threw the upper crust of New York society into flakes of excitement. At these affairs the upper crust of society was mixed with the cream of Bohemia—Cobina's friends in the musical and theatrical world—and the resultant friction produced an admiring glow on every society editor's countenance.

The Wright circus of November, 1927, seems to have been a particularly swell one, and a description of the affair has been preserved for posterity by Cholly Knickerbocker, one of New York's most blase reporters of the doings of society.

"It was the most novel ball of the season," he declared next day. "Not since the days of Harry Lehr has New York society received such unusual invitations as those sent out by Mr. and Mrs. William May Wright for their ball. Flamboyantly printed on colored posters, the invitation had inclosed long programs in which the fashionable guests were listed as trapeze artists, wild men, equally wild women, bareback riders, clowns, etc. Harry Lehr would have wept for joy at the amazingly clever manner in which Mr. and Mrs. Wright arranged the season's most unusual dance."

For these occasions the Wright music room was draped with crude canvas and ringed by bleacher seats splashed with sawdust, and the guests appeared in various costumes of a kind usually worn by members of a circus troupe. The guest list included names famous in the realms of society and the arts—Princess Obolensky, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Prince Christopher of Greece, the W. H. Harrimans, George Gershwin, Alma Gluck, Beatrice Lillie, Elinor Glyn, Walter Damrosch and many others.

In the summer months the entertaining activities of the Wrights were transferred from their town house to their luxurious country home at Sands Point, Long Island, where they held open house and threw colorful parties. The crash of '29 tore a pretty big hole in the Wright money bags, and Cobina, in an effort to capitalize her much-publicized talent for providing dazzling entertainment, decided to recoup some of the losses by going into the entertainment business professionally. In one of the most fashionable sections of New York she opened the Sutton Club, a pre-repeal supper and dancing place, with a list of patrons and patronesses apparently torn from a page of the social register. That was in December, 1931. But the depression was just getting on a full head of steam at that time and the club soon closed its doors, the names of the patrons and patronesses evidently not being negotiable on a printed announcement.

In the meantime the brokerage firm of which Bill Wright was president had also decided to give up the ghost, and some of Bill's partners and clients followed with a suit against him to the tune of $950,000, contending that his handling of the company's funds hadn't been such that some le dress wasn't possible. Bill se suit, and at the same time, to employ an unworthy metaphor, app tly settled his own hash. He had to give up his yacht, polo ponies, country house that had cost $300,000 and almost everything else in his possession of value. The duplex apartment was stripped of its valuables, and they were dispossessed. The apartment had cost $125,000 on the co-operative plan, but the co-operation seemed to cease when the money ran out.

WHEN the scene of the lovely circuses was being dismantled to satisfy the relentless creditors, Cobina and her husband were interviewed regarding their future plans. Cobina announced that she was going to make a business of directing entertainments. Perhaps she would also go on the radio and sing. But at that particular moment what she most wanted to do was to deny certain rumors that had begun to circulate.

"But these stories that my husband and I are going to be divorced are all false, aren't they, Bill?" she said, appealing to Bill for corroboration.

Bill countered by asking: "W y must they have stories like that? n years ago they said I was going to vorce Cobina. I'm still married to r and I'll be married to her 10 y s from now."

But apparently Bill had by this t e become so accustomed to giving up s possessions that he didn't know w n to stop, and though none of his c itors asked it of him, the next t g the public knew was that he had given up his wife and daughter. bina visited him at his Greenwich lage apartment, and in no time Wrights were putting on an ent y new form of entertainment.

"The State of New York," says bina on page 1 of a large metro tain daily, "does not recognize a Mexico divorce. If he returns to York I am going to have him s on charges of bigamy and non port."

And thus, though the much-a tised "Bill and Cobina Wright's C bined Circus—The World's Grea has folded up, another exhib is promised if Bill returns to the ne of his former triumphs as a host

TRAGEDY of the American-Chinese ROMANCE that Ended Only in DEATH

Despite Parental Objections the Student and the Librarian Married—and Then He Became a Flyer So He Might Defend His Ancestral Land.

By ARTHUR STRAWN

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

EAST met West in the case of Betty Lillian Wolff and Edmund Wong On Wah and the alchemy of love dissolved the difference of race into a happy marriage between the American girl and her Chinese husband.

For 10 years Betty and Edmund Wong lived in great happiness, until yearning to serve his ancestral homeland fired Wong with the desire to become an aviator to help China in her never-ceasing struggle against Japan. Even this ambition Betty shared with him, herself struggling and working when adversity set in so that there should be no lack of money to interrupt his training.

Then the great day arrived when Edmund Wong was to fly over New York harbor and give welcome to General Chang Fa-Hwai, China's famed "Iron General," arriving on a ship from Europe on his way back to China. And after the aerial welcome, Wong was to offer his services to the General and go to China, accompanied by his American wife. It was their joint ambition that he should win glory in the service of his homeland.

But even before Wong's plane had sighted the incoming vessel, it crashed into another plane in midair, and Wong fell 2000 feet to his death on the roof of a Brooklyn tenement.

All Chinatown turned out for the funeral. General Chang not only provided the coffin, a very intimate service among the Chinese, accorded only to dear friends, but also delivered a eulogy at the dead youth's grave, commending him for his patriotism and regretting that the funeral was not being held in China, so that he might bury Wong with military honors. All those who honored Wong had a good word to say for his white wife, and her exemplary devotion. And though Betty Wong rejoiced to see her dead husband honored, it was a bitter pleasure for her, for it marked the tragic conclusion to a rare, romantic adventure.

"But maybe we were too happy together," she said. "Maybe that's why it happened." Betty Wong wonders about that now, as she sits disconsolately mourning her loss.

Their romance began about 11 years ago in Newark, New Jersey, which is the home of a large Chinese colony. Edmund Wong was 17 years old then, Betty Wolff a few months younger. She was an attractive girl with auburn hair and blue eyes, and lived with her widowed mother and younger sister. She was employed in a stationery and book store, and had charge of the store's circulating library.

One day a young, well dressed Chinese approached her desk and, in excellent English, made arrangements to become a subscriber to the library. The young man was Edmund Wong On Wah, who simplified his name by calling himself Edmund Wong. He apparently read English as easily as he spoke it, for he soon established himself as the library's most frequent visitor, though, as he later admitted, his interest in books was to no little extent stimulated by the incidental opportunity to chat with the librarian from whom he rented the volumes.

Betty Wolff had the superior attitude toward Chinese characteristic of most Americans whose contact with the race is limited to occasional meetings with the laundryman. But here, to her surprise, was something distinctly different. Edmund Wong not only comported himself with a dignity and gentlemanliness which most of her boy friends couldn't approach, but he was also very stimulating company. With his Oriental background and sharp mind he was able to discuss books and make comments on American life which caused her for the first time to examine the life about her with some critical understanding.

IT GOT so that she began to look forward to his visits to the shop. Finally he asked her if he might meet her after hours, and she consented. Occasionally they would go to a picture show, but the most interesting evenings to her were those spent among his Chinese friends. Wong was no ordinary fellow. For one thing, he had been born in this country, in San Francisco, where his father had been a successful merchant. He had had an American education and was thoroughly familiar with American ways and customs.

The friendship of the young couple soon grew into love, and they decided to get married. Wong felt that he should ask his father's permission, and Betty felt the same toward her mother. Betty's mother had met Wong, and her attitude had grown on closer acquaintance to one of affection and admiration. Still, she did not favor marriage between them. The difference of race loomed as a great insurmountable barrier. But Betty's younger sister felt differently about the whole affair, and her enthusiastic indorsement of Wong finally won the mother's half-hearted consent. She didn't approve of the marriage; she didn't think it was wise. But she would raise no objection if Betty was determined on it.

On the other hand, Wong's father was much less pliable. Without any qualification, he objected to the marriage on principle. And in an effort to make it impossible, he determined to dispose of his business, a move he had long contemplated, and return with his family to his native land. He sold his importing business in San Francisco and ordered his son to join him immediately. If Wong failed to comply, his income would immediately be cut off and the family would return to China without him.

Edmund Wong.

The Chinese have great respect for their parents. But Wong had been born and raised in America, and American youths have a way of deciding for themselves in the choosing of their mates. Wong wrote a very polite letter to his father, regretting the hard choice that had been put before him, but stating that he felt he could do no less than marry the American girl who had done him the honor of consenting to be his wife. Wong's parents and sister returned to China, and soon after, in April, 1924, Betty Wolff became Mrs. Betty Wong, and she and her husband moved to New York, where he planned to go into business, for his income had ended and he was now entirely on his own.

Wong's closest friend was another American-born Chinese, Fong Shek. There are limited business opportunities for Chinese in this country, and the two young men chose one of the most obvious. They borrowed money from their compatriots and opened a restaurant. Betty worked with them as cashier in the early days, but the business soon began to flourish and her husband, with his thoroughly American ideas, decided that she shouldn't work, but should live the comparatively leisurely life of most American wives whose husbands are successful.

The marriage was decidedly happy. There were many acquaintances, American as well as Chinese, who felt that the difference in race was bound to be an eventual difficulty and kept waiting for signs of the marital wreck. But they never developed. Incidentally, Betty and her husband were now working toward a common objective. They still hoped to win the approval of Wong's family.

THEY planned therefore to save money and to go some day in the future to China. Neither had ever been there. They were also certain that Wong's family would relent, once it was seen how congenial they were.

Then came the stock market collapse and the depression that have played so prominent a part in so many human destinies. Their savings were wiped out, but patiently they persisted, and by frugal living and many economies were again beginning to make some headway. And then—the Japanese invasion of China, the seizure of Manchuria and the famous battle of Shanghai, with its display of hopeless heroism that drew the admiration of the world. Like many other Chinese, Wong and his friend, Fong Shek, were fired by a desire to serve the homeland and depressed by their comparative helplessness.

Wong got an idea, a plan whereby he could combine the visit to his parents with Betty with an opportunity to render service to China. He and Fong Shek would study aviation here at one of the good American flying schools and then join the Chinese air force, still a weak but important branch of the Chinese military body. Betty was sympathetic, and the two friends began to study flying.

In fact, Betty was so sympathetic that in order to help make funds available for the schooling and the eventual purchase of a plane, she returned to work at the restaurant. She served as cashier, waited on tables and took entire charge of the restaurant on the mornings and afternoons that her husband and his friend were at the flying field.

Last February the two young Chinese had saved enough money to go down to Baltimore and purchase a little plane of their own, which they flew back to Long Island. They worked hard at their flying and, according to Major W. C. Brooks, the former army flyer who was their instructor, they developed into good aviators. During 120 hours of solo flying, neither even slightly damaged a ship.

The news came that General Chang, the "Iron General," who is one of China's great modern military heroes, was coming to New York on the way to China. Wong and his friend decided to rent another plane, to meet the ship as it rode into port and to greet the General with aerial maneuvers. General Chang was on his way to accept an important military mission at home, and through the Chinese Consul in New York it was made known to the two young men that the General would happily enlist them, the need for flyers in China being particularly acute. It was their plan afterwards to make a transcontinental flight to San Francisco, in the hope of getting Chinese in America to contribute to Chinese aviation. Then they would sail from San Francisco for Shanghai.

As General Chang's ship drew into the harbor, the two aviators took off in separate planes from Flushing Airport. Wong was in the little ship they owned jointly. Fong Shek was in a somewhat larger plane rented for the occasion. As they were flying over Brooklyn, still climbing for altitude, Wong's plane was beneath Fong Shek's.

"AS I WAS flying along above him," Fong Shek later related, "my friend suddenly zoomed up in front of me. He was seated beneath the monoplane wing of his ship and couldn't see directly over his head. My propeller hit the tail of his plane and chopped it off."

Wong's ship, entirely out of control, fell like a spent rocket to a rooftop below, and Wong was instantly killed. Fong Shek, his propeller and motor useless, managed to glide to a comparatively safe landing on a field two miles away. He suffered a broken arm, but the news of his friend's death proved a severe shock that kept him confined to the hospital.

To Wong's American wife the accident meant not only the death of a beloved husband, but the tragic end of a romantic adventure.

THE BOOTHS WIN BACK THEIR COMMAND

LONDON.

EVANGELINE BOOTH, conqueror of illness, family quarrels, intramural "politics" and, as she herself might put it, "the souls of men," has become commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army.

Her accession, early this month, had more than one aspect of interest, even of moment. It is the ultimate crown of victory in her struggle against forces which, little more than 10 years ago, threatened to curb her growing power in America by sending her to "the sticks."

The election was the first to be held under the reforms, led by herself, designed to take from the all-powerful "General" of the Army the power to choose his own successor and thus, she charged, perpetuate an autocratic dynasty. But by her own election, held in the democratic fashion which she forced upon the Booth dynasty, a Booth again heads the great militant religious body, after a lapse of only five years.

And, as head of a world-wide philanthropy with millions of dollars worth of property and millions of members—from Eskimo to Zulu, Swede to Polynesian—a woman has been selected to hold one of the world's most responsible executive jobs.

Oddly enough, though her own career and capacities were talking points for the feminists of some decades, Evangeline Booth was never a militant "suffragette" in the days when suffragettes were militant, especially in England. More oddly than that, she once explained that she felt "woman's strongest influence is in the home." But she believed women everywhere, as in the Salvation Army, could do as much as men, and as well. Many men in her own organization credited her with doing more and better.

Daughter of gaunt, bearded old William Booth, founder and first General of the Army, and sister of his successor, Bramwell Booth of the white mane and glowing eyes, she went early into a schooling that was not of cloistered hall and spelling book, but of slum and tambourine. And she profited by it so well that before she was full grown her father deemed her his "cleverest daughter" and, as one writer put it, began to give her "big assignments and small pay."

And she "whipped" every assignment. Against the rowdy, egg-throwing derision of the down-and-outers she won the title of "the little White Angel" in the slums, and against the dignified horror of entrenched respectability she won, in Parliament, explicit rights for the Salvation Army on the streets. She faced riots in the provinces. She took charge of the International Training Garrison. She went to Canada as Territorial Commander, handled that assignment so well that, 30 years ago, she was sent down to the States as commander there, and handled that so well that by 1920 she was in difficulties with her brother.

THAT phenomenal success could thus paradoxically threaten demotion for "Commander Eva" suggests some feeling on the part of her brother, who had succeeded General William Booth as commander-in-chief. For its genesis, and for the support which eventually made her victorious over it, one must go back to the fact that, more than any other member of that remarkable family, Evangeline had the ability to "conquer the souls" of not only the down and out, but also the "up and in."

Her capacity to win over the great and powerful had been felt when she first went to the United States. As a writer in Leslie's monthly magazine commented, "The great enthusiasm aroused by the arrival of Eva Booth is significant of the remarkable change in public opinion towards the organization.

"What the founder of the Salvation Army was unable to do, what his staff of strong and devoted men failed utterly to accomplish, this girl, then a frail, slender child, scarcely out of the school-room, triumphantly achieved. She won for the scoop bonnets and the grotesque caps, and the divine altruism they masquerade, the freedom of the highways of the world."

General William Booth

General Bramwell Booth.

In the United States she found a struggling organization, hemmed in by lack of funds, by American distaste for importations of any sort, by distrust of anything smacking of militarism. In a few years the sheer compulsion of her personality in contacts or in spoken or written word, her shrewd leadership, her capacity for winning the faith of wealthy philanthropists, had transformed the Army in this country.

The World War, blasting many enterprises, was opportunity for her. Her lads and lassies went right into the midst of things "over there," careless of themselves as the doughboys themselves, tended the wounded, sewed on buttons, "sent us over the top with oranges and met us with hot drinks when we got back." Soldiers wrote home about them, and, returning, did not forget.

In that service the Army won a feeling of personal gratitude from millions of Americans who formerly regarded it, if at all, with a grin. Newspapers which had ignored it gave editorial support. Returned army leaders organized a campaign which paid off a debt of millions. Its $600,000 annual budget expanded to $7,000,000. The Army in the United States became the greatest Salvation Army branch in the world, the men and millions under command of Commander Eva multiplied, and, it seemed, General Bramwell Booth began to feel it was time to check her growing power.

One day in 1920 a three-line announcement appeared in Officer, official Army bulletin. Evangeline Booth was to be retired for a rest and reassignment to India. Newspapers learned of the order and published that the distinguished Commander was, in American parlance, to be "sent to the sticks."

"I am a soldier, and I take my orders," said Commander Eva. She said no more, made no protest. But others were not so reticent. General Bramwell Booth was swamped under cablegrams of displeasure from such weighty donors as Elbert H. Gary, Henry W. Taft, Gorden Battle.

TWO years later, the specter of "retirement" reared its head again. Not until the papers were full of it was Commander Eva formally notified in a curt cablegram.

"I shall obey the order," she said. "I have cabled my brother for further information." She said her brother had said, in 1920, "You cannot expect to remain at the head of the organization all the rest of your life."

But Commander Eva had not lost power in those two years. This time cablegrams were signed by Myron T. Herrick, Herbert Hoover, Otto Kahn, Thomas Marshall, Adolph Ochs, W. G. McAdoo, Finley Shepard, Samuel Untermyer and others. Her power had grown beyond any such attempts to "check" it, and she remained Commander.

In the brief lull, ill-health wracked her frail body. Her first hard years in the slums, at an age when few girls would be ready for high school, had ended in what was described as a brain congestion that impaired her physical strength. Thereafter she suffered repeated attacks of illness—nasal abscess, appendicitis, breakdowns that interrupted her extraordinary activity for months at a time—yet she went on undaunted.

General Bramwell Booth visited her in New York in 1926, and there were reports of a sharp clash in policy. Commander Eva was becoming known as chief sponsor of reforms toward democratization of the Army management. She sensed some reason in the objections of American philanthropists to the absolute control, by one man in London, of millions of dollars of Salvation Army property in the United States, and in every other quarter of the globe.

Most keenly, she felt the growing criticism of the method by which a General could choose a successor, utterly without check or guidance. General Bramwell Booth had been named in a sealed envelope left by his father. General Bramwell's leadership was not without rumors of nepotism. In time he likewise left such an envelope, but it was never opened.

Whatever the outcome of that conference in 1926, it was not published. But three years later, the dissension came to a head. Commander Eva sailed for England. General Bramwell was aged and ill. A High Council had been called to urge his retirement, to end the dynastic prerogative of naming his successor, to elect a new general, and to provide advisers—in short, to limit a rule that had been as absolute as any monarchy in modern times.

REPEATEDLY Commander Eva had urged her brother to inaugurate such reforms of his own volition. She pointed to the criticism that must follow appointment of another Booth. She cited the emoluments of the position, with the comment, "To conserve and to hold on to this as a great vested interest is the most natural thing. A body of 50 Commissioners would be less liable. . . ." She urged, "I am hungry for your interest, too"—indeed, even in their sharpest differences, this remarkable brother and sister seemed to cling to their personal affection.

But he would not heed her pleas. And on January 10, 1929, the High Council asked him to retire. His poor health was emphasized. He was to retain his title and all its honors. And the ultimate force behind that demand, it was said in the United States, was one which Commander Eva had brought to support of the Army—the wealth and philanthropic judgment of American millionaires, notably the Rockefellers, who felt that $33,000,000 in this country should not be under unlimited control of a single man in London.

Commissioners wept as they voted in the High Council. They sang, "O God, our help in ages past." And they voted against the aged General.

He attempted to fight the council in court, but it repeated the vote against him. It elected his chief of staff, Edward J. Higgins, as his successor. Within a month General Higgins announced one commission would study constitutional changes to limit "one man power", and another would investigate succession of leadership. And in 1930 the transition was completed with the decision of an international meeting of commissioners, at London, that no general should appoint or nominate his successor, although he might give advice to the council, which would conduct the election for the office.

Last May General Higgins announced that he would retire because of ill health, and so the first election under the democratic system sponsored by Commander Eva was one which made her General Evangeline, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army throughout the world.

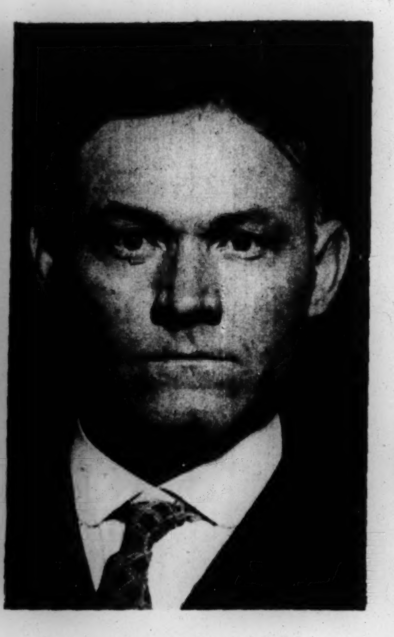
Special Agent Edward B. Shanahan.



Police Sergeant Leonard Ising.

Martin Durkin.

When Martin Durkin Murdered the Federal Agent He Fired the Shot That Led Inevitably to His Capture.

ONE of a SERIES of DETECTIVE EXPLOITS by INVESTIGATORS of the UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT of JUSTICE.

This is the second of a series, dealing with the exploits of the Division of Investigation of the United States Department of Justice, written especially for the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine from official records and information obtained from J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the division.

By REX COLLIER

WHEN smiling, dapper Martin Durkin slipped an automatic from its hiding place in his sporty automobile and sent a fatal bullet into the body of Special Agent Ed Shanahan of the Department of Justice, he became the first criminal to fling a death challenge at the United States Bureau of Investigation.

It was an unenviable distinction, as Durkin—handsome young desperado and ladies' man—was to learn, one morning at Webster Groves, when the bureau ran him down and a bear-like St. Louis police sergeant, Leonard Ising, clamped a jiu-jitsu grip on his arm that held him powerless to reach his "arsenal."

Agent Shanahan was slain when he trapped Durkin in a commercial garage in Chicago on the night of October 11, 1925.

The Federal officer had with him a warrant for Durkin's arrest on a charge of violating the national motor vehicle theft act. Durkin already had a long record of shootings in connection with his racket, which was stealing expensive automobiles. He was known to have a sensitive trigger finger, having wounded three policemen in Chicago and one in California.

Shanahan had been warned that Durkin would shoot to kill when cornered. He was prepared for a shooting affray when he secreted himself in the shadows of the garage, in company with several city policemen.

The information was that Durkin would store a stolen car in the garage some time that evening. The tip-off came from a reliable source. Shanahan and the policemen lay in wait for hours. The noise of each approaching car stiffened their spines and tightened their grips on their guns.

After a long, tense vigil, the policemen decided to leave the garage and telephone to headquarters for a relief detail. Shanahan remained in his hiding place in the garage. The policemen scarcely were out of sight before a big car careened around a corner and came to a stop inside the garage with a screeching of brakes and tires. At the driver's wheel was a dark-haired, good-looking youth whom Shanahan recognized instantly as Durkin.

Durkin had risen to his feet in the car and was about to step down. Although taken completely by surprise, he was working his brain over-time. He made a gesture as though to comply with the agent's order.

Dropping his right hand nonchalantly in an ostensible move to unlatch the door, the young outlaw swept a pistol from the door's pocket and in a split second had opened fire point-blank at the agent. Shanahan crumpled in his tracks, his gun still clenched in his hand.

Durkin had the motor of his car turning over in an instant and was starting to back out in a burst of speed when the dying officer managed to raise himself on an elbow and fire several shots at his fleeing assailant. The bullets from the agent's gun flattened themselves against a steel vest protecting Durkin's body. The car roared away. Shanahan died a few minutes later.

From that moment until Durkin's spectacular capture near St. Louis, January 20, 1926, the undercover resources of Federal, state and local law enforcement agencies were brought into play in a legal plot to trap the fugitive.

The Government men knew that Durkin had two outstanding weaknesses—fast cars and pretty women. A plan of action was adopted, predicated on the theory that sooner or later the suave Chicago "lone wolf" would succumb to either or both of these failings. He did—to both of them.

IT was known that Marty had a woman friend living on Englewood avenue, in Chicago. She was vivacious, attractive Betty Werner, residing with an uncle, Lloyd Austin. Investigators questioned Betty regarding Durkin's whereabouts, but the girl insisted she had not heard from him since the shooting of Shanahan.

The uncle later sought out the officers and declared Betty had lied.

"Marty is coming to see her this evening," he said. "He wants to get some clothing and bags. He is leaving as soon as he can for California. For God's sake don't let anyone know I have told you this!"

Further quizzing convinced the Federal investigators that Austin was telling the truth, but Chicago authorities were dubious. Finally the latter agreed to set a trap that night at Austin's home.

At their own suggestion, the Chicago police were given full charge and only one Federal agent was taken along. The police detail included a Lieutenant, a detective sergeant and one or two policemen armed with shotguns and revolvers. The Police Department's star marksman, Sergeant H. I. Gray, was assigned the leading role.

Gray stationed himself at the rear door, out of sight of persons approaching it. He was carrying a sawed-off shotgun. The others took posts at various windows and near the front door. Everyone was inside the house, to avoid detection.

The suspense was not prolonged. The sound of a motor car was heard in the dark alley at the rear. There was an interval of tense waiting before a shadowy form was seen entering the back yard from the alley.

Sergeant Gray, by repute as quick on the trigger as Durkin himself, slowly raised his gun, his finger nervously pressing the trigger. The man below halted a moment at the back steps, then started to ascend softly.

The best information available today is that Gray impulsively opened fire as Durkin reached the top step, instead of waiting for him to enter the house, in accordance with prearranged plans. It is thought Gray may have feared the girl would shout a warning to her admirer.

Durkin's steel jacket must have saved him. His pistol returned the fire almost instantaneously, and Sergeant Gray dropped under a deadly stream of lead.

Pandemonium broke loose, with the Werner girl seeking frenziedly to restrain the police and the latter firing hurriedly in the direction of the fleeing gunman.

In the confusion the uncle was caught in a cross-fire and fell to the floor, mortally wounded. He had been killed in a trap of his own making.

Although bullets showered all about him, Durkin made good his escape, carrying with him but one slight flesh wound.

BY this time the police of the nation had become thoroughly aroused concerning Durkin. Here was a youthful killer with an incredible faculty for eluding the most carefully contrived traps and with a daring that had become the open admiration of gangland.

Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Department of Investigation announced that Durkin must be taken at all costs. Orders went out to every field office and to every agent to drop everything and get Durkin. The fugitive's pictures and fingerprints were given the widest possible circulation.

A plan of strategy was laid down. It revolved about the hypothesis that the hunted man eventually would surrender to the lure of high-powered automobiles. Durkin had a penchant for Pierce Arrows, Cadillacs and Packards. He seldom deigned to tumble out of this class.

Durkin always stole new cars. The second-hand product did not interest him. His plan of action was simple but effective. Walking into a showroom in a business-like manner, he would announce his intention of purchasing a certain expensive model on display. It must be delivered to him without fail the following morning, completely serviced with gasoline and oil—ready to drive away. He must have the car in a hurry, he would explain, as he had been called to another city. He would pay spot cash on delivery.

That night, while the sales manager reflected upon his unexpected deal with the prepossessing stranger, things were happening in the darkness of the showroom. And the next morning he would find his place burglarized and the car in question gone. For Durkin the rest was merely routine.

He would change the motor, serial and assembly numbers, procure license plates under a fictitious name, drive the car into another state and sell it for several thousand dollars. It was a good, safe, clean racket, Marty mused.

The Department of Justice enlisted the aid of every Pierce Arrow, Cadillac and Packard agency in the country. They were asked to be on the lookout for any customer answering Durkin's description and using Durkin's "line" of conversation.

On January 10, 1926, the Los Angeles office of the bureau received from a San Diego Cadillac agency a report of the theft on the night before of a new Cadillac phaeton, with brown top, green body and red wooden wheels. The car had been stolen from the showroom after a young man had made arrangements to purchase it, saying he planned a trip East.

A dragnet was thrown across all principal highways leading from California to Eastern cities. Shotgun squads patrolled all transcontinental roads, day and night, for nearly a week—without result.

On Sunday, January 17, a Sheriff was strolling down the main street of the small Texas town of Pecos, in the western part of the State, when he noticed a large green Cadillac phaeton, parked in front of a store. He sauntered over to examine the shining car and was startled to see a .44-caliber Winchester rifle on the floor of the automobile.

Just then a young man in sports attire and a pretty girl emerged from the store and walked toward the car. The Sheriff accosted them, inquiring about the rifle. The young man smiled.

"I'm Fred Conley, deputy sheriff of Los Angeles County," the stranger said. "Meet Mrs. Conley. We're on a hunting trip. You're just the man I want to talk to. Can you direct us to the best hunting section?"

The Sheriff shook hands, but he was not entirely satisfied. He had not heard of Durkin, but he had heard of car thieves in general. Apologetically he asked Conley for his registration papers. The visitor said he had left them at the hotel, but he would gladly drive over to the room and get them.

After nearly an hour of fruitless waiting at his office for the stranger's return, the Sheriff went over to the hotel and found that "Deputy Sheriff Conley" and his woman companion had checked out hurriedly "some time ago." Somewhat sheepishly the Sheriff went back to his office and wrote a brief report of the incident to the El Paso office of the Division of Investigation. He gave the tag numbers of the car and ended the letter with the remark: "You might have something on this bird."

THE El Paso office sprang into action. The Sheriff's description of "Conley" tallied with that of Durkin. The tag numbers were different from those listed for Durkin's car — but other details fitted. The hunt promptly was intensified in the rugged country known as the "Big Bend of the Rio Grande."

Two days later the officers and vigilantes came upon the green Cadillac, disabled and deserted in a clump of mesquite, about 50 miles west of Fort Stockton, Texas. The right rear wheel of the car was torn off at the hub and the tire was in ribbons. Cursory examination revealed that motor and serial numbers had been changed, but scientific tests showed the original numbers to be those of the car stolen in San Diego.

At a nearby ranch the officers were told that a young man and woman had hired a horse and wagon to take them to Girvin, a village on the railroad, several miles away. This took place only the night before arrival of the officers. The couple had said they wanted to catch a train for Alpine, about 150 miles to the south.

The ticket agent at Alpine recalled that a young couple had boarded a Southern Pacific train for San Antonio shortly after midnight Monday. Federal agents located the conductor of the train at his home in El Paso and he quickly identified a photograph of Durkin as that of the man who had boarded his train at Alpine with a woman. From baggage agents it was ascertained that the couple had secured transportation out of San Antonio on the Texas Special of the M., K. & T. The train was due in St.

MOVIE DRESSOGRAPHS

REGINALD DENNY

A different movie star will make his or her appearance in this space every week. Accompanying will be three costumes this particular player wore in various roles played on the screen. Cut out the player and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress the star in the proper outfits, being careful to assemble each costume correctly.

This week's star is Reginald Denny. The three sets of costumes shown here were worn by him in these roles in the following movies:

David Dornford in "One More River"; Harry Griffiths in "Of Human Bondage," and Bookington Wells in "We're Rich Again."

Next week: Miriam Hopkins.

THE CHARACTERS

HILDA HOARDER—A mother squirrel.
HENRY AND HARRY HOARDER—Hilda's children.
WILLIE WISDOM—An owl who teaches school.
BOB BARKER—A hunting hound.

There is nothing Bob Barker loves more than hunting. He thinks it is the greatest sport there is, and as soon as the leaves turn gold and crimson in Hickory Hollow the little folks living there can expect a visit from this mighty hunter. Today, just as Henry and Harry are getting ready to go to school, they hear Bob's big voice, so they look out the window and see Bob go baying by as

THE PLAY BEGINS

HILDA HOARDER—That nasty old hound is out hunting again. I've a good mind to keep you at home today.

HENRY HOARDER—Oh, boy, no school. I hope that hound goes hunting every day.

HILDA HOARDER—You ought to be ashamed of yourself, talking that way. Do you want to grow up and not know anything? (Now we look in at the school. There isn't a soul there except the teacher.)

WILLIE WISDOM—Hm-m-m-m. It's time for school to start, but none of the children are here. I'll just fly over to Mrs. Hoarder's and see what's keeping her two youngsters. (In a little while he is sitting in the window of the Hoarder home.)

HILDA HOARDER—Oh,, good morning, Mr. Wisdom. I kept the children home because that old hound is out hunting.

WILLIE WISDOM—Hm-m-m. So I guessed. But we can't let his hunting interfere with school.

HILDA HOARDER—But it wouldn't be safe to let them out of the house today.

WILLIE WISDOM—Humph! Just put them on my back. I'll take them safely to school. (Hilda puts the two children on Willie's back and Willie flies away.)

WILLIE WISDOM—Just listen to that foolish hound howl. If he were smart he'd shut up and then no one would know he was around. I can assure you he was no pupil of mine.

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

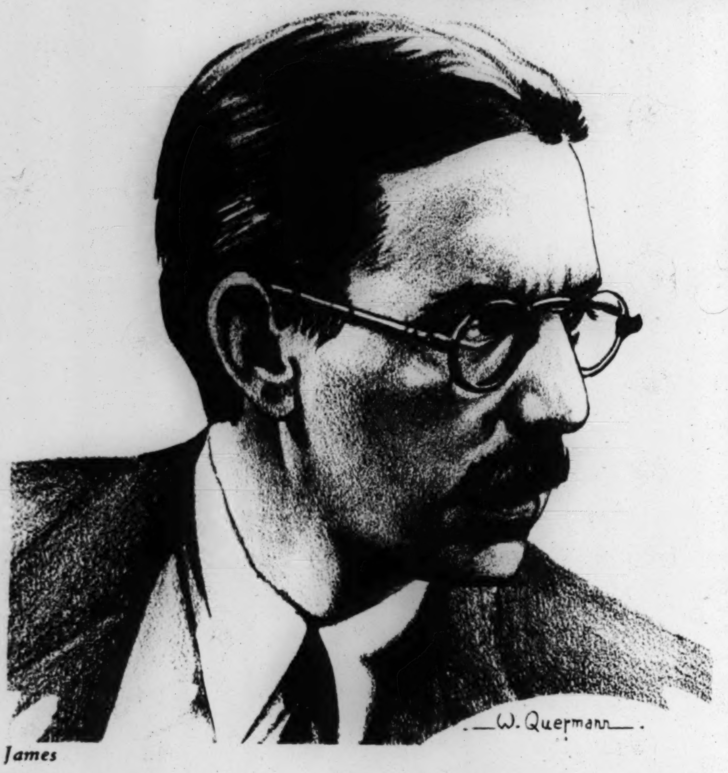
WILLIAM M. BRANDT
JAMES THURBER
ISABEL DODGE SLOANE

Portrayer of Doughy Men, Pestiferous Women, Inquisitive Penguins—He Is a First-Rank Humorist



James Thurber.

NEW YORK.

JAMES THURBER was regarded as an odd penny on the campus of Ohio State University. He was shy and hard to overtake and he wore clothing of an outlandish cut and had stringy hair that kept falling down over his eyes. Now, 20 years later, he is well-tailored, well-barbered and a first-rank American humorist. He is still shy and full of unusual complexes, such as the fear of objects falling out of office buildings and striking him on the head, but he is 39 and well paid and a splendid raconteur.

It is only in the past few years, after many wanderings, that Thurber has achieved fame as an artist and writer. Recently Paul Nash, the English artist and critic, wrote a learned essay for the London Daily News, in which he compared Thurber's pen and ink sketches to the work of Picasso and Matisse. This frightened Thurber so that he hid out in his country place until he thought all comment had died down.

To Thurber these eerily humorous drawings come as easily as geometrical figures to idle-minded business executives. He litters blotters, scratch pads and backs of envelopes with them endlessly, setting them down with a pen with never a change or erasure. If one takes more than 10 minutes he feels it is drudgery. In fact, if a fellow member of the New Yorker magazine staff had not rescued his idle sketches from his bulging wastebasket, they would have continued to be simply an expression of the psychoses that fly around like bats in Thurber's dank subconsciousness.

His men are doughy, boneless creatures who seem to wish they were somewhere else. Thurber's women are slatternly wretches, but do not seem to be aware of it. Always annoyed at the futility of their quest for romance, they delight in pestering their men and making them furtive. Once a friend complained to Thurber that his women lacked sex appeal. "Not to the Thurber men," he replied. Other characters, and queer ones, too, amble through his pictures—penguins that pop up in the parlor, seals that hang over the bedstead and pygmies among giant sunflowers.

Thurber loves to disguise his voice and call his friends on the telephone. He also has developed a phenomenal accuracy in throwing objects such as paper clips and electric light bulbs. He has a deep sympathy for bedraggled female dogs and furnishes a home for a dozen odd curs.

BORN in Columbus, Ohio, Thurber worked on a local newspaper and later as a reporter in New York. During the war he was code clerk in the American Embassy in Paris, and served later in the same capacity at the Peace Conference. His luggage, when he left for this mission, was a small overnight bag containing three socks and three sandwiches.

He is given to fits of melancholy, during which he covers every available piece of paper with the outpourings of his mad genius. He has published two books of humorous prose and one of cartoons.

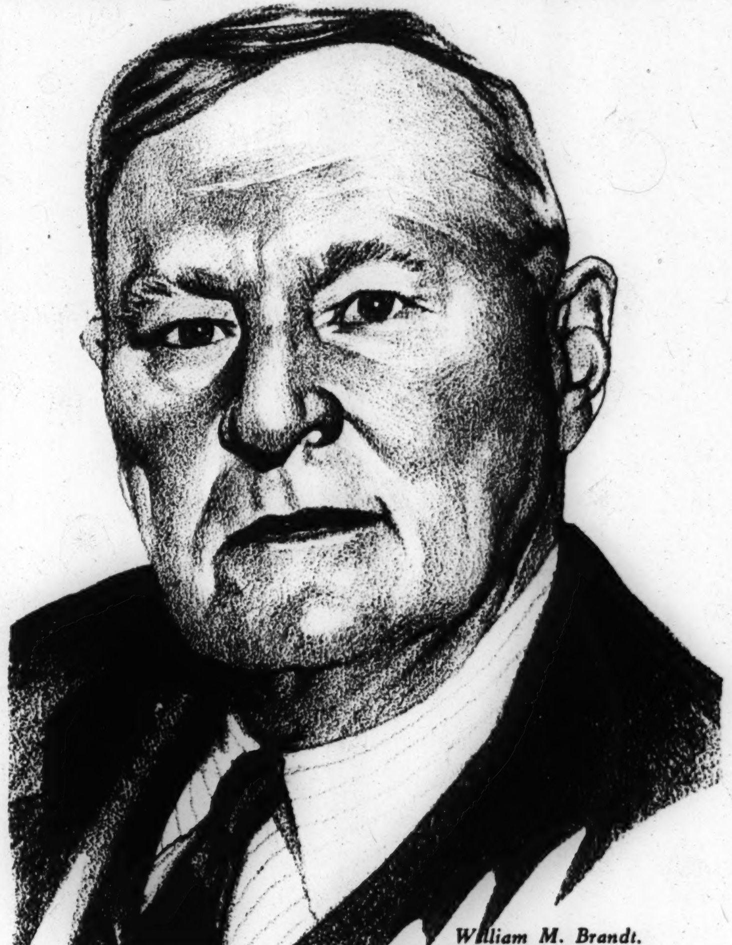
The Itinerant Cigar Maker Who Achieved Leadership Among St. Louis Workers



William M. Brandt.

A JUSTICE-LOVING man." The term best describes William Martin Brandt. Associate of the late Eugene V. Debs, follower and fellow craftsman of Samuel Gompers, prominent in the Socialist party and organized labor for more than 30 years, Brandt has spent the greater part of his adult life in working for the "other fellow." Struggling for better wages, better working conditions, a more comfortable living for labor's millions.

William Martin Brandt was born in Martinsburg, West Virginia, one of seven children. His father, David William Brandt, was of "Pennsylvania Dutch" stock. His mother was the daughter of Welch parents, whose ancestors had settled at Hardscrabble, a community near Hagerstown, Maryland.

David Brandt, a carpenter, was hard-pressed to support his family at his trade. When William was 11 years old he left school to become a "stripper" in a Hagerstown cigar factory. After serving his apprenticeship he "took to the road" a common practice among old-time cigar makers. His journeys took him west to Denver, north to Montreal and south to Florida.

Young Brandt followed this carefree life until 1893. Up to that time a job was usually to be had for the asking. The panic of '93 brought about a change. Those who had work held their jobs and there was small chance of the "boomer" cigar maker finding anything. For seven months during the panic Brandt could find no work, but, fortunately, cigar makers took care of the "boomers," and he received help.

Twice during his wandering, in '91 and in '92, Brandt visited St. Louis, finding temporary employment. In the autumn of 1893 he returned here and early the following year obtained work with a local cigar company. St. Louis became his home.

Brandt's affiliation with organized labor began in 1886, when he joined the Knights of Labor, a movement which strove to overcome some of the injustices labor suffered at that time. Two years later he became a member of the Cigar Makers' International Union, of which he is now a board member.

His first serious battle was in his own industry. For six years Brandt was a general representative, or "trouble shooter," for the international union. Evils in the industry included the "trucking system," the "tenement system" and the "coolie system."

IN THE first instance a cigar maker who earned $8 a week, on pay day received $5 cash and $3 worth of cigars, which he could smoke or sell, as his needs dictated. Also, itinerant workers were urged to room at boarding houses in which a saloon was run in connection, where their employer's cigars were on sale. The "tenement system" was the most harmful from the standpoint of public health, involving the making of cigars in the squalid tenements inhabited by workers in larger communities. The "coolie system" sprang up in San Francisco, where Chinese, working for a pittance, were employed in competition with white labor.

These evils were observed and reported by Brandt and other union representatives. The international union, by sponsoring remedial legislation, cleaned up the situation. Organized labor had won a good fight and the cigar makers enjoyed a period of good times until a new, and more relentless enemy, the machine, made its appearance.

Brandt became a Socialist in 1897, when the party was called Social Democrats. He has been a candidate for office "times too numerous to recall," he says. A delegate to national conventions of his party during the period 1908 to 1922 and secretary for Missouri Socialists during the same period, he has been a candidate for United States Senator, Governor, Mayor and lesser offices. The closest he ever came to election to office was in 1910, when he missed going to the old St. Louis House of Delegates by 13 votes. The Socialists contested that election and found, Brandt recalls, that in one precinct of the Ninth Ward, 20 more votes were cast in the fight for the seat in the House of Delegates than the total vote for the precinct. The Republican candidate was held to be the winner, however.

The biggest thrill Brandt ever got out of a political race, he relates, was in 1911, when, in a special election to fill a vacancy in the City Council (there being two houses in the city government at that time) he ran second to the Republican candidate, but polled 3000 more votes than did the Democratic stalwart.

Eugene Victor Debs was "a most lovable character," Brandt says. "It did not matter whether one agreed with his economic beliefs, he was the same lovable person to everyone and we who knew him intimately realized that we were following an inspired man."

As a member of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party in 1920, when Debs, then in prison for obstructing recruiting during the World War, was the Socialist choice for President, Brandt participated in a meeting with the candidate in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta. "Debs' influence made itself felt in that prison," Brandt recalls. "The Warden told us that, due to our party leader's power over the other prisoners, discipline had improved 50 per cent. That was probably one of the highest testimonials Mr. Debs ever received."

Brandt looks for the formation of a genuine labor party in the United States.

"The British Labor Party is a power in the affairs of the Empire," he says. "Organized labor in the United States should follow that example, and form its own party. If organization is necessary for the worker to obtain justice in industry, it is equally as necessary if he is to get a fair deal politically. I have only the highest praise, however, for President Roosevelt's intentions. He was our savior in a crisis."

BRANDT, naturally, is a firm believer in municipal ownership. "Municipalities operate successfully the non-profit making utilities, such as the water supply, but the electric and gas utilities, which make money, are in the hands of capitalists," he points out. "These necessities could just as well be brought to the people through municipal agencies."

Although his efforts in behalf of the Socialist movement have been unceasing, Brandt's greatest work has been for organized labor. A charter member of the Missouri State Federation of Labor, he has toiled literally day and night for his fellow workmen. William Martin Brandt is no spell-binding labor orator. His voice, like the man, is always under control, but he has been heard by hundreds of thousands of workers eager for advice.

Brandt's labors have increased with the passing years. When ill-health forced the retirement two years ago of sturdy Dave Kreyling, dean of St. Louis labor leaders, Brandt was appointed to Kreyling's place as secretary of the Central Trades and Labor Union. Under authority of the NRA, Brandt and his associates have organized 70 new unions in St. Louis since July, 1933. Brandt, personally, is bargainer for 22 of these new unions. The Central Trades and Labor Union today is an affiliation of 174 locals, with a total membership of 70,000 workers.

In addittion to his duties within the labor councils, Brandt is a member of the St. Louis Regional Labor Board, an NRA body, and of the Governor's Re-employment Council. At 66 he is in the thick of the fight.

Predicting Weather by a New Method

In the last few months Scott Field has become one of 25 stations where upper air observations are being made daily by airplane to assemble pressure, temperature and humidity data for the air mass method, and Forecaster Nunn says that the break-up of the siege of 100-degree temperatures in August was an excellent illustration of the interaction of air masses.

The method, developed in Norway, is based on the mapping of contrasting air currents—cold, dry, polar air, warmer, more humid air from the tropics—converging from many sources along great curves, and, like the confluence of rivers, frequently remaining separate along a fairly distinct boundary line for hundreds of miles of their joint course.

This boundary line may be a "cold front," if a river of polar air is moving down into a lane of tropical air, or a "warm front" if a warm current is flowing into a polar mass. Theoretically, the waves of high and low pressure, with which the "traditional" forecast method is concerned, may be eddies along these "fronts" between the contrasting air masses, just as eddies swirl down the border line of muddy Missouri water and clear Mississippi water where they flow together near St. Louis.

Warm air is lighter than cold, or a hot air balloon would never rise. So a warm air mass slides upward when it meets a cold mass, and, conversely, heavy, cold air flowing south from the pole into a warm air mass noses under it and sends the warm air up. In either case the result is a change of weather, with a probability of rain as the warm air cools aloft to a point where its moisture may condense and fall.

Last summer, as few St. Louisans have forgotten, the record hot spell broke for only a few days in late July and was going strong again by August 1, with temperatures ranging up to 108 until August 15. A blanket of tropical air, Forecaster Nunn explains, overlay a region of many states. There was no great general atmospheric movement to break the spell. Instead, many small masses of heavier polar air—showing on the weather map as slight high pressure areas—"some days made a dent in the obstinate northern line of the hot area, other days were overcome and dissipated, but finally, getting the 'underhand,' they lifted the fiery blanket off of Missouri and changed it into cooling rains."

LOCUST VALLEY, L. I.

SEVERAL years ago Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane found herself divorced, childless and restless. She traveled widely and she shot grouse like a sharpshooter. She golfed expertly and landed fish in a style even the guides had to admire. But an all-absorbing interest for her intense nature was lacking. Unlike most women in this predicament, Mrs. Sloane had a love for thoroughbred horses and an inheritance of $10,000,000 from the automobile fortune of her late father, John F. Dodge.

Combining the two with smart management, she plunged headlong into the career of a stable owner, a path that too frequently leads to the auction block. Before her divorce Mrs. Sloane and her husband, George Sloane, New York broker, had dabbled at racing, but now Mrs. Sloane went at it, full out, and in less than three years she has earned the title of the turf's First Lady. This year was her peak, with her Cavalcade winning the Kentucky Derby and so many other stake races that the experts compare him with Man o' War; with High Quest grabbing the Preakness and the Eastern Shore, and Okapi, Time Clock and the rest rolling up a total of well over $200,000 in purses.

EVEN these handsome earnings do not represent a profit, but no big stable owner expects that. The stable payroll alone for Mrs. Sloane's Brookmeade Stables runs around $250,000 a year and entry fees and forfeits for various races total impressively in the red ink. Then there is the expense of feeding, brushing and bedding her 82 horses, and this takes about $180,000 a year.

Mrs. Sloane's real success began in 1932, when she hired R. A. (Bob) Smith, veteran Belmont trainer, to supervise her collection of runners. There never has been more than an oral contract between them. Smith agreed to give 90 days' notice of intention to leave her employ and Mrs. Sloane can fire him on 15 seconds' notice. Smith first set about weeding her stables at Upperville, Virginia, and Columbia, South Carolina, of undesirables. Chief Executive, which had cost $30,000, was sold for $35, and a dozen others went for the price of the hide.

Then, with his employer's approval, Smith began buying horses. He paid $3500 for High Quest and the racer responded by winning $45,000 this year. Even smarter was his purchase for $1200 of Cavalcade, a colt sired in England of a long line of derby winners, foaled in New Jersey and raised in Kentucky. Cavalcade is valued today at $500,000 and insured for $200,000. His earnings for the current year have topped $100,000. Cavalcade would be among the biggest money winners in the history of the turf if he hadn't come in an era of pared purses.

But the turf's First Lady gets almost as much satisfaction from the performance of Dark Polish. She paid $5000 for him at auction. Dark Polish didn't turn into a turf aristocrat, but he did romp home at 112 to 1 at Hialeah Park one day. Mrs. Sloane joyfully squeezed a $10 across-the-board ticket, and so did Smith.

Trailed Their Man Half Across the Continent

There began a race against time.

The Texas Special must be stopped and searched before it reached St. Louis, or all might be in vain. Once lost in the crowds of the St. Louis station, Durkin might find it comparatively easy to escape.

Long distance telephone wires hummed between the agents in San Antonio and Federal operatives in St. Louis.

About 9:30 o'clock on the morning of January 20, 1926, a group of heavily armed men in civilian clothes arrived at the station at Webster Groves. The strangers stationed themselves along the railroad tracks and about the depot.

When the big express halted that morning the citizenry began to sit up and take notice. So did passengers on the train.

Travelers in the third car from the engine looked up in amazement as several grim-faced men walked briskly down the aisle to the end compartment, halted and drew pistols.

Sergeant Ising, former wrestler, threw his weight against the door and clamped a wristlock on the killer's right arm. Agent Dowd seized him around the waist, and together they hauled him out into the aisle.

"Durkin, we've got you," said the agent. "We've got you at last."

"You've made a mistake. I'm Valentine," protested the gunman, and he tried, quite ineffectually, to pull away.

"Valentine, hell," said the Federal man, and shoved him into a seat. "I'd know you in a million, Durkin."

In the stateroom was an 18-year-old schoolgirl from an Illinois village, Durkin's bride of six weeks. She has since divorced him.

On a table were a .44-caliber revolver, a .45-caliber pistol and a full cartridge belt, quite useless to a man held in the vise that Ising had clamped on the gunman.

"I would have shot it out with you if you'd given me a chance," he said. In four hours he had signed a confession and was on the way to Chicago. His ultimate destination was the penitentiary at Joliet. He escaped the chair by convincing a jury he mistook Agent Shanahan for a hijacker. If he serves out his sentence he will be 75 years old when he is released.

MORE SCENES FROM THE ANTARCTIC

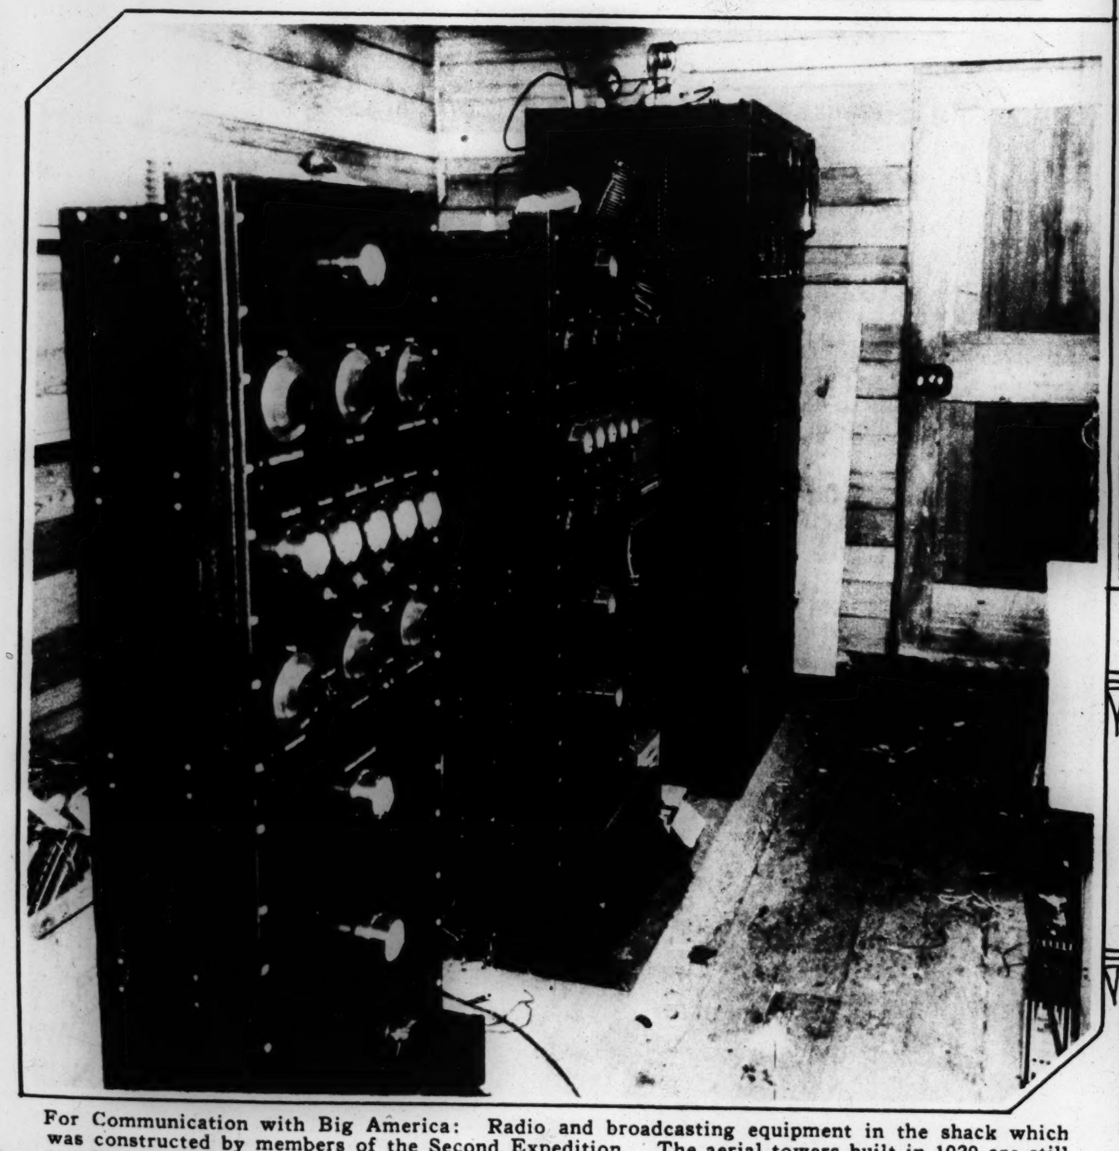
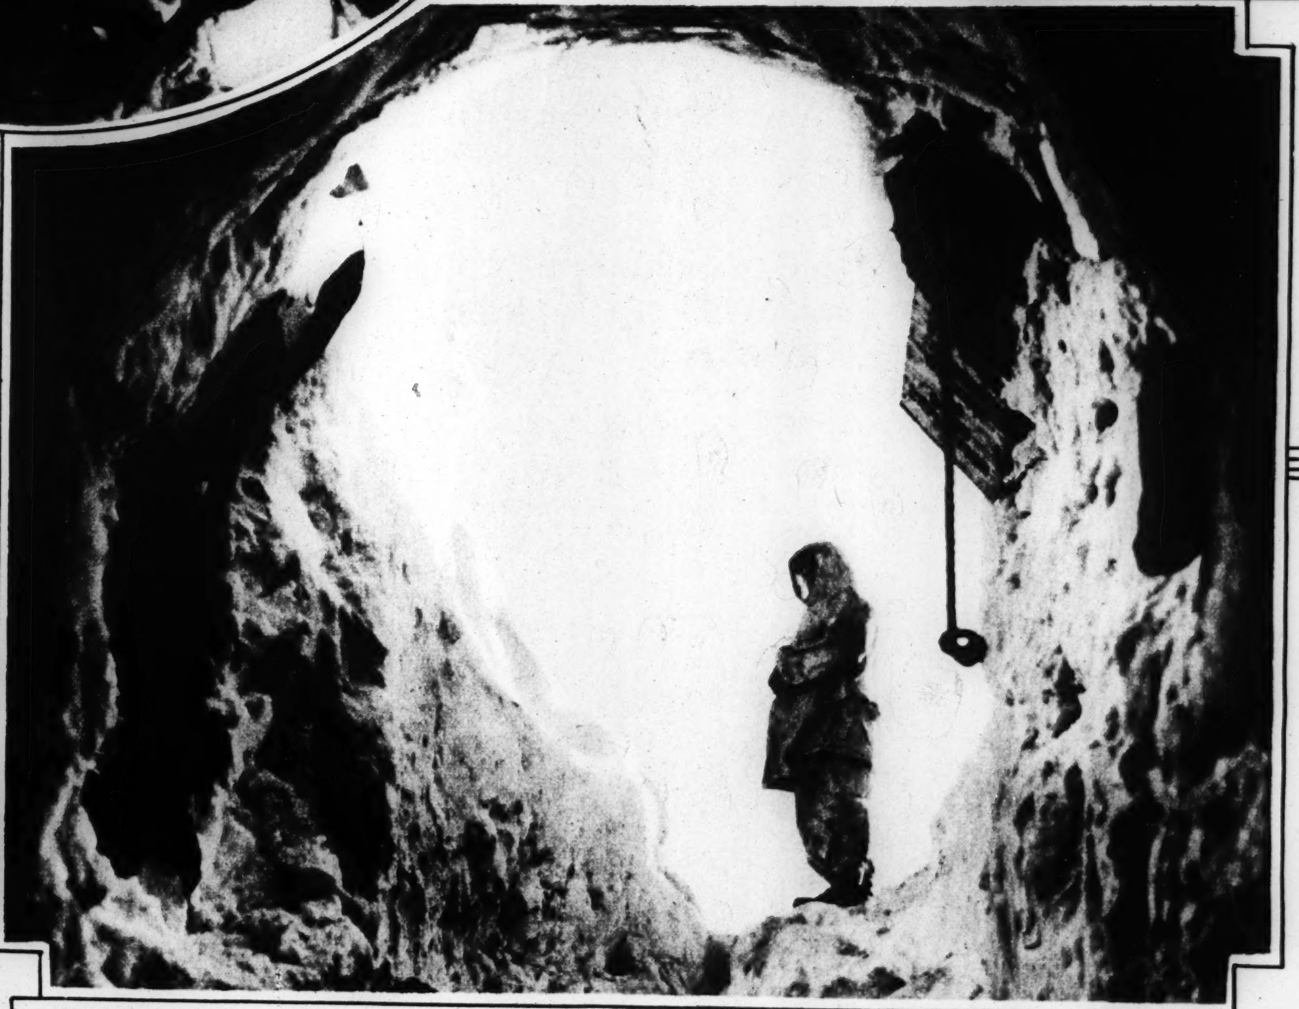
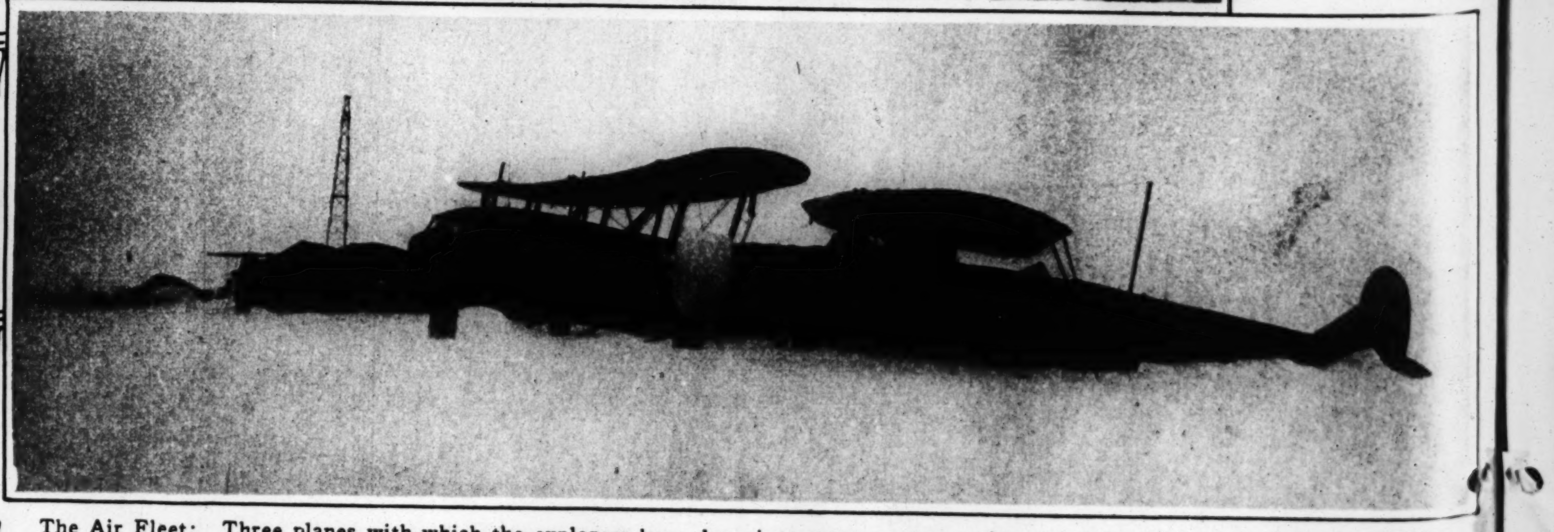
Copyright by the Second Byrd Antarctic Expedition



For Communication with Big America: Radio and broadcasting equipment in the shack which was constructed by members of the Second Expedition. The aerial towers built in 1929 are still standing and in use.



An Oil Mine: The entrance to the kitchen of the First Expedition, where surplus oil and gasoline had been stored for the use of the present party. The cans had been frozen into walls of solid ice.



The Air Fleet: Three planes with which the explorers have done important survey work, resting in the snow. A series of blizzards marked the end of the short Antarctic summer.

WELL JO, I HAD LUNCH TODAY WITH ONE OF THE BIGGEST VEGETARIANS IN TOWN, AND WHILE HE WAS EATING HIS STEAK HE SAID THAT A COW IS ONLY 16⅓% AS DUMB AS IT LOOKS. ALSO....
VEGETARIANS DON'T EAT STEAKS.
OH NO? WELL YOU SHOULD HAVE SEEN THE DOC TEAR INTO THAT ONE TODAY. HE WAS UP FOR THREE NIGHTS TREATING A SICK RACE HORSE AND...
YOU MEAN A VETERINARIAN, DON'T YOU?
VETERINARIAN? ARE YOU SURE? WHAT DID I CALL HIM? WELL ANYHOW, SINCE THERE'S SO MUCH KNOWLEDGE FLYING AROUND, MAYBE YOU CAN TELL ME WHERE A COW'S EARS ARE?
WHY, ON ITS HEAD, OF COURSE.
I MEAN ARE THEY BEFORE OR BEHIND THE HORNS? AND HERE'S ONE BIG DOLLAR THAT SAYS YOU DON'T KNOW. IS IT A BET?
WELL SISTER BUNGLE, YOU HAPPEN TO BE 100% WRONG. THE EARS ARE BEFORE THE HORNS.
YOU MEAN I SHOULD TAKE YOUR WORD ON A MATTER YOU KNOW NOTHING ABOUT? HOW UTTERLY DIPPY!
WELL IF YOU WON'T TAKE MY WORD HERE'S A CALENDAR WITH A PICTURE OF MULES ON IT. YOU CAN SEE FROM THE EARS ON THEM THAT..
MULES?
MY STARS! EVEN YOU SHOULD KNOW THAT MULES HAVE NO HORNS.
HELLO....SKIMMER'S DAIRY.? LET ME TALK TO THE SUPERINTENDANT OF COWS. WELL MAYBE YOU CAN TELL ME. LISTEN.. ARE A COW'S EARS BEFORE OR BEHIND THE HORNS? YES, IF YOU PLEASE....I'LL HOLD THE WIRE.
HE'S STEPPING OUTSIDE TO LOOK

HELEN, DARLING, PLEASE STOP FIDGETING AND EAT SOMETHING!
LOOK THERE—YOU'VE HARDLY TOUCHED YOUR SPINACH.
I DON'T WANT IT!
I TELL YOU, MOLLY, SHE'S SIMPLY SKIN AND BONES—AND NERVOUS AS A CAT! LOOK AT HER!
I SIMPLY CAN'T UNDERSTAND IT. I'VE TRIED EVERYTHING BUT STILL SHE JUST NIBBLES AT HER FOOD—AND FIDGETS WORSE THAN EVER.
NEXT DAY— An Accidental Meeting
HELLO MOLLY. I WANT YOU TO MEET MISS BROOKS—THE NEW 3RD GRADE TEACHER.
OH, SO YOU'RE HELEN'S TEACHER. I'M SO GLAD TO MEET YOU—SHE JUST TALKS ABOUT YOU ALL THE TIME.
...SHE'S REALLY A LOVELY CHILD, MRS. JACKSON. BUT LATELY SHE SEEMS SO NERVOUS AND HIGH-STRUNG SHE CAN HARDLY SIT STILL A MINUTE.
I'VE JUST WORRIED MYSELF SICK OVER IT, MISS BROOKS—AND SHE GETS THINNER EVERY DAY... I WISH I KNEW WHAT TO DO.
WELL—I'VE SEEN LOTS OF NERVOUS CHILDREN ALL THESE YEARS THAT I'VE BEEN TEACHING. AND I'VE SEEN SOME WONDERFUL THINGS HAPPEN TO THEM WHEN THEIR MOTHERS STARTED GIVING THEM OVALTINE.
OVALTINE? YOU MEAN THAT SWISS FOOD-DRINK YOU HEAR SO MUCH ABOUT THESE DAYS?
YES—AND IN NEW YORK THEY MADE SOME TESTS WITH 48 SCHOOL CHILDREN—AND FOUND THAT NERVOUSNESS DECREASED 25% IN SOME CASES IN ONLY 2 WEEKS TIME.. YOU REALLY OUGHT TO TRY IT.
WELL, I'M CERTAINLY GOING TO GET A CAN OF IT, RIGHT THIS MINUTE!
A CAN OF OVALTINE, PLEASE!
MM! IT'S WONDERFUL, MAMA! I COULD DRINK THIS ALL DAY!
WELL, YOU CAN HAVE ALL YOU WANT, HONEY, BECAUSE IT'S AS GOOD FOR YOU AS IT TASTES!
NEXT WEEK
SAY—WHAT'S COME OVER HELEN? SHE'S EATING LIKE A TROOPER. NO "FIDGETS" OR FUSSING AT ALL.
AND THAT'S HER SECOND HELPING OF CARROTS! I CAN HARDLY BELIEVE MY EYES.
LATER
LOOK AT THIS MOLLY! SHE'S GAINED 6 POUNDS IN JUST NO TIME AT ALL!
AND WHEN YOU THINK HOW THIN AND "SPINDLY" SHE'S ALWAYS BEEN—IT SEEMS ALMOST TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE!
STILL LATER
THAT'S IT, HELEN. TAKE YOUR REPORT CARD OVER AND SHOW IT TO YOUR AUNT CORA.
LOOK, AUNT CORA—I GOT THREE "EXCELLENTS" THIS MONTH!
DON'T GIVE THE CREDIT TO ME. THAT GOES TO MISS BROOKS—AND OVALTINE!

Mothers! Here's How Ovaltine Helps The Nervous Child

—And Often Adds A Pound A Week In Weight

OVALTINE is a pure food concentrate, approved by more than 20,000 doctors. It is highly valued because of the very noticeable increases in both weight and nerve poise, which so frequently occur, when Ovaltine is added to the regular daily fare.

Recent scientific tests conducted with 48 school children in New York showed a decrease in nervousness, in some cases, of 25% in 2 weeks when Ovaltine was added to the regular diet.

85% of all nervous, under-par children treated in these New York tests responded almost at once. In one case, nervousness—as measured by the Olson-University of Minnesota checking system—diminished as much as 18% in a single week.

While these results are of outstanding significance to mothers of nervous children, they are equally important to the mothers of underweight children, too. For child specialists have long observed that underweight and nervousness usually go hand in hand. Thus, when a child is given Ovaltine, he benefits 2 ways. For it acts to break up the "vicious circle" that nervousness and underweight always tend to create. And often, weight increases of a pound a week or more are reported when Ovaltine is added to normal diet.

Thousands of nervous people, men and women, take Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. Physicians also recommend it as a strengthening food-drink for nursing mothers, convalescents, and the aged; and also for sleeplessness when taken hot at bedtime.

So remarkable are the results accredited to Ovaltine that, during the World War, medical authorities selected it as a standard ration for invalid and nerve-shattered soldiers.

You simply mix Ovaltine with milk—either hot or cold—and children love it for its delicious taste. You can obtain Ovaltine at any drug or grocery store. Get a can of it today. (Note the special offer of the genuine Little Orphan Annie Mug for serving hot Ovaltine. It adds that "party touch" at mealtime that every child delights in.)

WHY, BILLY BROWN, YOU'VE BEEN FIGHTING AGAIN!
WELL, AUNT HELEN, TORCHY TODD SAID YOUR TEETH WERE DIRTY, AND THAT'S WHY YOU DIDN'T HAVE ANY FELLOWS. SO I SOCKED HIM!
WHY, THIS AD FOR COLGATE'S DENTAL CREAM SAYS ANYONE CAN HAVE SPARKLING TEETH WHEN COLGATE'S TWO CLEANSING ACTIONS HAVE REMOVED ALL THE 7 STAINS... I'LL TRY IT.
DON'T LET THE 7 STAINS HIDE YOUR LOVELY SMILE
SHE DID - AND AFTER USING JUST ONE TUBE
SOMEBODY ELSE THINKS SO TOO, BILLY.

It was no news to Helen that she wasn't popular like other girls. But she might never have guessed the reason if Torchy Todd's revelation hadn't opened her eyes. True enough—her smile wasn't attractive. But what could she do about it—with teeth she thought were "naturally dull"?

And there's where Helen was wrong. Teeth aren't "naturally dull"—they're merely stained—by everything we eat and drink and smoke. There are 7 kinds of stains, and unless all 7 are removed completely, they build up until our teeth become discolored.

Most toothpastes, having only one action, fail to remove all 7 stains. Two actions are needed—the two you get in Colgate's Dental Cream. First, a penetrating foam washes away many stains. Second, a gentle polishing action removes all others, and in addition, polishes teeth to a brilliant lustre.

YES—HELEN'S SMILE IS BEWITCHING NOW—

I SUPPOSE OTHER MEN HAVE TOLD YOU THIS—BUT YOU HAVE THE MOST WONDERFUL SMILE IN THE WORLD!

Colgate's can give you a brighter smile, too. At 20c for the large-size tube, it's the most economical of all good toothpastes. It also leaves your mouth refreshed, your breath sweet. Start using Colgate's—have whiter teeth, a brighter smile.

DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK
IF ONE TUBE OF COLGATE'S DOESN'T MAKE YOUR TEETH WHITER

If, after using one tube, you're not satisfied that Colgate's has made your teeth whiter, your smile brighter than any other toothpaste you've ever used . . . just send the empty tube to Colgate's, Jersey City, N. J., . . . and twice what you paid for the toothpaste, plus postage, will be returned to you.

If you prefer powder, Colgate's Dental Powder gives the same amazing results . . . sells at the same low prices.
